TOWNS AND VILLAGES ARE RUINED BY EARTHQUAKE

Death List Will Number About 100 and Another Hundred Are Injured as Result of Shocks in Southern Europe —Survivors Are Fleeing From Ruined Districts —Citizens Are Escaping from Toulon.

Marseilles, June 14.—From 75 to 100 dead and 100 injured is the estimated total casualties as the result of the earthquake which devastated several towns and villages in the southernmost part of France, particularly in the departments of Herault and Bouches du Rhone, Friday night.

The villages of Saint Cannat and Rognes were completely demolished by the earthquake and Lambesc, 12 miles from Aix, suffered heavily. A number of the wounded were imprisoned in the ruins and soldier worked desperately to rescue them.

Survivors are sleeping in tents and the streets are impassable. In many places they have been torn up and are encumbered with rocks. House, public buildings and churches were crumbled to pieces.

The victims at Saint Cannot and Rognes were horribly mutilated. There were evidences that several of the victims had lived for hours imprisoned by the debris before they died. At Rognes a family of four were buried. Their cries could be heard throughout the night, but all were dead in the morning when a rescuing party reached them. At Saint Cannat an old man and his son were watching a billiard game. They were killed. The players escaped.

The historic village of Vernegues was wrecked, but no one was killed. The monetary loss is heavy.

At Toulon—Fearing new shocks last night a large number of residents left the city and camped out in the country. The mayor opened the schoolhouse for those walking the streets. The earthquake damaged the arsenal and several ships were almost driven ashore.

At Madrid—Light earth shocks occurred Saturday morning at Barcelona and Badalon, six miles northeast of Barcelona.

SHAMEFUL CONDITIONS

Reported at Methodist Conference at Toronto --- Wages of Girls Too Low

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 14.—At this morning's session of the Toronto Methodist conference a number of the young men and the older ministers engaged in mission work in Toronto told terrible stories of the manner in which young women, mostly from the country districts were forced into lives of shame because the wages they received at the places of employment usually open to them were not sufficient to keep them from dying from actual want.

One instance was cited of a Methodist minister's daughter who had been so forced to leave the straight road, and other equally distressing cases were vouched for. No definite action was taken.

JOURNALISTS SEE REVIEW

Delegates See the Most Powerful Fleet Ever Assembled— Eighteen Miles of Warships

London, June 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Imperial Conference delegates were profoundly impressed by their inspection Saturday of the home fleet at Spithead.

The 18 miles of warships, included four Dreadnoughts and seven Invincibles, and constituted the most powerful fleet ever assembled for review.

Sir John Fisher, First Lord of the Admiralty, accompanied the delegates. On the arrival of the Victoria they gave him a great ovation and escorted him to his car, singing "For he's a jolly good fellow."

All the delegates admit the fleet was a wonderful object lesson to them of the Empire's naval might.

Among the 24 battleships were seven Dreadnoughts, while supporting these lines of capital ships lay 24 cruisers, thirteen scouts and auxiliaries, 48 torpedo-boat destroyers and 35 submarines. Had they been placed end to end they would have formed a double line 18 miles long.

All the vessels were dressed with thousands of flags, and with the crews on deck manning ship and the bands playing, the scene was full of animation and color.

A salute from Nelson's old flagship, the Victory, announced the arrival of the Admiralty yachts, bearing the lords of the Admiralty and the newspaper guests. After traversing the line of the fleet, the visitors went on board the Dreadnought and witnessed a sham attack of submarines and destroyers on the battleship. The sea front of Portsmouth was black with masses of spectators and the Roadstead was filled with steamers thronged with sightseers from all parts of the kingdom.

DEVELOPED SMALLPOX IN THE HOSPITAL

Toronto, June 14.—To develop smallpox while in the Isolation Hospital, whither she had gone because she objected to staying alone at home while her husband was confined in the Swiss Cottage with the disease, is the experience of Mrs. McCluskey, of Franklin avenue.

On May 27 her husband, Albert McCluskey, was removed to the smallpox hospital. Mrs. McCluskey prevailed upon the authorities to allow her to occupy a room in the Isolation Hospital. Chief Inspector Wilson of the Medical Health Department, says that Mrs. McCluskey did not show symptoms of the malady at that time, and that she was not allowed to leave her room in the hospital. After two weeks she exhibited unmistakable evidence of the disease, and she has now joined her husband in the Swiss Cottage.

IRREGULARITY IN WATERLOO

Conservatives Enter Protest Against the Registration Board —May be No Candidate

Berlin, June 14.—Notwithstanding that people generally have been authentic regarding the approaching bye-election, interest may be shown as a result of a protest entered Saturday afternoon against the personnel of the board of registration, on the grounds that insufficient notice of the same was given

The facts are that E. J. Beaumont, clerk of the county court, being unable to act, owing to the sitting of court, Country Clerk Bowman was appointed to act in his stead. The writ was issued at Ottawa on June 2, and wak delivered here in person on June 7, by J. G. Foley, clerk of the crown in chancery at Ottawa, who came here to attend a convention. Registration began on June 9.

The authorities claim to have acted within the requirements of the act, but the protest is entered on the grounds that the procedure was irregular and invalid.

There is no indications, however, that the Conservatives will place a candidate in the field against Hon. Mackenzie King. Liberals claim that the action taken is simply in order to make political capital.

The registration court sat three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, and the number who registered was less than 50. The Conservative executive have issued a statement complaining that the short notice given did not give them time to organize for registration.

SOON MENDED, SAYS GRAHAM

Ottawa, June 14.—"It will be all right in a short time."

This was the reply of Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways, when asked last night as to the result of his inspection of the damaged "Soo" canal.

Hon. Mr. Graham had little to say about his visit to the Soo. He remarked that the matter was one to be investigated on the other side of the boundary, as the Walker, which wrought the havoc, is owned by a U. S. firm. He didn't care to discuss the damage done or the responsibility therefor.

It is understood although Mr. Graham didn't say so definitely, that he will report to the Department of Justice.

RESCUE EFFECTED BY THE WIRELESS

Prinzess Irene Receives Call for Help When 180 Miles Away from Cunarder in Distress and Goes at Once to Her Assistance—Passengers Transported Without Any Accident—Big Liner is a Total Wreck.

Punta Delgada, Azores, June 14.—Wireless telegraphy played a prominent part in the saving of the crew and passengers of the Cunard line steamer Slavonia, which is a total wreck two miles southwest of Flores Island.

The steamer Prinzess Irene was 180 miles away when the thrilling call "C.Q.D." was picked up.

It was shortly before midnight of Wednesday, June 9, that the wireless distress signal was received on board the Prinzess Irene. The operator answered, and immediately got a message in reply stating the Slavonia was ashore, and where and asking the Prinzess Irene to come to her assistance.

Her course was at once changed and she went ahead at full speed 15 knots an hour, to the designated location, two miles southwest of Flores Island.

The Prinzess Irene arrived alongside the Slavonia on Thursday afternoon. It was arranged that she should take on board the cabin passengers of the Cunard liner and work was at once begun. All Thursday night was taken up with the transfer, and the 110 passengers, women and children, were on board by daylight. The transfer was made without a single accident and on Friday morning early the Prinzess Irene left the Slavonia for Gibraltar.

In the meantime the wireless calls for help sent out by the Slavonia had been heard by the Hamburg-American liner Batavia, which hastened to the scene. The intermediate and steerage passengers of the Slavonia were transferred to the Batavia also without accident.

There remained on board the Slavonia only the members of her crew, but according to the latest intelligence received here the entire ship's company left the wreck and went ashore at Velas, on the Island of Flores, some time on Friday morning.

The Slavonia was full of water and she was a total wreck.

Flores Island, where the Slavonia is grounded, is the most westerly of the Azores group. Many dangerous reefs surround the island, which is of volcanic origin, and a great reef extends seaward to the southwest.

JAP CONSPIRACY IS DISCOVERED

Honolulu, June 14.—Seventeen Japanese leaders in the strike of Japanese labor plantations, of whom about 8,000 are out, were indicted by the grand jury on charges of having conspired to incite disorders in the Hawaiian Islands.

This action followed disclosures yesterday, when an official search of the offices of the "Higher Wage Association" and the Japanese newspaper Jiji, revealed incendiary letters, reports and other correspondence tending to show that a conspiracy was in prospective formation among certain Japanese to wrest control of the island affairs from the whites.

Among the correspondence between strikers and some of their leaders seized is the following:

"The Japanese strikers are facing the planters with enough powder, lead and food to make victory sure in the end. Now is the time to exalt the name of young nation, and tine with blood the flag of the rising sun. Against those who oppose our action we must be ready, with hafmer of iron and rain of blood to make the obstinate and blind planters reflect."

EDITOR FOURNIER SENT TO JAIL

Montreal, June 14.—Jules Fournier, editor of Le Nationaliste, has been sent to prison for three months for what the Quebec authorities call contempt of court, and of course The Nationaliste refers at length to-day to what it calls a most unjust sentence.

Following Fournier's advocate, N. K. Laflamme, The Nationaliste reminds its readers of the speeches delivered by Sir Louis Davis and Sir Wilfrid Laurier during the debate on the motion censuring the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for having sent the present Senator Ellis to the Fredericton jail for commenting severely upon a case pending, whereas Fournier's fault was commenting a case that had already been adjudged. The Nationaliste also reminds its readers that amongst those who voted for the Davis' resolution was Sir Francis Langlier, who was the presiding judge Saturday afternoon.

Natal Joins Union.

Durban, Natal, June 14.—A referendum held to decide whether or not Natal should join the South African Union, has resulted in favor of the juncture by a vote of 11,121 to 3,701. This assures the complete federation of the South African colonies, the Transvaal, Cape Colony, the Orange River State and Natal.

Practically the entire population of Natal is British and the disinclination of a considerable element to enter the union was caused by fear that the confederation would be dominated by the Dutch.

Five Attempts to Burn Hotel.

Saskatoon, Sask., June 14.—Five different fires broke out at different times in the Western Hotel on Saturday. Without question these were the deliberate work of a firebug. Not much damage was done. An employe now under dismissal, is suspected. The plan adopted by the incendiary was to place lighted paper beneath the bed or the window curtain.

Sold Boy an Airgun.

St. Catharines, June 14.—Mrs. Barbara Doty, wife of the proprietor of a store here, was fined $25 by Magistrate Campbell, on being convicted of selling an airgun to a nine-year-old boy. The criminal code makes it an offence for anyone to sell one of these dangerous weapons to a boy under 16 years.

Fatal Building Collapse.

Detroit, June 14.—Traffic Manager William C. Hollar of the Peninsular Stove Co., was killed and four other men were injured, one of them fatally, when a section of the fifth floor of the storage warehouse of the plant suddenly collapsed and crashed down through to the ground floor.

A warship will be brought from Great Britain to protect the British Columbia fisheries.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The Trades and Labor Council at Guelph want the fire brigade reorganized.

It is reported in London that another babe is expected soon in the Spanish royal family.

Lucien Reed, a farmer near Crobyville, died suddenly after assisting in the evening milking, aged 60.

The body of Samuel Moran, who disappeared from Bancroft in April, was found on Saturday in Dutch Creek.

The annual convention of the Provincial Retail Merchants' Association will be held in Brockville Wednesday and Thursday.

James H. Williams, of Virden, Man., whose little girl died under Christian Science treatment, has been arrested for alleged neglect.

Mrs. Wm. Jacobs, an elderly woman who lived alone in her residence on the front road, one mile east of Brockville, was found dead seated in a chair.

When the Royal Colonial Institute expressed a wish to entertain the imperial press delegates they were told that the program was already complete.

On Friday afternoon the lifeless body of Mrs. Henry La Roche was found in an outbuilding on the 10th concession of Carden, near Lindsay. The coroner decided it was a case of suicide while temporarily deranged

BERLIN BOY IS DROWNED

Berlin, June 14.—On Saturday afternoon Harry Huehnergard, the 14-year-old son of J. W. Huehnergard, instructor of an orchestra, was drowned in the Grand River at Riverside Park in Bridgeport. About 3 o'clock the lad, who was in a boat with three other boys, dived into the river. He was not missed until about two hours after, when his clothes were found still lying on the bank. His companions then became alarmed and some employes of the Berlin Piano Co., who were picnicking at the park, commenced to search for him and the body was found at the bottom of the river at a depth of 12 feet, almost below where he had jumped in. The water was extremely cold five or six feet below the surface, and it is believed young Huehnergard took cramps and was unable to rise.

Town Nearly Burned.

Joggins, N.S., June 14.—Twenty-five thousand dollars' damage was caused by a fire which was discovered in the town hall here yesterday afternoon. The flames spread to the residences of John Hennessey and Chas. Melanson. Change in the wind was all that saved the town from destruction, as the firemen were seriously handicapped from the lack of water and apparatus.

KINGSTON HAS EVANGELISTS

Kingston, June 14.—An excursion of the Young Men's Fellowship arrived Saturday night with 500 people from Toronto. Members of the City Council and clergy met the visitors at the depot. At Market Square, Ald. McCann read an address of welcome. W. Robinson, Toronto, an old Kingston boy, and president of the Fellowship, replied. Afterwards the Victoria-Alexander choir sang the Glory song. Services in the churches yesterday were conducted by the members of the Fellowship, as also three large mass meetings, two in the city hall and one in Sydenham street church. A trip among the Thousand Islands is arranged for Monday.

HUGE REVIEW OF BRITISH WAR FLEET BEING ARRANGED

Manoeuvres in Which Three Hundred and Fifty Vessels Will Participate Are Arranged to Start on Thursday of This Week Off the Coast of Scotland—Mediterranean Fleet to Be Brought Home.

London, June 14.—On June 17 a great mobilization of the British fleet for the grand manoeuvres will take place, all the nucleus crew ships being brought up to their complement and placed on a war footing.

In order to give them an opportunity of participating in the training the three great bodies of naval reserves have been invited to volunteer for service on this occasion. But for good and sufficient reasons it is not anticipated that there will be any large response, and it has been officially announced that all the ships can be officered and manned from the active service, without the reservists. The Royal Naval Reserve men, mostly merchant seamen, can only be expected to find time between the trips of their vessels, and few of them can spare a month.

The Mediterranean fleet has been specially summoned home for these great manoeuvres, in which altogether not fewer than three hundred and fifty ships will take part. The scene of the operations will, it is believed, be somewhere off the northwest coast of Scotland, but no official pronouncement has been made on this subject. It is not known either, what strategic scheme of operations has been decided upon, but it is presumed that Sir William May, the commander-in-chief of the home fleet, will command on one side, and that Sir Assheton Curzon-Howe, commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean fleet, will command on the other.

At the conclusion of the navy manoeuvres the main fleet will proceed to the Nore, and the ships will take up their anchorage in the river on Monday, July 19. The exact distribution of the ships has not yet been decided upon between the port of London authorities and the Admiralty, but provisionally the arrangement is as follows:

From the Houses of Parliament at Westminster to London Bridge, there will be two lines of torpedo boats and submarines; from London Bridge the lines will be continued by destroyers and gunboats, scouts and smaller cruisers as far as Greenwich and Blackwall. In the reaches to Northfleet will lie the heavier cruisers, including those of the Dreadnought class, the Indomitable, the Inflexible and the Invincible, near Greenhithe.

Between Tilbury and Gravesend the line of battle ships begins, extending down through the Lower Hope reach, past Thames Haven and Canvey Island, to Southend, where, off the pier, the Dreadnought battleships will be clustered, and continuing to the anchorage at the Nore. Altogether, near upon one hundred and fifty vessels, in columns covering between forty and fifty miles of river and water space.

Only on two or three previous occasions have there been naval reviews at the water gate of the capital of the British Empire, but never before has there been seen such a unique display of naval might in such circumstances as the citizens of London and the dwellers of the Thames will have at their doors on Tuesday, July 20.

Sir George Wyatt Truscott is responsible for the suggestion that the Admiralty should bring the fleet into the Thames. In his position as lord mayor he called upon Sir John Fisher and proposed the idea, which the First Sea Lord accepted with alacrity. With his officers of state, the sheriffs and common councilmen, the lord mayor, with the board of admiralty, will make a civic progress down the river on July 20, and it will be strange indeed if the populace does not turn out in thousands to welcome and express enthusiastic appreciation of the bluejackets.

It is a curious circumstance that the lord mayor of London has no flag which it will be possible for the fleet to salute, but the salutes can be given to the Admiralty flag in accordance with historic custom, the salute being taken by the chief magistrate of London. When the lord mayor arrives at Southend, which is only a little more than thirty miles from the metropolis, and therefore easily accessible by rail and river, he will go on board the Dreadnought and there witness a naval exhibition by the destroyers and submarines.

On Wednesday, July 21, the city will entertain upward of a thousand bluejackets and marines, the naval brigade with their guns marching through the streets of London. This will be not the least interesting part of the program, for, although thousands of people will doubtless travel to Southend and Sheerness to see the Dreadnoughts, many thousands more will turn out in the gaily decorated thoroughfares to watch the march of the seamen to the Guildhall. Then on the following day there is to be an entertainment for the officers, and it has been further suggested that if the fleet remains in the Thames over Sunday the seamen may attend the services at the principal places of worship in the city.

DAMAGE CAUSED BY THE ELECTRIC STORM LAST NIGHT

Sub-Station of Canadian General Electric Company Was Struck—Fire Alarm Boxes Put Out of Commission —Damage Was Not Extensive.

During the electrical storm of last night the sub-station of the Canadian General Electric Company was struck and a number of wires were burned out and damage was caused to several transformers. The nightwatchman discovered the blaze and immediately blew the whistle. The alarm was heard at the fire station by several of the firemen who were at one time employed at the Electrical Works. Understanding what the trouble was, the brigade made ready for a trip, and as this was accomplished the alarm was sent in from fire box 17. The trip was made in fast time. On arriving at the scene of the fire the firemen were helped considerably by the presence of Mr. E. G. Patterson and several employees, and the blaze was soon put out. Chief Howard estimates the loss at $150, but in a later report Mr. E. G. Patterson places the damage at nearly $200.

Eight fire alarm boxes were put out of commission during the storm, and as a result Chief Howard was busily engaged during the night repairing them, but early this morning the service was in working order again.

A telegraph pole caught fire shortly after the firemen returned from the first blaze, but the matter was soon attended to.

A NEW ILLUMINANT

A new system of illumination has been recently introduced in Germany under the name of "blau (blue) gas."

"The gas is delivered in liquid form in such shape that it may be used in closed rooms in hanging burners giving from 50 to 1,000 candle-power. To use the gas all that is necessary is to pour the liquid from the steel cylinders, in which it is delivered, into the gasometer. This is almost as convenient as having one's own gasplant, for one can protect himself against accidents at the factory or delays in transit by always having on hand several filled cylinders. A cylinder contains 22 pounds of the gas, and costs about $2.86. This quantity will supply a 50-candle-power burner for 480 hours, so that this illuminant appears to be cheaper than petroleum. This blue gas can, of course, be used for heating and cooking as well as for forging, hardening, and tempering, and other industrial process. It is a hydrocarbon compound, free from carbonmonoxid, and is not poisonous; its heating effect is 3 1-2 times that of ordinary coal-gas. The gas is burned at a pressure of about 1 inch of mercury, or 13.6 inches of water at the burner. Almost any apparatus that is arranged to burn ordinary coal-gas or acetylene gas can be altered without much difficulty to burn this; and in such cases all that is necessary is to make the connection between the cylinder and the house pipes through a reducing-valve. As regards its explosibility that of acetylene-gas when mixed with air is between 3 and 40 per cent. (a range of 47 per cent.) and that of ordinary coal gas is between 6 1-3 and 19 1-3 per cent. (a range of 13 per cent), that of blue gas is only between 4 and 8 per cent. (a range of 4 per cent.) No special permission from the authorities or the insurance companies is necessary for its use." ## A SUGGESTION

At the present time Great Britain and France are in close alliance. The future is equally ominous in a military way for both. Germany is the ogre of destiny which dominates the European situation. The birth-rate in France barely equals the death-rate. In Britain it is 5 to 3. Why not ship British emigrants across the channel to well-tilled French peasant-holdings? This would strengthen the bonds of the alliance and the influence of the alliance itself. It is a pity to see France yielding to the decree of a remorseless fate. Her doom seems to have been sealed. There never was a greater people in the history of the world than the French. Their intellectual acuteness surpasses that of almost any other race. In philosophy, both natural and speculative, in science, mathematical and natural, and in literature they have been in the very forefront of the world. Strangely enough, though fiercely impulsive, they are superbly logical. No language equals the French for clearness and precision of expression. In ten years ten millions could be added to the population of France and thus the balance of power in Europe could be restored and maintained and just so much added to the [illegible] politanising of the world.

OF INTEREST

Home Life in the Australain Bush

I was talking once to Miss Marie Corelli at her charming house in Stratford-on-Avon. She had just declared to me that no writer had ever made her see Australia. "No, I will tell you how I see it," she said vivaciously. Throwing herself into the subject with extraordinary warmth and enthusiasm she half closed her eyes and showed me off a vivid picture of the far-off continent she had never seen. When she had finished she opened those blue eyes of hers wide. She looked at me.

"Well," she said.

"Splendid," I replied. "You have only left out one thing—the Bush." She looked surprised.

"What Bush," she asked.

What Bush! The question struck me strangely. I have never forgotten it. Apart from the fascination of seeing Miss Corelli's mind at work, on a picture of an unknown land—and my own land too—I have always remembered that conversation and those words of hers. "What Bush." And I have understood that the term must sound almost silly to English ears and quite ambiguous.

What is the Bush. What does it mean exactly. It means simply the vast virgin forest that covers Australia from end to end, that dies away sometimes for hundreds of miles, then is met with again for hundreds more, that has one distinctive tree—the gum tree. No oaks, no elms, no beeches, larches, planes, poplars, cypresses. Gum trees, always gum-trees. This great forest is exempt from the touch of autumn and winter—the trees never shed their leaves. Spring, summer, autumn, winter, they stand in their grey greenness, with a colouring as soft and gentle as the olive groves.

Life in the Bush implies life on a station, or a selection or else in a Bush township built far from the ten or twelve large cities of Australia. As a rule the "Bushies" are well read and know a good deal. There are exceptions of course. An old Bushman was greeted by his wife one morning with the news, "Gladstone is dead." He looked at her a minute. Then he shook his head. "Gladstone, Gladstone, No, I can't say I knew him. But he'd know me."

Bush girls are wonderfully deft and domesticated. There is nothing they can not do. They can scrub, iron, wash, cook, harness a horse, milk a cow or kill a fowl. They play the piano with a wonderful touch that a Slav might envy, a velvet, passionate touch. They can "do up" shirts and will wash and iron a frilly muslin frock in no time, then wear it with a charming grace. They passionately love books, love to steal away in solitude and lie on the grass with a novel or a book of poems. It may be quite safely said that no people in the world love poetry so much as the people in the Australian Bush.

There is one defect in these people of the Bush. Their accent is atrocious. They offer you "cyke" and "gripes." They drawl their vowels, and speak slowly and not well. Why this hideous Cockney accent should have taken possession of Australia is hard to say. But its growth is probably to be accounted for by the climate. The endless summer makes drawling so much easier than crisp speech. Be that as it may, one feels a little sorry when a charming fair-haired Bush girl, in the daintiest of muslin gowns with a delightful smile and deep, sweet eyes, asks you how you liked the Bong-bong horse races yesterday and if you are going to the June dance tonight. And when with this same Cockney twang, she talks to you of Chopin and Beethoven and Tschaikovsky, and Shelley and Keats and Swinburne and its bright and enthusiastic and clever, the twang sounds uglier than ever. It seems so at variance with that charming personality that intelligent mind that love of beauty, poetry, music.

Naturally there is little sham about life in the Bush. Everything is deadly real. Many superfluous conventions that flourish in the old worlds are unknown here. Servants date to call you ma'm. "No, Mrs. Brown! Yes, Mrs. Brown! Mrs. Brown, here's Mrs. Jones," suits their democratic hearts much better.

People arrive in a buggy or on horseback whom no one has ever seen before. They are welcomed and made at home instantly. They may, after a bit, mention the name of someone they know who knows these people, they have just come to, but, on the other hand, they may not. Simple mannered, kind-hearted, marvellously generous are the people in the Bush. Underneath they are subtle as Tuscans. They are curiously clever. They are melancholy in a happy kind of way. The irony of a young country is to be noticed in the things they laugh at.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Among the guests at an out-west party was a newly married English lady. When this lady arrived she took off a scarf of old lace and laid it on the drawers in her hostess's bedroom. Later on she saw the hostess dancing gaily in a scarf exactly like hers. Still later, when about to leave, she found her own scarf gone! In great dismay she told her husband, an Australian. He laughed and immediately informed one of the daughters of the house. Peals of laughter burst forth on all sides when it was discovered that "Mother" had put on Mrs. Allan's scarf, thinking, with a delightful vagueness, that it belonged to one of her own daughters. She had seen it there, draped it about her shoulders without a word to anyone, and had worn it contentedly all the evening in the face of its real owner, and all the while the girls were wondering where "Mother" had got that scarf from! The incident was taken as a great joke, whereas Mrs. Allan had expected dismay and confusion.

Steele Rudd gives this delightful silhoutte in one of his Australian books, the best stories ever written about the Bush.

"Hardly a day passed but what Dave made several trips to our place in quest of something or other. If it wasn't meat, or a jug of milk, or the loan of a dish for Lily to bake something in that he came for, it would be a few potatoes, or a clothes prop, or the axe to cut a bit of wood with, or even Bill's bridle, or Joe's saddle, until there was scarcely anything to be found at our place at all. Often Lily would require a few little things for the house and she'd come along herself and borrow them for mother.

"Frequently it was a needle she would require—the one she had 'was broke'—or perhaps it would be a bit of black cotton to patch Dave's dark trousers with—she always had a good supply of white cotton. Sometimes she had two reels of it, ours and her own. And Dave was always coming for water. When he wasn't coming for a bucket of water he was marching off with one. Rarely did we ever sit down to meals without hearing someone at the tap. And we always knew it was Dave putting a bucket of water. Now and again Lily would give Dave a spell at pumping water, and come herself with a small new billy-can. But she only came on washing days. She washed on the same day that Mother and Sarah did, but never at the same hour. She always started later. She used to have to wait till they had finished with the tub."

But let not the English reader believe that this picture stands for poverty. "Dad" makes ninety pounds a month for milk, five hundred in the year for wheat, five hundred for bullocks, sixty or eighty for pigs, to say nothing of his sale of chaff and the thousands of acres he owns. Yet Mother and Sarah do their own washing.

The great trouble in the Bush is the servant question. Hard as it is to get servants in Australian cities, it is far more difficult to find them for the Bush. But girls themselves stay and work at home, where there is always much to do. High wages are paid. But thousands of Bush homes are run without any other domestic servants than the cook and the lady-help. The latter is an institution. She is treated exactly like one of the family. So is the governness. As for a hospital nurse, she has a social position all her own in Australia. It's quite pretty the way they tell you in the Bush. "My cousin's a nurse!" just as they say in London, "My cousin's a duchess!"

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

All this time I had been using my eyes. There was not much to see, but what there was was romantically interesting. Aside from the furnace and what was going on there, there was little else but a sleeping tent, a cooking tent and the small one I had come on first, which without the least doubt contained the sick man. This last tent was of a peculiar construction and showed the primitive nature of everything at this height. It consisted simply of a cloth thrown over a thing like a trapeze. This cloth did not even come to the ground on either side, but stopped short a foot or so from the flat mound of adobe which serves as a base or floor for hut or tent in New Mexico. The rear of this simple tent abutted on the mountain side. The opening was toward the valley. I felt an intense desire to look into this opening—so intense that I thought I would venture on an attempt to gratify it. Scrutinizing the resolute face of the man before me and flattering myself that I detected signs of humor underlying his professional bruskness, I asked, somewhat mournfully, if he would let me go away without so much as a glance at the man I had come so far to see. "A glimpse would satisfy me now," I assured him as the hint of a twinkle flashed in his eye. "Surely there will be no harm in that. I'll take it instead of supper."

He smiled, but not encouragingly, and I was feeling very despondent indeed when the canvas on which our eyes were fixed suddenly shook, and the calm figure of a woman stepped out before us, clad in the simplest garb, but showing in every line of face and form a character of mingled kindness and shrewdness. She was evidently on the lookout for the doctor, for she made a sign as she saw him and returned instantly into the tent.

"Mr. Fairbrother has just fallen asleep," he explained. "It isn't discipline and I shall have to apologize to Miss Serra, but if you will promise not to speak nor make the least disturbance I will let you take the one peep you prefer to supper."

"I promise," said I.

Leading the way to the opening, he whispered a word to the nurse, then motioned me to look in. The sight was a simple one, but to me very impressive. The owner of palaces, a man to whom millions were as thousands to such poor devils as myself, lay on an improvised bed of evergreens, wrapped in a horse blanket and with nothing better than another of these rolled up under his head. At his side sat his nurse on what looked like the uneven stump of a tree. Close to her hand was a tolerably flat stone, on which I saw arranged a number of bottles and such other comforts as were absolutely necessary to a proper care of the sufferer.

That was all. In these few words I have told the whole story. To be sure, this simple tent, perched 7,000 feet and more above sea level, had one advantage which even his great house in New York could not offer. This was the outlook. Lying as he did facing the valley he had only to open his eyes to catch a full view of the panorama of sky and mountain stretched out before him. It was glorious; whether seen at morning, noon or night, glorious. But I doubt if he would not gladly have exchanged it for a sight of his home walls.

As I started to go a stir took place in the blanket wrapped about his chin, and I caught a glimpse of the iron gray head and hollow cheeks of the great financier. He was a very sick man. Even I could see that. Had I obtained the permission I sought and been allowed to ask him one of the many questions burning on my tongue, I should have received only delirium for reply. There was no reaching that clouded intelligence now, and I felt grateful to the doctor for convincing me of it.

I told him so and thanked him quite warmly when we were well away from the tent, and his answer was almost kindly, though he made no effort to hide his impatience and anxiety to see me go. The looks he cast at the sun were significant, and having no wish to antagonize him and every wish to visit the spot again I moved toward my horse with the intention of untying him.

To my surprise the doctor held me back.

"You can't go tonight," said he. "Your horse has hurt himself."

It was true. There was something the matter with the animal's left fore foot. As the doctor lifted it the manager came up. He agreed with the doctor. I could not make the descent to Santa Fe on that horse that night. Did I feel elated? Rather. I had no wish to descend. Yet I was far from foreseeing what the night was to bring to me.

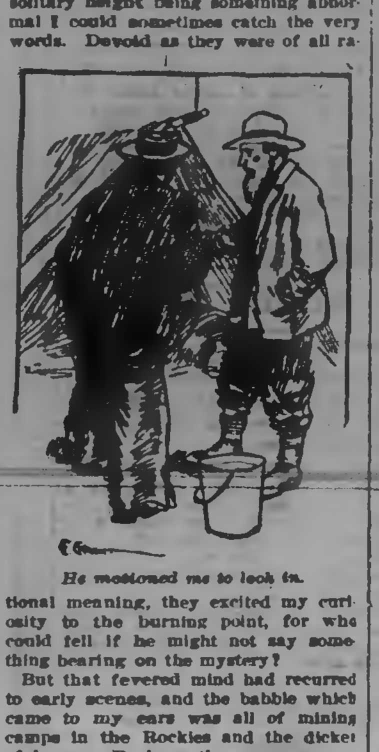
I was turned over to the manager, but not without a final injunction from the doctor. "Not a word to any one about your errand! Not a word about the New York tragedy, as you value Mr. Fairbrother's life!"

"Not a word," said I.

Then he left me.

To see the sun go down and the moon come up from a ledge hung, as it were, in mid air! The experience was novel—but I refrain. I have more important matters to relate.

I was given a bunk at the extreme end of the long sleeping tent and turned in with the rest. I expected to sleep, but on finding that I could catch a sight of the sick tent from under the canvas I experienced such fascination in watching this forbidden spot that midnight came before I had closed my eyes. Then all desire to sleep left me, for the patient began to moan and presently to talk, and the stillness of the solitary height being something abnormal I could sometimes catch the very words. Devoid as they were of all rational meaning, they excited my curiosity to the burning point, for who could tell if he might not say something bearing on the mystery?



He motioned me to look in.

But that fevered mind had recurred to early scenes, and the babble which came to my ears was all of mining camps in the Rockies and the dicker of horses. Perhaps the uneasy movement of my horse pulling at the end of his tether had disturbed him. Perhaps—

But at the inner utterance of the second "perhaps" I found myself up on my elbow listening with all my ears and staring with wide stretched eyes at the thicket of stunted trees where the road debouched on the platform. Something was astir there besides my horse. I could catch sounds of an unmistakable nature. A rider was coming up the trail.

Slipping back into my place, I turned toward the doctor, who lay some two or three bunks nearer the opening. He had started up, too, and in a moment was out of the tent. I do not think he had observed my action, for it was very dark where I lay, and his back had been turned toward me. As for the others, they slept like the dead, only they made more noise.

Interested—everything is interesting at such a height. I brought my eye to bear on the ledge and soon saw by the limpid light of a full moon the stiff, short branches of the trees, on which my gaze was fixed, give way to an advancing horse and rider.

"Hello!" shouted the doctor in a whisper which was in itself a warning. "Easy there! We have sickness in this camp, and it's a late hour for visitors."

"I know."

The answer was subdued, but earnest.

"I'm the magistrate of this district. I've a question to ask this sick man on behalf of the New York chief of police, who is a personal friend of mine. It is connected with"—

"Hush!"

The doctor had seized him by the arm and turned his face away from the sick tent. Then the two heads came together, and an argument began.

I could not hear a word of it, but their motions were eloquent. My sympathy was with the magistrate, of course, and I watched eagerly while he passed a letter over to the doctor, who vainly strove to read it by the light of the moon. Finding this impossible, he was about to return it when the other struck a match and lit a lantern hanging from the horn of his saddle. The two heads came together again, but as quickly separated, with every appearance of irreconcilement, and I was settling back with sensations of great disappointment when a sound fell on the night so unexpected to all concerned that with a common impulse each eye sought the sick tent.

"Water! Will some one give me water?" a voice had cried quietly, with none of the delirium which had hitherto rendered it unnatural.

The doctor started for the tent. There was the quickness of surprise in his movement, and the gesture he made to the magistrate as he passed in reawakened an expectation in my breast which made me doubly watchful.

Providence was intervening in our favor, and I was not surprised to see him presently reissue with the nurse, whom he drew into the shadow of the trees, where they had a short conference. If she returned alone into the tent after this conference I should know that the matter was at an end and that the doctor had decided to maintain his authority against that of the magistrate. But she remained outside, and the magistrate was invited to join their council. When they again left the shadow of the trees it was to approach the tent.

The magistrate, who was in the rear, could not have more than passed the opening, but I thought him far enough inside not to detect any movement on my part, so I took advantage of the situation to worm myself out of my corner and across the ledge to where the tent made a shadow in the moonlight.

Crouching close and laying my ear against the canvas, I listened.

The nurse was speaking in a gently persuasive tone. I imagined her kneeling by the head of the patient and breathing words into his ear. These were what I heard:

"You love diamonds. I have often noticed that, you look so long at the ring on your hand. That is why I have let it stay there, though at times I have feared it would drop off and roll away over the adobe down the mountain side. Was I right?"

"Yes, yes." The words came with difficulty, but they were clear enough. "It's of small value. I like it because"—

He appeared to be too weak to finish.

A pause, during which she seemed to edge nearer to him.

"We all have some pet keepsake," said she. "But I should never have supposed this stone of yours an inexpensive one. But I forget that you are the owner of a very large and remarkable diamond, a diamond that is spoken of sometimes in the papers. Of course if you have a gem like that this one must appear very small and valueless to you."

"Yes, this is nothing, nothing." And he appeared to turn away his head.

"Mr. Fairbrother! Pardon me, but I want to tell you something about that big diamond of yours. You have been ill and have not been able to read your letters, so do not know that your wife has had some trouble with that diamond. People have said that it is not a real stone, but a well executed imitation. May I write to her that this is a mistake—that it is all you have ever claimed for it—that is, an unusually large diamond of the first water?"

I listened in amazement. Surely this was an insidious way to get at the truth, a woman's way. But who would say it was not a wise one, the wisest perhaps which could be taken under the circumstances? What would his reply be? Would it show that he was as ignorant of his wife's death as was generally believed both by those about him here and those who knew him well in New York? Or would the question convey nothing further to him than the doubt—in itself an insult—of the genuineness of that great stone which had been his pride?

A murmur—that was all it could be called—broke from his fever dried lips and died away in an inarticulate gasp. Then suddenly, sharply, a cry broke from him, an intelligible cry, and we heard him say:

"No imitation! No imitation! It was a sun! A glory! No other like it! It lit the air! It blazed! It burned! I see it now! I see"—

There the passion succumbed, the strength failed. Another murmur, another, and the great void of night which stretched over—I might almost say under—us was no more quiet or seemingly impenetrable than the silence of that moon enveloped tent.

Would he speak again? I did not think so. Would she even try to make him? I did not think this either. But I did not know the woman.

Softly her voice rose again. There was a dominating insistence in her tones, gentle as they were; the insistence of a healthy mind which seeks to control a weakened one.

"You do not know of any imitation, then? It was the real stone you gave her. You are sure of it. You would be ready to swear to it if—say just yes or no," she finished in gentle urgency.

Evidently he was sinking again into unconsciousness, and she was just holding him back long enough for the necessary word.

It came slowly and with a dragging intonation, but there was no mistaking the ring of truth with which he spoke.

"Yes," said he.

When I heard the doctor's voice and felt a movement in the canvas against which I leaned I took the warning and stole back hurriedly to my quarters.

I was scarcely settled when the same group of three I had before watched silhouetted itself again against the moonlight. There was some talk, a mingling and separating of shadows. Then the nurse glided back to her duties, and the two men went toward the clump of trees where the horse had been tethered.

Ten minutes and the doctor was back in his bunk. Was it imagination or did I feel his hand on my shoulder before he finally lay down and composed himself to sleep? I cannot say. I only know that I gave no sign and that soon all stir ceased in his direction, and I was left to enjoy my triumph and to listen with anxious interest to the strange and unintelligible sounds which accompanied the descent of the horseman down the face of the cliff and finally to watch, with a fascination which drew me to my knees, the passage of that sparkling star of light hanging from his saddle. It crept to and fro across the side of the opposite mountain as he threaded its endless zigzags and finally disappeared over the brow into the invisible canyons beyond.

With the disappearance of this beacon came lassitude and sleep, through whose hazy atmosphere floated wild sentences from the sick tent, which showed that the patient was back again in Nevada, quarreling over the price of a horse which was to carry him beyond the reach of some threatening avalanche.

When next morning I came to depart the doctor took me by both hands and looked me straight in the eyes.

"You heard," he said.

"How do you know?" I asked.

"I can tell a satisfied man when I see him," he growled, throwing down my hands with that same humorous twinkle in his eyes which had encouraged me from the first.

I made no answer, but I shall remember the lesson.

One detail more. When I started on my own descent I found why the leggings with which I had been provided were so indispensable. I was not allowed to ride. Indeed, riding down those steep declivities was impossible. No horse could preserve his balance with a rider on his back. I slid, so did my horse, and only in the valley beneath did we come together again.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE success of this interview provoked other attempts on the part of the reporters who now flocked into the southwest. Ere long particulars began to pour in of Mr. Fairbrother's painful journey south after his illness set in. The clerk of the hotel in El Moro where the great mine owner's name was found registered at the time of the murder told a story which made very good reading for those who were more interested in the sufferings and experiences of the millionaire husband of the murdered lady than in those of the unhappy but comparatively insignificant man upon whom public opinion had cast the odium of her death.

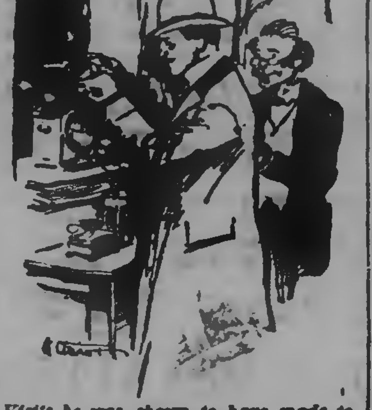
It seemed that when the first news came of the great crime which had taken place in New York Mr. Fairbrother was absent from the hotel on a prospecting tour through the adjacent mountains. Couriers had been sent after him, and it was one of these who finally brought him into town. He had been found wandering alone on horseback among the defiles of an untraveled region, sick and almost incoherent from fever. Indeed his condition was such that neither the courier nor such others as saw him had the heart to tell him the dreadful news from New York or even to show him the papers. To their great relief he betrayed no curiosity in them. All he wanted was a berth in the first train going south, and this was an easy way for them out of a great responsibility. They listened to his wishes and saw him safely aboard with such alacrity and with so many precautions against his being disturbed that they have never doubted that he left El Moro in total ignorance not only of the circumstances of his great bereavement, but of the bereavement itself.

This ignorance, which he appeared to have carried with him to the Placide, was regarded by those who knew him best as proving the truth of the affirmation elicited from him in the pauses of his delirium of the genuineness of the stone which had passed from his hands to those of his wife at the time of their separation, and further dispatches coming in, some private and some official, but all insisting upon the fact that it would be weeks before he would be in a condition to submit to any sort of examination on a subject so painful, the authorities in New York decided to wait no longer for his testimony, but to proceed at once with the inquest.

Great as is the temptation to give a detailed account of proceedings which were of such moment to myself and to every word of which I listened with the eagerness of a novice and the anguish of a woman who sees her lover's reputation at the mercy of a verdict which may stigmatize him as a possible criminal, I see no reason for encumbering my narrative with what, for the most part, would be a mere repetition of facts already known to you.

Mr. Durand's intimate and suggestive connection with this crime, the explanations he had to give of this connection, frequently bizarre and, I must acknowledge, not always convincing—nothing could alter these nor change the fact of the undoubted cowardice he displayed in hiding Mrs. Fairbrother's gloves in my unfortunate little bag.

As for the mystery of the warning, it remained as much of a mystery as ever. Nor did any better success follow an attempt to fix the ownership of the stiletto, though a half day was exhausted in an endeavor to show that the latter might have come into Mr. Durand's possession in some of the many visits he was shown to have made of late to various curio shops in and out of New York city. (Mr. Durand's visits to the curio shops, as explained by him, were made with a view of finding a casket in which to place his diamond. This explanation was looked upon with as much doubt as the others he had offered where the situation seemed to be of a compromising character.)



Visits he was shown to have made to various curio shops.

I had expected all this, just as I had expected Mr. Grey to be absent from the proceedings and his testimony ignored. But this expectation did not make the ordeal any easier, and when I noticed the effect of witness after witness leaving the stand without having improved Mr. Durand's position by a jot or offering any new clew capable of turning suspicion into other directions I felt my spirit harden and my purpose strengthen till I hardly knew myself. I must have frightened my uncle, for his hand was always on my arm and his chiding voice in my ear bidding me beware not only for my own sake and his, but for that of Mr. Durand, whose eye was seldom away from my face.

The verdict, however, was not the one I had so deeply dreaded. While it did not exonerate Mr. Durand, it did not openly accuse him, and I was on the point of giving him a smile of congratulation and renewed hope when I saw my little detective, the one who had spied the gloves in my bag at the ball, advance and place his hand upon his arm.

The police had gone a step further than the coroner's jury, and Mr. Durand was arrested before my eyes on a charge of murder.

ORIGINAL RECIPES.

Gleaned by One Who Is a Gastronomic Adept.

To serve chicken livers en brochette allow one liver and six pieces of thinly sliced bacon for each person. Cut the livers in four pieces and string them alternately with the bacon on skewers. Stand the skewers upright through the rack of the dripping pan and bake in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp and brown. Serve on a bed of cress.

To use up the leftover dinner fish remove the bones and flake the meat. Mix the fish with an equal part of cold boiled potatoes chopped moderately fine and warm the hash in bacon fat or butter, seasoning with butter, salt and pepper. It is a good idea to brown the hash on the bottom and then fold it like an omelet.

Smelts skewered in rings with heads and tails together, dipped in milk and flour and fried in deep fat make an attractive fish course. Garnish the plate on which they are served with cress and slices of lemon that have been dipped in minced parsley. If they are to make the main part of the meal, serve them around a mound of potato or make a potato border and serve the fish rings in a mound. The smelts may be skewered with a toothpick, and the skewer may be removed after the fish is cooked, as the ring will usually keep its shape.

The man of a certain house has a dish which he invented when he lived in bachelor quarters. He sprinkles two small slices of halibut with salt and pepper and bakes them in a gas oven until they are brown. Then he puts them on a piping hot platter and turns a Welsh rabbit over them. The men of his acquaintance eat the mixture, if the women folk do scorn it.

A baked ham came to the table the other day with a lemon pig surmounting the top. The young housewife who likes things "different" had used the pointed end for the head, had raised triangular pieces of the skin at each side for the ears and stuck in cloves for eyes. The legs and tail were toothpicks. This is a traditional garnishment for pork.

The stuffed eggs served as a fish course at a luncheon last week had been cut in two, the yolks removed, a slice cut from each end of the whites so that the eggs would stand, and the two small ends had been put together with the open cup at the top. This was heaped high with a savory mixture of the yolk rubbed smooth with melted butter, salt, pepper, paprika and sardines. The eggs were served on white lettuce leaves and were garnished with Spanish red pepper dice and olive strips.

HOW A GREAT REVIVAL WAS CONDUCTED IN THE KOOTENAY

Prof. Kilpatrick Told About it at Knox Church Last Night—Was Planned and Carried Out by Evangelistic Committee of Presbyterian Church.

An interesting word picture of the great revival in the Kootenay district was given at Knox church last night by Prof. Kilpatrick, DD, of Knox College, Toronto. The revival, which was richly blessed, was concluded a short time ago and as Prof. Kilpatrick was one of the workers he was in a position to give a graphic description of how the revival was conducted and of what was accomplished.

Prof. Kilpatrick, who is a noted preacher and lecturer preached at both services at Knox church yesterday and was heard by large congregations. "New Life in the Kootenay" was his subject at the evening service. It was the story of a series of simultaneous evangelistic meetings held in the Kootenay district in British Columbia. The revival was planned and carried out by the Evangelistic committee of the Presbyterian General Assembly but outside of its inception the revival was undenominational in character.

The ministers of churches of other denominations at the places where meetings were held, took an active part in the work and lent valuable assistance. The Salvation Army also co-operated with heartiness. Splendid preparations had been made for the revival and prayer was prominent in the preliminary work. Long before the revival commenced the Christian people of Kootenay and in other parts of Canada and across the ocean in the old lands prayers had been offered up for the success of the revival. Valuable assistance was given by the Chapman evangelistic band of the United States, a body of trained workers who were loaned the Canadian assembly for the campaign in the Kootenay country. Meetings were held throughout the district simultaneously and many were converted. Conditions in the west were widely different from the east and the methods used were somewhat different at times from those employed at evangelistic meetings in the east. Sensational features were not used however. The simple gospel was preached and the simple hymns were sung. When the men could not attend the meetings they brought the message to them where they worked—in the shops, at the mines, and in the construction camps. It was not a high and mighty gospel that was preached, only the old story of the power of Christ to save from sin. And it had its effect.

Prof. Kilpatrick referred to the great religious, social and educational problems that existed in the west and the necessity of the Christian men and women of Canada paying attention to that part of the Dominion.

MEMBERS OF COURT CHEMONG ATTENDED MURRAY ST. CHURCH

The annual church parade of the members of Court Chemong, Canadian Order of Foresters, was held last evening to Murray street Baptist church, where the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, preached an eloquent and most appropriate sermon. He gave his hearers much food for thought, and they must have gone away deeply impressed with the remarks that they heard.

The members turned out in large numbers and occupied the pews in the centre aisle. The music rendered by the choir was excellent; an anthem, with solo by Miss Clara Kidd, being splendidly given. A quartette, consiting of Miss Clara Kidd, Mrs. Miller and Messrs. Raddon and Ferguson, sang at the conclusion of the sermon.

THE SERMON.

Rev. Mr. Webb chose his text from the eighth verse of the 5th chapter of the first book of Timothy. "But if any provide for his own and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worth than an infidel." Previous to announcing his text, the pastor extended a hearty welcome to the visiting brethren. He was glad to have them and would thank God if any word he might speak would be of profit to them.

The words of the text were those of the Apostle Paul to a young minister, Timothy. The roots of religion, the speaker said, went down deep with St. Paul. He gave up everything that he might win Christ. He did not say one thing and do another. One could not put any faith in such a man. The preacher stated that there was something mystical and pre-eminently practical about the words of the text. The text taught that there was a worse symptom than unbelief. It is an awful thing to be an unbeliever, but Paul stated that there is a worse state than that. The speaker believed that when an individual ceased to respect himself and to love his wife and family he was a hopeless case.

Liberty, benevolence and concord, he understood, were the standards of the Foresters. These should not only be exercised in the society but in the home as well. He must be ready to make sacrifices for his wife and family. He must as the Apostle says, provide for his own. But in providing for their bodies he must be providing for the bodies he must not allow the mind and soul to degenerate. The son took his father for a pattern and it was for the parent to see that he held up to his boy the highest ideals. The society was a protection for the family but he urged the members to provide all things for their families, to carry out their high ideals, both at home and in the society and he concluded by saying that they could never do a nobler thing than to say "I will not deny Christ."

The society marched back to their hall and passed the usual votes of thanks to the pastor and choir.

LAST NIGHT'S RAIN WORTH THOUSANDS TO THE COUNTRY

"Last night's storm will be worth thousands to the country," remarked a farmer this morning. And he just about sized up the situation.

The rain was badly needed in both town and county, but more so in the latter. The ground was getting pretty dry, and the verdure was losing some of its freshness.

To-day, however, all nature is refreshed and one can almost see the grass growing. Reports from the county say that the crops and pastures are in good condition.

Mr. Robt Hall and Dr. F.L. Robinson Purchase Five Boston Terriers--Show Was a Big Success

Mr. Robert Hall, of the Customs House, and Dr. F. L. Robinson, have returned from Boston, where they attended the Ladies Kennel Show, held on June 10th, at the grounds of the Chestnut Hill Club, situated a few miles from the city. The show was under the auspices of the ladies, who attended to all details except the judging, in which 11 men were required to do the work.

The show was a big success in every particular, there being 581 dogs benched, making an entry of 910. The dogs were entered from all over the country, and the local men purchased five handsome and well-bred Boston terriers. The number included Dr. Dell, which will head the kennel here. The animal is a beauty, and was secured at a high price. With the addition of these five dogs, Messrs. Hall and Robinson have the best kennel in this part of the country. Both gentlemen speak highly of the manner in which they were entertained by the committee in charge of the show.

DEATH OF FORMER PETERBORO' MAN

The death occurred at an early hour Sunday morning at his residence, "Carbrook," Queen's Park, of A. H. Campbell, sr., for many years a resident of the city and well-known for his connection with the lumbering industry, in which he amassed a considerable fortune, and for his active interest in the affairs of the Church of England, having represented the Church of the Redeemer for over 30 years in the diocesan synod, of which he was at the time of his death the oldest lay delegate, being in his 90th year.

Mr. Campbell was the son of John O. Campbell, W.S., and was born at Carbrook, Stirlingshire, Scotland, on Aug. 12, 1819. His education was obtained at the Academy and University of Edinburgh. Coming to Canada in 1845 he first went into banking, becoming cashier of the Commercial Bank. Later he went to Peterborough, where he embarked in lumbering. In 1874 he removed to Toronto becoming manager of the Muskoka Mills and Lumber Co. He was also connected with many other leading financial and commercial firms, having held among other posts of honor and responsibility, those of president of the British-Canadian Loan and Investment Co., and president of the Toronto Electric Light Co. For the past 15 years he has taken no active part in business.

In church affairs he was a member of the evangelical section of the Anglican communion, having been one of the founders of the Church Association, which was dissolved at the time of the election of the late Archbishop Sweatman, 30 years ago. He was also a director of Bishop Ridley College. In politics Mr. Campbell was a Conservative.

He was married in 1856 to Miss Louisa Fisher, of Hillshead, Dunkeld, Scotland. He is survived by his widow, three sons, I. H. Mayne Campbell, Dr. Colin Campbell and J. H. Campbell, jr., all of Toronto, and three daughters, Miss Fannie Campbell, Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy. Canon Renaud, of Montreal, is a nephew, and the widow of the late Bishop Sullivan, a niece.

The funeral, which took place this morning, was private, and was conducted by Rev. C. J. James, of the Church of the Redeemer.—The World.

It will be remembered that for many years the late Mr. Campbell in partnership with Mr. Hughson, carried on the Red Mills business, the lumber being brought down to the G. R. station here on huge waggons drawn by 4 and 6 horses. Mr. Campbell lived at St. Leonard's, the palatial residence that stood on the site where St. Joseph's Hospital now stands. It was built by Rev. J. W. R. Beck, occupied afterwards by Mr. Campbell, Dr. Burritt and Mr. J. M. Irwin, during whose occupancy it was destroyed by fire.

A Peculiar One

Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Although I am twenty four years of age and do not belong to the militia, I have never been called upon to pay the poll tax. It looks as if there were laxity on the part of the city officials. I don't want to ask the city to take the money for fear the newspapers would get hold of the facts and land me as an honest one and this is not desirable nowadays.

Yours,
PUZZLED.

WALKING IN THE RAIN

From the London Times

We ought to be out in the rain more than we are and to take the same pleasure in it that the thirsty plants take. Even in London one can feel some of the delight of rain in the parks, and it is pleasant to see the trees and flowers getting a washing and to hear country sounds and smell country scents among them. But any one who would enjoy the full pleasure of rain must leave his umbrella behind him. Rain falling on an umbrella loses all its magic and becomes a mere nuisance at once. If you want so much protection against it, better stay indoors and have the more thorough protection of a roof.

To enjoy the rain you must lay yourself out to enjoy it and start with the intention of getting wet. A compromise is worthless. Perhaps the best place for enjoying it is a wood of deciduous trees not because they give shelter from it but because they make so much of it, multiplying with their leaves the sound of the falling drops. There is always something disconsolate about rain on a bare heath, however thirsty the heath may be, but a wood seems to give it a warm welcome and to pass it on like good news from the higher branches to the lower and from them to the rejoicing earth. Rain of course is delicious in the garden, but there, after a drought you are tempted to watch its action upon each particular plant and so you are in danger of catching a chill. You must walk in the rain if you are to enjoy it safely, and there is no greater pleasure than to walk through lane and wood and meadow and to share the delight of each in a long-desired downpour.

As a result of the pessimistic speeches of British statesmen, British consols have fallen a full point.

Thos. Rigney, a pioneer farmer of this province was killed in a runaway at St Mary's.

OMEMEE AND A NEW STATION

Another Appeal Wil be Made to the Railway Board

Lindsay, June 12.—Mr. Beatty, reeve of Omemee, was heard on behalf of Omemee village at the meeting of the committee on finance and assessment of the county council on Friday afternoon. It seems that a number of years ago the Grand Trunk Railway built a railway platform at Omemee village with the understanding that a station be built later on. This station has never come, and the citizens of that village are beginning to grow anxious. For a number of seasons back they have been agitating for a station, but no redress has been given. The citizens now appealed to the county council to assist them in their efforts. It was therefore moved by Mr. Tiers and seconded by Mr. McLean, that Warden be appointed to come, along with the deputation from Omemee to interview the board of railway commissioners on the subject of getting a new station built.—Carried.

OLD MAN WANTED TO GO TO WORK

House of Refuge Inmate Made Request to County Council

Lindsay, June 12.—An incident touched with sadness and in some particulars amusing, took place at the committee meeting of the county council on Friday afternoon. An old man named Williams, an inmate of the House of Refuge, wished to be heard by the committee relative to being allowed to go out and find some work. The old man is well up in years, and must be in the neighborhood of eighty. He contends, however, that he is still young and has lots of work left in him yet. In his bygone days he was a surveyor and was in service for some time in India. He put his case before many of the council before it was opened, but was not allowed to address the meeting. The committee, however, thought it best, after carefully considering the case, not to allow Mr. Williams to go out. If, however, he can get a good position, one that will satisfy the committee, he will be allowed out for a few months of the summer.

ENDED LIFE WHILE TEMPORARILY INSANE

Lindsay, June 12.—On June 11, the lifeless body of Mrs. Henry LeRoche was found in an outbuilding on the 10th concession of Garden. Death had taken place but a short time previously.

Coroner Dr. Blanchard, of Lindsay, was called by telephone, and with Dr. Lipsitt, of Victoria Road, visited the scene of the sad occasion.

After an investigation an inquest was deemed unnecessary by the coroner as everything pointed to suicide while temporarily deranged mentally.

The husband of the deceased resided with her, the rest of the family consisting of several children, are grown up and reside elsewhere.

OBITUARY

HORACE FOSTER

The death occurred Saturday of Horace Foster, the two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Foster, 225 Carlisle avenue. The deceased was badly scalded recently and an attack of scarlet fever followed which resulted in his death.

The funeral took place this morning to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt officiated at the services.

MRS. ALBERTA H. J. MOUNTJOY.

A particularly sad death occurred Saturday afternoon when Mrs. Alberta H. J. Mountjoy passed away at her late residence, 209 Stewart street. The deceased had been in poor health for some time, but was generally able to attend to her household duties, but Saturday she was seized with a hemorrhage, which resulted in her death.

The late Mrs. Mountjoy was 56 years of age and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buyers, of Port Perry. With her husband she came to Peterborough a year ago and during her residence here she made many friends by her unassuming and kindly disposition. She was a member of Charlotte street Methodist church and services will be held at the home this evening at eight o'clock by the Rev. Mr. Henderson. The remains will be taken to Hampden to-morrow morning on the eight o'clock C.P.R. train and interment will take place there. Besides her parents and husband, one brother, Mr. O. L. Byers, of Toronto, is left to mourn her loss.

A Variety Hat

POLL TAX CASES AT POLICE COURT

One Citizen Fined $5.00 and Costs -One Case Was Dismissed and Another one Enlarged

Three citizens were charged in police court this morning with not having paid their poll tax.

Wm. Redmond stated that he paid taxes in Otonabee, and for this reason should be excluded from paying poll tax in this city. The case was remanded as the law on this point is not very clear.

Wm. Bowman was fined $5.00 and costs for not paying this. He had been notified to settle up, but had neglected to do so.

Samuel Ferguson said he paid taxes in Lindsay, where his family resided. He proved that he was over sixty years, and this let him off.

NEW CLUB FORMED "THE WHINERS"

It is rumored that a new club is being formed in the West Riding of Peterborough to be known as "The Whiners." It will be composed of those who decline to "take the medicine" which they handed out so freely to others. It will have several branches. There will be kickers, whiners, explainers, etc. The meetings will be held at the time of the full moon.

THEATRICAL

THE GINGERBREAD MAN.

Gingery as ever, the "Gingerbread Man" repeated its former successes in Peterborough on Saturday night. There was a large audience at the Grand Opera House, and the lingering melodies and bright dialogue were received with the same enthusiasm as when they first were heard here. Freddie Nice played the part of the "Gingerbread Man," and made a big hit. Garrick Major was great as Mischacalius Fudge, and Ross Snow got a lot of comedy out of the role of "Wondrous Wise." Maurice Holden made good as the "Fairy Queen," and Miss May Boulton and Miss Rose Murray portrayed the parts of Maizie Bon Bon and Margery Daw in a faultless manner. The chorus was large and sang well. The Venetian male quartette was the best heard here in a long time, and was repeatedly recalled.

HOW IT ALL HAPPENED

One hundred passengers from the steamer Assiniboia, which all but turned turtle when the Canadian Soo lock was rammed by the Percy G. Walker, arrived in Toronto at one o'clock this morning from Owen Sound. A graphic description of the accident was furnished by one of the passengers when seen at his home this morning. It appears the Walker, when coming up to one of the piers, had no one to catch the line to tie up, allowing the boat to swing against the masonry. The engineer evidently mistook the back-up signal, giving her full speed ahead, the vessel striking the gates exactly in the centre, opening them to the rush of water, which carried everything with it. Some unfavorable comment was made on the cause of the occurrence by the spectators, there being no officials in sight to assist the Walker in mooring, thus indirectly causing the accident.

TO FIND BRIDE FOR COLONIST

Letter From a Canadian Read at Meeting of Old Country Guardians

Much amusement was created at a meeting of the Carlisle Board of Guardians by the reading of a letter addressed to the chairman from a Canadian in search of a wife. The letter, which was from Robert Rome, Parry Sound, Ontario, Canada, was as follows—

Dear Sir,—I am a widower, 45 years of age, in a good position as a fireman in the employ of Peter's Lumber Company of Parry Sound, Ontario. My salary is 62 dollars a month steady. I have three children, 11, 9 and 6 years of age. If you have a single woman or widow with not more than one child above three years of age, I shall be very much obliged. If you could recommend to me with a view to marriage such a person, I would be grateful to you. I will refer you to my employers for personal character, or to the Presbyterian minister of Parry Sound. If you send me a favorable reply I will be pleased to forward to you a money order covering all expenses. If possible, please send photo.

Mr. Turner moved that the board hunt him out a wife. (Laughter.) The chairman (Mr. Nicholson) suggested that the task be entrusted to Mr. Turner. (Laughter) Mr. Turner: You leave it to me and he shall have one, I assure you. (Laughter.) Mr. Briggs moved that the letter be left in the hands of Mr. Turner, "with power to act." (More laughter.) The chairman was of opinion that the chance of a husband should be limited to the women in the workhouse. The matter was ultimately referred to a committee, Mr. Brisco remarking that this was a thing which ought to be encouraged.

GOOD PROGRAMME AT TURF CLUB'S MATINEE

Five Mile Foot Race Was Won by Charlie Thorpe--Good Sport Furnished by the Horse Races--the Results

Charlie Thrope, of the Victoria Harriers, won the five mile foot race at the Turf Club's matinee Saturday afternoon at the Driving Park. Thrope cinched the race by a beautiful sprint about 200 yards from the finish. The time was 29.10 and it was too fast for the rest of the field which included H. Slight, Parker, who defeated Slight last Saturday, Howard, Robinson and several others. There was a fair-sized crowd and all appeared to be considerably interested in the race. The horse races were all well contested and the programme for the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyable. The results were as follows:

6 mile race—1 Thorpe, 2 Slighte, 3 Parker,

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

THE DOUBLE STEAL

Just why the double steal with men on first and second is not attempted more is hard to understand. In a majority of games nowadays but few runs are scored and even should one of the base runners be retired in attempting the play the other will still be in a position to score on a base hit.

Furthermore only one man can be played for on the double steal and, as a rule this is the man who attempts to pilfer third; but he can gets a big lead off of second that the play is often close, even when the throw is perfect, and the slightest bobble on the part of the opposing team assures success. Yet the play is but seldom attempted.

The world's record for going to first is held by "Bullet" Thoney, of the Boston team who bunted and reached first in 3 1-5 seconds at Cincinnati in the field day games. And Thoney is one of the fellows who is in motion the instant his bat hits the ball. He has a getaway stride like a Rector or a Walker.

Apparently the Straths have not got going yet. Individually the team is fast but there is something wrong.

Parnell and McDonald were the two busiest men on the field. Their pitchers had them jumping all over after wide shoots and both have very sore hands as a result of the poor control of the twirlers.

Steve Davidson and Joe Guerin at second and short for the PAC. played good ball, despite the fact of being out of the game for a number of years.

Those two big hits of Quinlan's were pretty and with another foot would have cleared the fence for home runs.

Kirn was always on the job, and twirled good enough to win, but those errors helped the IAS considerably.

Several of the players during the second contest had a little argument with the umpire. This should not be allowed. There are many rules that the players do not know anything about and there is nothing to be gained by trying to show this official.

With two losses, the Strathconas go up against the IAS. in the first game next Saturday. There will be some excitement.

Something is wrong in the Intermediate league. No league games on Saturday when two were scheduled to be played.

Toronto lost by 2-1 in fifteen innings at Providence on Saturday, and were beaten in both ends of a double-header by the Greys yesterday.

Buffalo and the Leafs are tied for third place. Kelley's team opens a series at Jersey City today.

Chicago and New York both won Saturday and Sunday. The Highlanders used sixteen players against the White Sox and lost.

Merritt held Montreal to four hits and shut them out.

LEAGUE GAMES WERE NOT PLAYED

Intermediate Teams Did Not Have Full Teams at Oval Saturday

The Intermediate league games scheduled to be played at the Oval on Saturday afternoon were not pulled off. The YMCA. had their team on hand but the Rovers were short several players. The Y's however lent the necessary men and an exhibition game was played, resulting in a win for the YMCA. by 13-8.

The batteries were:

Rovers—Williams and Boulie.
YMCA—Creswell and Dobbin.

WHO PLOUGHED THE DIAMOMD?

This is the Question That Port Hopers Want Answered—An Awful Job

Says the Port Hope Times.—Some one made a bad mistake; some one erred; some one got in wrong with the signals—and the park diamond was ploughed up like a Hope township farmer's back fifty acres.

It seems that a delegation of baseball players waited upon Ald. Russell as head of the town property committee and asked him to "skin the diamond," cut the grass in the outfield and put the field in shape.

It was suggested to set a plough at an inch, or so and scuff off the lumps, roll the infield, and put the field in shape. The cost would be very little.

It may be said that Ald. Russell had centred his attention on the city hall square; or forgot for a while that the only "park" is the ball field—but the order was given and he was supposed to be released from further trouble.

The man who ploughed the diamond went down too deep; did not cut the grass, and when the public went up to see the cadets go through their inspection the place was in awful condition.

Whose fault? Ask of the winds that blows with gentle force through the evergreen sentinels on the park hill.

SHRUBB WON FROM SELLEN

Both Men Ran Fast Race But the Englishman Showed His Superiority --- Won by 1 1-2 Laps

By defeating Percy Sellen in the 12-mile race at Hanlan's Point, Toronto, on Saturday night, Alfred Shrubb has proved beyond all doubt that he is the greatest living runner at that distance. The little Englishman was in splendid form and managed to do the 12 miles in two-fifths of a second better than the schedule of time which was published last week, which explains why the fast Irish-Canadian could not win, for he calculated on his opponent being about two minutes slower than that. Although Percy Sellen lost, he has the satisfaction of knowing that there is not another man on this continent who could have made as good a showing as he did against Shrubb. The winner went off like a whirlwind, and his speed literally made the spectators gasp, but Sellen stuck pluckily along after him, and even when he had been lapped he showed so much persistence in his chase that it was not until after the tenth mile that Shrubb had his victory cinched beyond all doubt. Although none of the world records were touched, all the Canadian times up to that distance went to the board. The fact that Shrubb did the first five miles in forty-five seconds less than the record which the Canadian amateurs have made after years of working, will serve to indicate the class which he displayed.

WILL HOLD THE PEN IN TEETH

Armless Student Will Write on Examinations at Columbus Ohio

Columbus, O, June 12— When the State bar examiners face the applicants for admission to the practice of law in Ohio next Tuesday, the first day of the State examination, they will witness one of the most remarkable accomplishments in the history of the profession.

Among the applicants will be plucky David Moyland of Cleveland who suffered the loss of both arms at the shoulder in a railroad accident, and who will write the answers to the numberless questions propounded during the examination by holding a fountain pen in his mouth.

Mr. Moyland has by long and patient application not only completed his law studies but has practiced constantly the art of writing with his teeth until he can not only write with comparative rapidity, but legibly as well. Notice of his coming to take the examinations has reached the Supreme Court with the plea that he be given a little more than the regulation time in which to answer the questions. He will be shown every courtesy and should he pass the examination as it is predicted he will, he will be the only armless barrister in the State of Ohio.

When several years ago Mr Moyland, who is now about 30 years old, lost both his arms close to the shoulder through a railroad accident, he did not despair, as would the majority of men of assuming an active place in life and remaining self supporting. Handicapped as he was, he finally decided after reviewing the whole field of occupation to enter a professional life and so took up the study of law. He has been a student at the Cleveland Law School for three years, and next Tuesday will take the State bar examination at Columbus.

Mr. Moyland has been an excellent student and his teachers speak well of him and his chances for a legal career. Many Cleveland lawyers are interested in the case and it is expected that after the bar examination he will have the opportunity of accepting connections with several good legal firms in Cleveland.

Fortune and Burden.

By MARIE SYLVESTRE.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

By the time she was ready to dress to go out to dinner Mary Bowen was so tired that she felt she would have preferred to stay at home and go to bed early. And yet she had looked forward eagerly for two days to this dinner at the Valentines' new house.

That she should feel out of sorts when the time actually had arrived added to the sense of grievance against things in general that had been growing very strong within her of late.

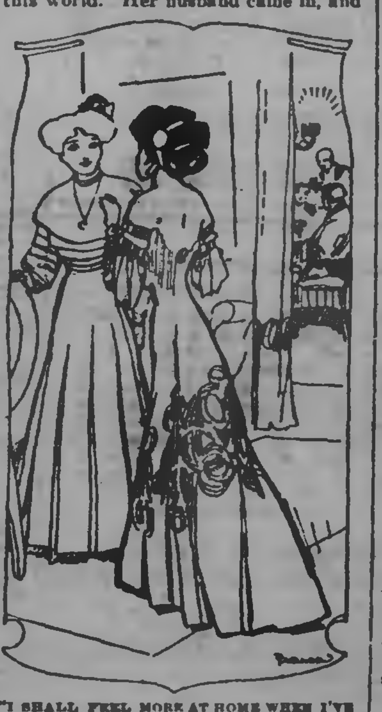
Mary Bowen had been married four years, and she was beginning to think of herself as a disappointed woman. Her husband was always good and kind, devoted to her and the two babies, but he had failed to surround her with the comforts she felt she deserved.

She felt annoyed at times at his very goodness. It was positively irritating to have any one always so sweet tempered. It was almost a weakness. If he were more of a fighter he would probably get on faster in his business and she would not have to take all the care of the babies with only a "general girl" to help in the house.

When she spoke sharply to Will he would look vaguely distressed, or, patting her shoulder, would remark gently, "Poor Mary, you're tired out."

Well, she felt tonight she was tired out. She and her husband were going to dine with her oldest friend, who had married a year before. The Valentines had gone abroad for a honeymoon that had lasted a whole year. Now they had come back into a house that had been built and furnished during their absence and stood completely ready to receive them.

As Mary laid out the blue crepe de chine that had been one of her trousseau gowns she felt bitterly that things were not very evenly divided in this world. Her husband came in, and she treated him coldly, feeling resentfully that he was responsible for her hard lot in life.



"I SHALL FEEL MORE AT HOME WHEN I'VE BEEN HERE LONGER."

When they were ready they left the little house and boarded a street car. Mary felt this was an added grievance. If she could have driven to the Valentines life would have looked less gloomy.

Mrs. Valentine received her guests in a beautiful drawing room, herself attired in a Paris creation that made Mary's old gown seem to her own consciousness terribly shabby.

"Dear Mary!" murmured Caroline Valentine, kissing her friend. "How do you do, Will? It seems to me you look tired. You mustn't let him work too hard, Mary. You know he'd never think of himself till he dropped."

"Mary's the tired one," laughed Will Bowen.

"Is she? She looks as sweet and fresh as ever," responded Mrs. Valentine. Then, a little nervously, she added: "Dick got home late tonight, and we will have to wait for him a few minutes. He was very sorry."

A slight constraint fell upon the three, who continued to converse, nevertheless, until at last Dick Valentine appeared.

Neither Mary nor Will had known him before he married Caroline. He was very rich and had charming manners, and to Mary a sort of halo had seemed to hover over him in her thought of him as her friend's husband.

He greeted his guests with enthusiastic apologies, and his words had the sound of a torrent, they were poured out so rapidly. His face was flushed, and his eyes refused to remain fixed on anything. An unpleasant suspicion formed itself in Mary's mind, and she glanced at her friend.

Caroline's eyes were fixed on her in a look of abject entreaty, in which mortification and pride struggled miserably. Mary understood and with a great effort replied to her host's remarks in a natural manner.

A perfect dinner was served in the perfectly appointed dining room, but to Mary Bowen it was the most trying ordeal she had ever passed through. Dick Valentine drank glass after glass of wine, and Mary saw him respond to his wife's frequent look of appeal with a laugh cruelly careless.

"Poor Caroline!" she thought. There was no room in her mind for "poor Mary" now. She looked at her husband. He did look tired, as Caroline said. There were circles under his eyes and his cheeks looked hollow. A lump came into her throat.

He worked every day of his life faithfully and hard, without complaining, while she, because she also had to work, complained constantly of her lot. Who was she that she should expect to lay down her burdens? And how good he was to her, how he always tried to please her, to make her happy!

As she took part in the general talk she longed to cry out to him, "Forgive me, oh, forgive me!"

It was over at last. Mary and Caroline went back to the drawing room and left the men to their cigars.

"How beautiful your house is, Caroline!" said Mary.

"Yes, isn't it? But the credit goes to the architect and the furnishers and decorators. I think I shall feel more at home when I've been here longer. I've thought since I came of the way you and Will furnished your little house, picking out everything together, and how you made your own curtains. Your house looks like you. This is beautiful, but there isn't anything really of us in it."

Then Mary asked about the trip, and Caroline told her about the many places they had seen. But she broke off suddenly to say, in a low tone: "Mary, don't think it's always the way it is tonight. He does try, and I help him, and he will conquer. I'm sorry you've seen, but we all have our burdens to bear."

When at last Mary and Will got away and walked down the street together Mary said: "Let's walk home. The air feels good, and my head aches."

"Poor little woman!" said Will tenderly. "You're tired. But it's true what Caroline said. You look as sweet and pretty as a rose. I looked at you across the table tonight and then at Caroline and thought what a lucky fellow I was to get you, Mary."

He patted the hand that lay on his arm and continued: "And didn't you think the house awfully stiff? It's very fine, of course, but it reminded me of a high priced club more than a home. But I know there are lots of things we need, dear, and we'll have them in time, so don't get discouraged."

"Oh, Will, don't, don't! You are killing me!" said Mary, clinging to his arm, while the tears overflowed and choked her.

"Why, Mary, what is it? Her husband stopped in genuine astonishment and tried to look at her.

"It is just that I want you to forgive me. I've been so hateful and horrid, but I do love you more than all the world. Say you forgive me, Will."

She was sobbing, and Will took her gently in his arms. "I have nothing to forgive, dearest."

Mary did not try to show him all she felt he had to forgive, but she pressed her lips to her husband's in mute pledge. Then, arm in arm, they walked along the silent street toward home.

DULLEST OF MARRIED LIVES IN ENGLAND, SAYS PROFESSOR

"In no country in the world is married life duller than in England."

This amazing statement was recently made by a Hungarian professor of psychology in the course of a lecture to students at Budapest.

MARRIAGE ENNUI.

According to the professor's own boast he has for many years made a close and special study of what he calls "marriage ennui," and the outcome of his searches is that the English husband and wife have fallen heavily in his estimation.

Singularly enough, he asserts that married life in Scotland is blessed with abundant happiness, though unfortunately he makes no serious attempt to explain the cause, save that "it may be due to the exercises of greater freedom in Scottish households and the more exhilarating nature of the Scottish climate."

The professor has apparently spent many months in England studying the marriage question, and he is very dogmatic in his conclusions.

REASON WHY.

"There is an old English proverb," he states, "which says 'Familiarity breeds contempt,' and I am convinced that in these words you will find the reason why married life in England is by no means the happy and ideal state of existence most people imagine."

"The fact is that when an English man and maiden fall in love they love to excess. They are so blindly devoted to each other that nothing else matters. After a period of courting—often too short to allow of a careful estimate of each other's character—they get married.

LOVE IS FLIMSY.

"Husband and wife dote on each other. They are in each other's thoughts every minute of the day, and in each other's company as often as possible.

"They live in this blissful state for a time—perhaps even for twelve months—and then what happens? 'Familiarity breeds contempt.' The inevitable reaction sets in, and husband and wife slowly but surely recognize that each is a bore to the other, that their love is flimsy, and fleeting, and that they have opposing interests. Then their life becomes one round of dull monotony and the acutest misery follows."

REV. JONATHAN GOFORTH TO CONDUCT SPECIAL SERVICES

A week of special services will be commenced in Peterborough on Sunday next in the interests of missions and mission work. Rev. Jonathan Goforth, who returned from Honan a few weeks ago, will be the chief speaker. He has been in the midst of the great revival in Manchuria, and is well acquainted with all the details. He has selected a number of centres in which to work, and will spend several days in each so that the outside churches may come in and hear the addresses. The object is to place before the people of Canada the facts of this great revival and to increase the interest in home countries in foreign missions.

On Sunday morning next Mr. Goforth will preach in St. Paul's church. In the afternoon at four o'clock a mass meeting will be held in St. Andrew's church, and at night Rev. Mr. Goforth will be in Knox church. Then every day for the rest of the week special services will be held in St. Paul's church at 3.03 p.m., and 7.45 p.m. All are invited to attend.

SUNDAY SERVICE WELL PATRONIZED

The Sunday trains on the C.P.R. are being well patronized, Peterborough people being among those to take advantage of the service.

PARK ST. 10, STRATHS. 8; T.A.S.A.C. 5, WEST ENDS 3

Second Series of Games in Senior City League Played Saturday—First Game Was Uninteresting, But Good Ball Was Played in Second Contest—Standing of the Teams.

The senior league games at Riverside Park were fairly well attended on Saturday, but the contests were not as well played as on the previous Saturday. The P.A.C. defeated the Strathconas in the first game by 10—8 and they were just as lucky to win as the Straths were unlucky to lose. Neither team produced the article of ball expected of them, and the result was a listless and uninteresting game. The struggle between the T. A. S. and West Ends helped a lot to make up for the erractic playing in the first exhibition and at the end of the nine innings the abstainers had put five men across the plate, while only three scored for the West Ends. Both Quinlan and Kirn twirled a fine game and were well supported by their team mates, who pulled off some pretty plays. Dan McCabe umpired both games and gave good satisfaction.

FIRST GAME.

"Aim high" is a good motto, but we must be careful to aim wisely as well as high. The Strathconas went to the field with the intention of following this old maxim, but while they "aimed high" alright, the latter part was not carried out by the players, who are now mourning the loss of their second game. Their battery was light, but at that the game should have been won, especially after getting four men across the plate in the first innings. But it was not to be for at critical points of the game the Straths were found wanting, and the P.A.C. men scored ten runs, while Bill Metheral's bunch were apparently satisfied to get eight. Both Patterson and Hickey took great pleasure in keeping Watty Parnell jumping like a two year old in an endeavor to locate their shoots behind the batters. Neither was hit hard, but wild plays were responsible for their downfall, as the said wild pegs came, as is generally the case when there were men on bases.

The P.A.C. team had Norman Dusty twirling and outside the first innings was on easy street. He had a number of wild pitches, but otherwise his control was good and was too much for the Strathconas.

A circus catch by Davidson was the only feature of the performance in the fielding line, but the players were fighting all the time and that counts a lot in the baseball game.

First innings. Straths scored four runs on a dead ball to Curtis, singles by Shaw, Weatherstone and Craig and a sacrifice fly by Kendrey.

P. A. C. scored two in their half. Pilling was safe at first, on a pass ball, Davidson lifted a long fly to Shaw, who dropped it. Pilling stole and came home on a wild heave. Davidson was out at second, after Coughlin hit to centre. The latter scored on a wild throw of Guerin's grounder by Patterson.

Second innings. Guerin fanned, Patterson walked. Curtis hit into a double play and there was nothing doing. Crowe hit for two bags, stole third and scored on a wild pitch. The next tw obatters were easy outs.

Third innings. Shaw, singled, and Kendrey hit for two bags and the former scored.

P.A.C. made two more runs in their half and tied the score.

Fourth innings. Patterson walked, Curtis hit to Guerin, who threw wild and Shaw's two bagger sent in two runs.

Park street got three in their half by some ragged playing bythe Straths.

Fifth innings. Hickey was sent in to replace Patterson and no runs were counted until the seventh, when Craig scored for his team.

But on two more wild throws the P.A.C. made two runs. No more scoring was done by either team.

The score—

SECOND GAME.

Kirn, for the West Ends, made a very creditable showing against Ab. Quinlan, and has no reason to be ashamed of his defeat. He had splendid control and was always reliable and especially so with men on bases. His team gave good support, but "muffs" told against him. Carton caught well and got under two hard high fouls in a manner pleasing to the fans. The infield played snappy ball, the work of Halpin and M.norgan being brilliant.

For the T. A. S. the batting and twirling of Quinlan were features. He smashed two pretty ones out to the left field fence, either of which looked good for the box of cigars, but fast fielding allowed but two bags on each. His shoots were not connected with very frequently, and McFadden at the receiving end helped a lot.

First innings—

West Ends—M.norgan grounded to Flaherty. Gibson received a free ticket. Halpin fanned and Dobson flew out to Callaghan. No runs.

T.A.S.—Doherty fanned, Callaghan singled. Derocher got to first on an error and Callaghan scored. O'Brien out, M.norgan to Rose. Quinlan struck out. One run.

Second innings—

West Ends—Carton and Fallon hit the air three times. Kirn made first and second. Rose was safe at first on an error. Craig was out, Quinlan to O'Brien.

T. A. S.—Flaherty fanned, M. O'Brien out, Halpin to Rose. Cahill singled, stole second and Carton threw wild to get the runner at third and he scored. McFadden out on a grounder to Halpin. One run.

Third innings—

West Ends—M.norgan missed three. Gibson was safe on an error, stole second and scored on a passed ball. One run.

T.A.S.—Doherty struck out. Callaghan lifted a high one to Halpin and Derocher fanned.

Fourth innings—

West Ends — Fallon walked, made second and third, and scored when McFadden missed the third strike on Kirn and threw to first. Rose was out on a grounder. Craig made a two-bagger, but M.norgan was out on a pop fly to Quinlan. one run.

T.A.S.—W. O'Brien fanned. Quinlan flew out to Fallon. Flaherty hit to centre, but the ball was dropped, and a wild throw let Quinlan get to third. M. O'Brien struck out.

Fifth innings—

West Ends—Gibson fanned. Halpin walked. Dobson struck out and Carton flew out to Flaherty.

T.A.S.—Cahill out to Halpin. McFadden struck out. Doherty singled. Callaghan missed three.

Sixth innings—

West Ends—Fallon flew out to Callaghan. Kirn fanned. Rose out at first.

T.A.S.—Derocher fanned. W. O'Brien hit to pitcher and made second on wild throws. Quinlan hit for two bases, scoring O'Brien. Flaherty popped to Rose. M. O'Brien was hit and Quinlan scored in the mix-up. W. O'Brien out at first. One run.

Seventh innings—

West Ends—Craig out bunting third. M.norgan fanned. Gibson hit to centre and stole second and third. Halpin walked. Dobson flew out to Flaherty.

T.A.S.—Cahill singled, stole second and third. McFadden bunted to M.norgan and made first and second. Callaghan hit to short and Cahill was out trying to score.

Eighth innings—

West Ends—Carton fanned. Fallon singled, but was out stealing second. Kirn struck out.

T.A.S.—W. O'Brien out on high foul to Carton. Quinlan hit for two smacks. Flaherty was hit. M. O'Brien out at first. Quinlan scored on a wild pitch. Cahill out to Carton.

Ninth innings—

West Ends—Rose out to Cahill to O'Brien. Craig hit to Doherty and was safe. M.norgan sacrificed and Craig scored. Gibson struck out. One run.

LARGER MILK YIELDS CAN BE OBTAINED

Why should cow testing be carried on? Mainly because individual cows in the same herd are likely to vary in production about as much as, sometimes much more than, individual cows in different breeds. Then too must be considered the strange variations in milk and fat from day to day even with a cow handled as carefully as possible. Such variations are very apt to be overlooked unless the record is carefully kept. Another point; two cows side by side, one gives 20 lbs milk a day, or 10 lbs at a milking, the other gives 9 lb The difference in weight, or the differences in bulk in the pail, especially if there is a lot of froth on top, is not easily gauged by the ordinary milker. But multiply that by the 300 days of a milking period and it is seen that one cow gives 600 more milk than the other. Yet the ordinary milker would have said, these two cows give "just about" the same. But is not the 600 extra lbs. worth having? Many members of the cow testing associations say that the hired man milks better, with more endeavor to milk clean, if the record hangs before him constantly, and an extra 500 lb. per cow has often been obtained since the introduction of the pencil and ruled sheets. Try it, not simply for the extra milk, or fat, but for the immense personal satisfaction in knowing that each cow is being made to do better, to do her best.

Think what it will mean when the new factories begin running; simply this, more families will of necessity move to the city, employment will be given to others in the city that need it and thus create a demand for homes either to rent or purchase in other words prosperity is bound to advance more or less in every portion of the city. ¶ People who are contemplating purchasing homes will do well to see J. ## MISSING PAPERS OF CHRIS. HOLLAND ARE DISCOVERED

Fraudulent Paper of Face Value of $135,000 Found in Old Rossin House, Toronto—Part of Stupendous Preparations Made by Convict to Cheat Toronto Banks Just Before He Left for the United States.

Toronto, June 15.—Earl Grey had one defender at the Toronto Methodist Conference yesterday afternoon, when the question of race-track bookmaking was before it.

The report of the committee on temperance, prohibition and moral reforms declared that the time had come for the enactment of a law abolishing barrooms, the treating system and drinking in clubs.

It urged Methodists to support local option bylaws and regretted the continuance of the three-fifths clause. The clause was decidedly objectionable.

The membership was called upon to petition the Ontario Government to limit the hours of sale of liquor to 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The report also urged legislation to empower municipalities to prohibit pool-rooms, five-cent shows and moving picture exhibitions of prize fights.

The report condemned the legalized race-track gambling and regretted that the Dominion Government had so far neglected to grant effective legislation. The report declared race-tracks to be a university of gambling and crime. It profoundly regretted that the Governor-General and others high in positions of honor had by their presence given countenance and support to a debasing evil, which permeated all classes of society in one form or another, and was a menace to the moral welfare of the nation.

The committee condemned military training in public schools declaring it to be the greatest mistake Canada could make to place the burden of militarism on the shoulders of the people.

The report was adopted with one dissentient vote, Rev. T. H. Nurgan protested again the conference censuring the personal conduct of the Governor-General.

WAS CRUELTY TO DEMAND PLEDGE

Mrs. Howard Gould Objected to Her Husband's Request

New York, June 15.—Abandonment will be the sole issue upon which the suit for separation brought by Katherine Clemmons Gould against her husband, Howard Gould, third son of the late Jay Gould, will be decided. This ruling was made late yesterday in the Supreme Court by Justice Dowling. This sweeps away the cruelty allegations.

"Howard Gould's attempt to have his wife pledge herself not to drink, in itself, constitutes cruelty," declared Clarence Shearn, Mrs. Gould's attorney, in resisting the limitation.

It was this clause in the agreement that had been asked the wife to sign before he would consent to live with her again, that Mrs. Gould most strongly objected to. "What," she had exclaimed earlier in the day, during cross-examination, "have me sign myself a drunkard? Never!"

Mrs. Gould testified that it was "very bad taste" to wear a gown twice.

"One of them," she said to counsel for Mr. Gould, "was given to your own sister, who is on the stage. I have aided many poor girls to get stage engagements by equipping them with my discarded gowns."

Mr. Gould said his income was $770,000.

LONGSHOREMEN TO GET INCREASE

Owen Sound, June 15.—The board of conciliation, consisting of Donald Ross, Barrie, chairman; Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, representing the C.P.R., and J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto representing the longshoremen, have forwarded their report to Ottawa, after hearing the evidence in connection with the application of the longshoremen for higher wages.

Recommendations for increases are, it is reported, made, in some cases the advance meaning from forty cents to sixty cents on a day's work. For some lines of work, it is said the men will receive twenty-three cents an hour for overtime and Sundays, and sixteen, seventeen and eighteen cents for other work, for which they are now receiving fifteen cents.

THIS POLICEMAN IS KIND FELLOW

Pittsburg, June 15.—Chief of Police A. McQuaide of this city asked to make a ruling against love-making in the many parks of Pittsburg, said: "Certainly not. Let us have more benches in the parks and nice cool spots where the young couples can go and sit down together and enjoy themselves. If they want to hug and kiss a little—why let them. It's nobody's business, and it's no harm. Let the young people have their fun, and make all the harmless love they like. Arrest the young American for kissing a pretty girl on the park benches. Well, not me."

DYNAMITING OUTRAGE AT THE CAPITAL

Ottawa, June 15.—A large frame building on the Montreal road, one mile from the city, was wrecked on Sunday night at 11.30 by a dynamite charge placed under one corner. The building was used as an hotel till the license was canceled, four years ago. The kitchen and an unoccupied room over it were demolished. Joseph Laporte, his wife and child, were in a room immediately adjacent, but were uninjured, as were Joseph Guisseaume and his three sons in another part of the building. Every window, however, was broken, and windows in houses within a radius of 200 yards were also wrecked.

It is thought the dynamite was secured from a nearby quarry.

ROAD TO BE TAKEN OVER

Bruce Mines and Algoma Railway to Pass in Hands of Syndicate

Boston, Mass., June 15.—Plans are about consummated whereby a syndicate of New York and Boston capitalists are to take over the Bruce Mines and Algoma Railway, with a charter and Government grants, running from the north shore of Lake Huron to Hudson's Bay.

The projectors are heavy lumber producers and will extend the road from its present terminus on into the great timber tracks of Ontario and the Northwest Territories.

Clinton Cowdy of Springfield, Mass., as attorney and agent for the bondholders protective committee of the road, is credited largely with bringing about the reorganization and sale.

At the last session of the Ontario Legislature the expired charter of this railway was restored and a land grant of 1,000 acres per mile for six miles, to carry the line into the lumber country. This railway was originally projected for 20 miles.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL ONLY HAS ONE TO DEFEND HIM

Toronto Conference Adopts Report of Committee Censuring Governor-General's Presence at Woodbine Race Track—Five Cent Shows on Proscribed List—Would Stop Sale of Liquor at 7 p.m.

Toronto, June 15.—A parcel containing $135,000 in checks, including six marked for a face value of $5,000 each, was found last night.

For a few minutes the man that discovered them had visions of a reward that would put him in clover.

A closer inspection, however, only went to indicate just how completely and elaborately Chris Holland, now serving a five-year term in Kingston for forgery, had prepared to swindle the Toronto bankers.

Among a number of unclaimed packages in the parcel room of the former Rossin House was discovered the bundle of bank books, check books, forged introductions and phoney marked checks affecting nearly every bank in the city.

Also, there was a rubber stamp manufactured by Sternberg, Philadelphia, reading "Imperial Bank of Canada, Yonge and Queen streets branch, accepted," and a smaller one, "Accepted Feb. 9, 1909." The ink pad was with them.

The documents would have been of great assistance to the detective department in clinching their case against Holland.

There are bank books on the Bank of British North America, Bank of Hamilton, Dominion Bank, Bank of Commerce, Bank of Nova Scotia, and Standard Bank, each opening an account for David Newhall, the alias under which Holland operated, and each opening an account on Feb. 11, 1909, for sums of between $9,990 and $10,000.

Holland was arrested in Philadelphia early in the year after he had failed in his attempts to cash in on even one of his bogus creations. He strenuously resisted extradition, and in court pleaded not guilty until the evidence became so conclusive that he threw up his hands and admitted the charges against him.

The one thing which has remained a mystery is Holland's motive in the operation of his swindle, which this find proves to have been even more gigantic than at first supposed. The most astute minds have failed to see where this clever criminal hoped to turn all these foundations for fraud into actual cash. Even when Holland held in his hand a genuinely marked check for $5,000 he did not cash it, but walked out of the bank, and that night left the city. Perhaps he lost his nerve.

Holland throughout his trial and even since his conviction and sentence has steadfastly refused to disclose the hiding place of these bank books although the police knew of and proved the deposits.

All day yesterday the girl has been resting on a heavy mattress with a double set of springs, and tied in such a manner thats he cannot move a muscle.

In the meantime she is being dosed with chemicals in an effort to dissolve the explosive. Unless she explodes in a day's time the doctors hope the explosive will have become dissolved and the girl be out of danger.

IT WILL BRING CHURCH UNION

Necessity will bring Church Union. The supply of clergymen is running short. At almost every gathering of members of the different churches in conference, the under-supply of clergy is the subject of lament. Not being mere doctrinaires in politics, trade or religion, the people of the west go straight to the point and the paucity of clergy not prompting them to sacrifice the aim and end of missions to an idea, impels them to unite several churches under one minister, which liberates the others for work that is waiting. The town of Frobisher, Saskatchewan, had a population of about 100, not less than three clergy attended to the needs of the Protestant population. The townspeople "got tired," as they said, of such goings-on, and called a general meeting, which dealt with the matter in a more sensible way. A union church was formed, in spite of the protests of the non-essentialists. Other towns in the west are following the example and thus the very weakness of the church is being turned into its strength, the fewness of its training clergy is bringing about the fulness of time, the union of hearts and hands, the declaring to the world that Christians really can love one another and can abide in unity of faith, and in the happiness of a general concord. The loss of power or influence in the Protestant Church amongst its own people has become very great, and is due, as these meetings everywhere indicate, to the intrusion of a decidedly human factor into the domain of Faith that is working its ruin and the spiritual ruin of mankind. The idea that the Christian faith can best be typified by inconsistencies is the idea that is holding men aloof from the churches and making the membership returns a cause of amazement and regret. The making a business of religion has resulted in spiritual bankruptcy, and the idea that a successful mission is a rich one has undermined the feelings and respect of the people at large. If conversion really makes people new creatures they should remember the test. Too much of it is selling at ten cents on the dollar. Yet we are expressly told that God's ways are NOT our ways.

TOO LATE

The Peterborough Review seems to think that in pointing out the significance of the establishment of a town near the shores of Lake Abitibi the Globe reflected on the importance of Prince Rupert and the building of the Transcontinental. We cannot be responsible for the erratic cerebral processes of the Review. It is sufficient to say that there would not have been a town established near Abitibi but for the construction of the new ocean-to-ocean route—Globe.

Oh! Oh!

The Globe now comes forward with a modification of its article on the Abitibi town, not timely but too late. That venerable journal distinctly said in so many words which we quoted at the time that the founding of this town was more important to Ontario than many Prince Ruperts with which we agreed. To come forward now with the remark that but for the G. T.P. the New Ontario town would not have been built, even if it were true, does not alter our contention, viz., that the development of our own province is of vastly greater importance to us than a port on the Pacific, at this stage in our national life. The Globe's mistake was not one of fact, but merely of special pleading and this reminds us of the box the lawyer got into who forgot which client he was pleading for and secured damages against his client instead of against the other man.

PROF. KILPATRICK AND THE PRESS

Rev. Professor Kilpatrick remarked during the course of his account of "New Life in the Kootenay" on Sunday evening at Knox church that revivals "out there" were not well reported by the press, the gentlemen of the press not being as a rule, spiritually-minded. It will be found on a careful investigation that where there is real merit the members of the press are instant—quick to see it and to report it. Living amidst alarms and constantly confronted by shams both lay and clerical—for there are a few of both—the press gets very discriminating and, strange to say, thinks least of those who advertise themselves most. It will be admitted, however, that this is no low spiritual standard. True merit neither needs nor wants to make itself known. Its inherent power, both spiritual and mental, is enough for all such purposes. Men of such a noble sort are aided and abetted in a number of ways, often small, but always helpful, by the real "gentlemen of the press" who are quite well able to distinguish between Hob and Nob Surely that is not being unspiritually-minded. That the press does not enjoy a revivalistic hullabaloo is, as a rule, true. Such things are a confession of the weakness of the ordinary everyday ministers of the church as a means of grace, and such a confession is not a pleasant one. It sometimes happens, also, that revivalists have bad records. That a bad man can be the divine instrument of a great good, we decline to believe. The scepticism of some members of the press may be thus accounted for. It has been said that the kingdom cometh not with observation—possibly, also without uproar and advertising. We never yet understood that the Creator wished to advertise Heaven by posters, hand-bills and reading boosters, as if it were a circus or a departmental store.

EDITORIAL NOTES

French Canada is turning the back of her hand to Old France just now. The tricolor, the flag of the Revolution, was rarely seen in the St. Jean Baptiste celebration of Sunday in Montreal. It used to far outnumber the Union Jack.

Panama hats are made in Colombia, Peru, and Ecuador, but never in Panama, says the Scientific American. The value of a Panama hat is chiefly the cost of the labor expended in making it, for the value of raw material never exceeds thirty-five cents, and averages less than thirteen cents. The labor is exceedingly cheap, but a great deal of it goes to the making of a hat. It takes a man, working six hours a day, six or seven days to make a common hat, worth a dollar. Two weeks are required to make a hat of better grade, worth from $1.25 to $3, and six weeks to make a fine hat, worth $20.

In making a fine Panama hat the straw is never dampened, and consequently the work can be done only when the air is very moist, that is to say, early in the morning and in the evening. The straw used for cheap hats is kept wet, so that the work can be carried on during a greater number of hours per day.

OF INTEREST

Recollections of Sixty Years

Sir Squire Bancroft and Lady Bancroft have just published their "Recollections of Sixty Years" under the title "The Bancrofts"—John Murray 15s. net.—and in it we get an admirable and intimate picture of stage-life.

To the player the stage is anything but "a life that is not real," but to the spectator few things are more refreshing and stimulating than a good play, well mounted and well acted. And if we only had as many men who could write good plays as there are men and women who could act them the stage would be even more popular to-day than it is.

Mr. Gladstone was of those who found refreshment in the play and a letter is quoted from him by the Bancrofts in which he thanked them for placing the Royal box at his disposal instead of some rather ill-placed stalls which were all that could be given to him.

"You secured to me," he said, "the fulness of a great treat, which otherwise declining powers of sight and hearing would somewhat have impaired."

It is interesting to be reminded that it was with the Bancrofts that Mr. Pinero acted in his pre-playwright days and a letter by him gives one some understanding of what the modern stage owes to the Bancrofts—

"The present advanced condition of of the English stage— throwing as it does a clear, natural light upon the manners of life and people, where a few years ago there was nothing but mouthing and tinsel—is due to the crusade begun by Mrs. Bancroft and yourself in your little Prince of Wales Theatre. When the history of the stage and its progress is adequately and faithfully written Mrs. Bancroft's name and your own must be recorded with honor and gratitude.'

Such was Mr. Pinero's testimony, and it was confirmed by the Telegraph when they made their last appearance in management on July 20, 1885:—

"Only those playgoers who were familiar with the state of the stage before the Prince of Wales Theatre revolutionized our English dramatic system had any idea of what our management had done towards the furthering of the better condition of things that was now enjoyed. It was in that little theatre that attention was first directed to the naturalness of scenery and to the soft effect and comfort of set scenes representing interiors."

The Daily News of that day recalled how twenty years before it had been the common canon of theatrical management that there could not again be any original English plays. They had gone out with the days of Sheridan. "The Bancrofts had the courage to break away from the bondage of this absurd superstition." "We had," says the Bancrofts, "attained our celebrity by the production of pieces which which were genuinely English and came straight out of the ways of English life. We had made their people move and think and demean themselves just as English people of the class represented would do in their English homes."

A FORTUNE ON THE STAGE.

Sir Squire Bancroft was born in 1841, and to-day, therefore, is only sixty-eight, and yet he was able to retire when he was but forty-four on the profits of twenty years of management.

He says that "the nightly expenses of the old Prince of Wales Theatre never exceeded £70; at the Haymarket when we began there they reached £100, and had increased by the end of our stay to £120. £12,000 was spent at various times in altering and decorating the little old theatre; £30,000 in the same way at the Haymarket. The net profit on the twenty years' management exceeded the sum of $180,000." On the revival of "Money" they realised £5,000, and £10,000 on the revival of "School."

Why, then, did they retire so soon? Sir Squire says that "the reason we felt the most was the difficulty, through keener, ever-increasing opposition, of keeping together what for many years had been a picked company. The stage abounds with talent, but, though changed conditions, much of that talent is scattered about, both at home and in other lands, and cannot any longer be concentrated as in our day.

SYNDICATES AND THE STAGE

"I feel that, in the main, it must be injurious to find so many theatres, both here and in America, controlled by powerful and wealthy syndicates.

"The owners of the heavy purses which provide the large capital involved are not expected to look beyond their pockets," says Sir Squire, and adds, "With every apology to my clever and good-natured friend, whose name is parodied, I ask to be forgiven for saving from oblivion a witty remark from a brilliant tongue—that the stage could not really advance until we saw the "decline and fall of the (F)ro(h)man empire." "

Here is a delightful story of how a great actor distributed his surplus earnings:—

AN ACTOR'S £1,000.

After Bancroft had given up management Irving insisted on his playing the part of Abbe Latour in "The Dead Heart." This Bancroft at last decided to do as a labour of love. Irving, however, insisted on paying him special terms.

"The money, which I arranged with the treasurer, should be in bank notes, was," says Bancroft, "regularly put aside by me into a drawer of my desk. My income was fixed and ample; I did not wish, I dare say very foolishly, to upset things by spending considerably more in one year than in others; and so eventually I gave £1,000 of the amount to the 'Darkest England' scheme, propounded soon afterwards by General Booth, and the rest of the money to similar objects. The first action proved to be one of the torments of my life, as I have since been asked to subscribe to every charity under the sun—or in the shade."

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 14.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards' West End Market, the receipts of livestock for the week ending June 12, were 2250 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1650 hogs and 1000 calves, while the offerings for local consumption this morning were 1000 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 100 calves. A feature this morning was the fact that fully 75 per cent. of the cattle offered were grassers, which is the first fair run of this class of stock this season, and considering average quality and condition prices were high. The market was by no means as strong as it has been of late, owing to the fact that the supply was much larger and this, coupled with hot, muggy weather, tended to check the demand some. Cable advices from Liverpool were stronger and noted an advance of ¼c to ½c per pound, with trade firm, but there was little demand from exporters here on account of quality and high prices. Extra choice steers sold at 6¾c, choice at 6¼c to 6½c, good at 5¾c to 6c, fair at 5¼c to 5½c; medium at 4¾c to 5c, and the common at 4c to 4½c per lb. Hog prices were about steady under a fair demand and supplies were ample. Good trade was done at $8.50 per cwt. for selected lots, weighed off the cars. Cable advices from Liverpool, London and Bristol on Saturday on Canadian bacon noted a decline of 1s to 2s per cwt. Supplies of small meats were fair, for which the demand was not very urgent. Prices sheep ruled lower with sales at 4c to 5c per lb. Spring lambs were steady at from $3 to $6 each, and calves from $1.50 to $6. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market receipts for the week ending June 12 were 1286 cattle for export account, and 800 cattle, 185 sheep and lambs, 500 hogs and 1333 calves for local consumption. The supply this morning consisted of 300 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 325 hogs and 300 calves. Exports for the week were 2277 cattle.

CHAPTER IX.

THE next day saw me at police headquarters begging an interview from the inspector, with the intention of confiding to him a theory which must either cost me his sympathy or open the way to a new inquiry, which I felt sure would lead to Mr. Durand's complete exoneration.

I chose this gentleman for my confidant from among all those with whom I had been brought in contact by my position as witness in a case of this magnitude, first, because he had been present at the most tragic moment of my life, and, secondly, because I was conscious of a sympathetic bond between us which would insure me a kind hearing. However ridiculous my idea might appear to him, I was assured that he would treat me with consideration and not visit whatever folly I might be guilty of on the head of him for whom I risked my reputation for good sense.

Nor was I disappointed in this. Inspector Dalzell's air was fatherly and his tone altogether gentle as, in reply to my excuses for troubling him with my opinions, he told me that in a case of such importance he was glad to receive the impressions even of such a prejudiced little partisan as myself. The word fired me, and I spoke.

"You consider Mr. Durand guilty, and so do many others, I fear, in spite of his long record for honesty and uprightness. And why? Because you will not admit the possibility of another person's guilt—a person standing so high in private and public estimation that the very idea seems preposterous and little short of insulting to the country of which he is an acknowledged ornament."

"My dear!"

The inspector had actually risen. His expression and whole attitude showed shock. But I did not quail; I only subdued my manner and spoke with quieter conviction.

"I am aware," said I, "how words so daring must impress you. But listen, sir; listen to what I have to say before you utterly condemn me. I acknowledge that it is the frightful position into which I threw Mr. Durand by my officious attempt to right him which has driven me to make this second effort to fix the crime on the only other man who had possible access to Mrs. Fairbrother at the fatal moment. How could I live in inaction? How could you expect me to weigh for a moment this foreigner's reputation against that of my own lover? If I have reasons"—

"Reasons!"

—"reasons which would appeal to all. If instead of this person's having an international reputation at his back he had been a simple gentleman like Mr. Durand would you not consider me entitled to speak?"

"Certainly, but"—

"You have no confidence in my reasons, inspector. They may not weigh against that splash of blood on Mr. Durand's shirt front, but such as they are I must give them. But first it will be necessary for you to accept for the nonce Mr. Durand's statements as true. Are you willing to do this?"

"I will try."

"Then a harder thing yet, to put some confidence in my judgment. I saw the man and did not like him long before any intimation of the evening's tragedy had turned suspicion on any one. I watched him as I watched others. I saw that he had not come to the ball to please Mr. Ramsdell or for any pleasure he himself hoped to reap from social intercourse, but for some purpose much more important and that this purpose was connected with Mrs. Fairbrother's diamond. Indifferent, almost morose before she came upon the scene, he brightened to a surprising extent the moment he found himself in her presence, not because she was a beautiful woman, for he scarcely honored her face or even her superb figure with a look. All his glances were centered on her large fan, which in swaying to and fro alternately hid and revealed the splendor on her breast, and when by chance it hung suspended for a moment in her forgetful hand, and he caught a full glimpse of the great gem, I perceived such a change in his face that, if nothing more had occurred that night to give prominence to this woman and her diamond, I should have carried home the conviction that interests of no common import lay behind a feeling so extraordinarily displayed."

"Fanciful, my dear Miss Van Arsdale! Interesting, but fanciful."

"I know. I have not yet touched on fact. But facts are coming, inspector."

He stared. Evidently he was not accustomed to hear the law laid down in this fashion by a midget of my proportions.

"Go on," said he. "Happily, I have no clerk here to listen."

"I would not speak if you had. These are words for but one ear as yet. Not even my uncle suspects the direction of my thoughts."

"Proceed," he again enjoined.

Upon which I plunged into my subject.

"Mrs. Fairbrother wore the real diamond, and no imitation, to the ball. Of this I feel sure. The bit of glass or paste displayed to the coroner's jury was bright enough, but it was not the star of light I saw burning on her breast as she passed me on her way to the alcove."

"Miss Van Arsdale!"

"The interest which Mr. Durand displayed in it, the marked excitement into which he was thrown by his first view of its size and splendor, confirm in my mind the evidence which he gave on oath (and he is a well-known diamond expert, you know, and must have been very well aware that he would injure rather than help his cause by this admission) that at that time he believed the stone to be real and of immense value. Wearing such a gem, then, she entered the fatal alcove, and with a smile on her face prepared to employ her fascinations on whoever chanced to come within their reach. But now something happened. Please let me tell it my own way. A shout from the driveway, or a bit of snow thrown against the window, drew her attention to a man standing below, holding up a note fastened to the end of a whip handle. I do not know whether or not you have found that man. If you have"— The inspector made no sign. "I judge that you have not, so I may go on with my suppositions. Mrs. Fairbrother took in this note. She may have expected it and for this reason chose the alcove to sit in, or it may have been a surprise to her. Probably we shall never know the whole truth about it; but what we can know and do, if you are still holding to our compact and viewing this crime in the light of Mr. Durand's explanations, is that it made a change in her and made her anxious to rid herself of the diamond. It has been decided that the hurried scrawl should read, 'Take warning. He means to be at the ball. Expect trouble if you do not give him the diamond,' or something to that effect.

"But why was it passed up to her unfinished? Was the haste too great? I hardly think so. I believe in another explanation which points with startling directness to the possibility that the person referred to in this broken communication was not Mr. Durand, but one whom I need not name, and that the reason you have failed to find the messenger, of whose appearance you have received definite information, is that you have not looked among the servants of a certain distinguished visitor in town. Oh," I burst forth with feverish volubility, as I saw the inspector's lips open in what could not fail to be a sarcastic utterance, "I know what you feel tempted to reply. Why should a servant deliver a warning against his own master? If you will be patient with me, you will soon see, but first I wish to make clear that Mrs. Fairbrother, having received this warning just before Mr. Durand appeared in the alcove—reckless, scheming woman that she was—sought to rid herself of the object against which it was directed in the way we have temporarily accepted as true. Relying on her arts and possibly misconceiving the nature of Mr. Durand's interest in her, she hands over the diamond hidden in her rolled up gloves, which he without suspicion carries away with him, thus linking himself indissolubly to a great crime of which another was the perpetrator. That other, or so I believe from my very heart of hearts, was the man I saw leaning against the wall at the foot of the alcove a few minutes before I passed into the supper room."

I stopped with a gasp, hardly able to meet the stern and forbidding look with which the inspector sought to restrain what he evidently considered the senseless ravings of a child. But I had come there to speak, and I hastily proceeded before the rebuke thus expressed could formulate itself into words.

"I have some excuse for a declaration so monstrous. Perhaps I am the only person who can satisfy you in regard to a certain fact about which you have expressed some curiosity. Inspector, have you ever solved the mystery of the two broken coffee cups found among the debris at Mrs. Fairbrother's feet? It did not come out in the inquest, I noticed."

"Not yet," he cried, "but—you cannot tell me anything about them!"

"Possibly not. But I can tell you this: When I reached the supper room door that evening I looked back and, providentially or otherwise—only the future can determine that—detected Mr. Grey in the act of lifting two cups from a tray left by some waiter on a table standing just outside the reception room door. I did not see where he carried them. I only saw his face turned toward the alcove, and as there was no other lady there or anywhere near there I have dared to think"—

Here the inspector found speech.

"You saw Mr. Grey lift two cups and turn toward the alcove at a moment we all know to have been critical? You should have told me this before. He may be a possible witness."

I scarcely listened. I was too full of my own argument.

"There were other people in the hall, especially at my end of it. A perfect throng was coming from the billiard room, where the dancing had been, and it might easily be that he could both enter and leave that secluded spot without attracting attention. He had shown too early and much too unmistakably his lack of interest in the general company for his every movement to be watched as at his first arrival. But this is simple conjecture. What I have to say next is evidence. The stiletto—have you studied it, sir? I have, from the pictures. It is very quaint, and among the devices on the handle is one that especially attracted my attention. See! This is what I mean." And I handed him a drawing which I had made with some care in expectation of this very interview.

He surveyed it with some astonishment.

"I understand," I pursued in trembling tones, for I was much affected by my own daring, "that no one has so far succeeded in tracing this weapon to its owner. Why didn't your experts study heraldry and the devices of great houses? They would have found that this one is not unknown in England. I can tell you on whose blazon it can often be seen and so could—Mr. Grey."

He surveyed it with some astonishment.

CHAPTER X.

I WAS not the only one to tremble now. This man of infinite experience and daily contact with crime had turned as pale as ever I myself had done in face of a threatening calamity.

"I shall see about this," he muttered, crumpling the paper in his hand. "But this is a very terrible business you are plunging me into. I sincerely hope that you are not heedlessly misleading me."

"I am correct in my facts, if that is what you mean," said I. "The stiletto is an English heirloom and bears on its blade, among other devices, that of Mr. Grey's family on the female side. But that is not all I want to say. If the blow was struck to obtain the diamond, the shock of not finding it on his victim must have been terrible. Now, Mr. Grey's heart, if my whole theory is not utterly false, was set upon obtaining this stone. Your eye was not on him as mine was when you made your appearance in the hall with the recovered jewel. He showed astonishment, eagerness and a determination which finally led him forward as you know with the request to take the diamond in his hand. Why did he want to take it in his hand? And why, having taken it, did he drop it—a diamond supposed to be worth an ordinary man's fortune? Because he was startled by a cry he chose to consider the traditional one of his family proclaiming death? Is it likely, sir? Is it conceivable even that any such cry as we heard could, in this day and generation, ring through such an assemblage, unless it came with ventriloquial power from his own lips? You observed that he turned his back; that his face was hidden from us. Discreet and reticent as we have all been and careful in our criticisms of so bizarre an event, there still must be many to question the reality of such superstitious fears and some to ask if such a sound could be without human agency and a very guilty agency too. Inspector, I am but a child in your estimation, and I feel my position in this matter much more keenly than you do, but I would not be true to the man whom I have unwittingly helped to place in his present unenviable position if I did not tell you that in my judgment this cry was a spurious one, employed by the gentleman himself as an excuse for dropping the stone."

"And why should he wish to drop the stone?"

"Because of the fraud he meditated. Because it offered him an opportunity for substituting a false stone for the real. Did you not notice a change in the aspect of this jewel dating from this very moment? Did it shine with as much brilliancy in your hand when you received it back as when you passed it over?"

"Nonsense! I do not know; it is all too absurd for argument." Yet he did stop to argue, saying in the next breath: "You forget that the stone has a setting. Would you claim that this gentleman of family, place and political distinction had planned this hideous crime with sufficient premeditation to have provided himself with the exact counterpart of a brooch which it is highly improbable he ever saw? You would make him out a Cagliostro or something worse. Miss Van Arsdale, I fear your theory will topple over of its own weight."

He was very patient with me; he did not show me the door.

"Yet such a substitution took place, and took place that evening," I insisted. "The bit of paste shown us at the inquest was never the gem Mrs. Fairbrother wore on entering the alcove. Besides, where all is sensation, why cavil at one more improbability? Mr. Grey may have come over to America for no other reason. He is known as a collecter, and when a man has a passion for diamond getting"—

"He is known as a collector?"

"In his own country."

"I was not told that."

"Nor I. But I found it out."

"How, my dear child, how?"

"By a cablegram or so."

"You—cabled—his name—to England?"

"No, inspector; uncle has a code, and I made use of it to ask a friend in London for a list of the most noted diamond fanciers in the country. Mr. Grey's name was third on the list."

He gave me a look in which admiration was strangely blended with doubt and apprehension.

"You are making a brave struggle," said he, "but it is a hopeless one."

THAT AWFUL PAIN IN THE BACK

Is a Sure Sign of Congestion of the Kidneys. Take "Fruit-a-tives."

Lots of men, and women too, are limping about the house—groaning in easy chairs—or tossing about the bed—because of that nagging pain in the back. The old standbys—hot vinegar, porous plasters, liniments, etc.,—don't do any good any more. You see, you are a bit older now. The kidneys are not as strong as they used to be. And even those "blistering" liniments and plasters won't stimulate the kidneys.

Your trouble is kidney trouble. The kidneys are not diseased, they are overworked and strained. The bowels and skin—which help the kidneys to rid the system of waste matter—have not been doing their share of the work. The kidneys have had to do too much.

What you need is a medicine to cure the bowels, liver and skin. This medicine must cure the Constipation by acting on the liver and thus make the bowels move regularly and naturally. This medicine must heal and strengthen the kidneys, and thus relieve the congestion. "Fruit-a-tives" is this medicine. It is the most effective Kidney Remedy known, and keeps these vital organs in a vigorous, healthy condition. For aged people, for those who work hard, for tired-out women, "Fruit-a-tives" never fail to stop that severe pain in the back and build up the whole system. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Dr. Ami Retires.

Otawa, June 15.—Dr. Henry M. Ami of the technical staff of the Geological Survey of Canada, after a continuous service of 28 years, retires at the end of the month into private life on his physicians' advice.

Research work has been carried on by him in England, France and Switzerland. He has published many papers and reports on the palaeontology and stratigraphy of Eastern Canada, besides contributing numerous articles to contemporary papers.

FIGHTING THE GADFLY.

Breeder's Plan of Protecting His Flock From This Pest.

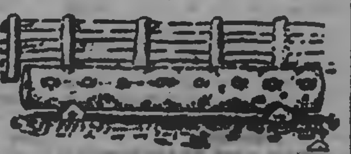
Sheep suffer considerably from the gadfly. A common way to prevent this fly from working on them is to smear the nose with a compound of grease and tar. This is applied with a brush. When there are many sheep of course this plan would not be feasible, and dipping would probably repel the fly so long as the odor of the dip was strong on the fleece. As the odor will not continue to be an effective repellent throughout the season and as the fly is active until late in the summer, a more effective treatment is necessary.

A breeder recommends the plan of boring holes in a log and placing salt in these holes, which, of course, should be about the size of a sheep's nose. The log is set up on blocks, as shown in the illustration. A small tuft of rag or rope is tacked at the upper edge of the hole, and every time the sheep are salted tar is smeared on this tuft. While no doubt the tar is disagreeable to sheep, in their avidity to get the salt they will get more or less of the tar smeared on their noses.



A SALTER AND TAR SPREADER.

At this time it might be well to describe the symptoms indicating the presence of the gadfly in the flock. When attacked the sheep generally rushes toward the flock with its nose close to the ground. It shakes its head violently and sneezes. This is due to the sting caused by the gadfly in the nostril in its effort to get a foothold and deposit its eggs. The eggs remain in the nasal cavities of the head until mature, when, according to those who have worked out the life of this fly, it falls out of the nostril and completes development in the soil. Where a sheep's head contains a number of larvae a catarrhal discharge will be noticed coming from the nose. In bad cases the sheep is inclined to lie down and point its nose into the air and is also restless and unthrifty.

THE VETERINARY.

For inflamed udders in milk cows try rubbing with a mixture of lard and common salt, using about as much as the lard will take up.

Protecting Cattle From Flies.

One gallon of crude petroleum, one-half gallon of kerosene, one-half gallon of fish oil and one cupful of crude carbolic acid mixed together and applied in a spray over the cows at least once a day will protect them from the torture of the flies.

Founder In Horses.

When a horse becomes suddenly stiff or sore and tender forward it is due usually to founder. A large tablespoonful of alum will, it is claimed, cure founder. Put it on a long handled spoon and deposit it on the tongue as far down the throat as possible. The horse usually swallows it without disturbance. It should be in the powdered form and moistened.

Remedies For Lice and Mange.

Keep an eye out for lice, mange and other troubles of this kind which appear about this time of year. Mange is not especially serious, but stock affected get off in condition and lose flesh. One part of pure carbolic acid to thirty-five parts hot water will destroy lice on cattle. Apply hot with a sponge every two or three days. The coal tar products are excellent for the skin troubles.

Worms In Colts.

For intestinal worms in colts the following mixture is used by some veterinarians: Mix together as a base one pound each of salt and granulated sugar. In this mix one-half pound of tobacco dust or fine cut tobacco, four ounces of sulphate of iron powder and six ounces of powdered worm seed. Give a heaping teaspoonful in the feed at first once a day, then twice a day and keep up for three weeks.

A Remedy For Cowpox.

Cowpox is a contagious disease. If it breaks out in the stable remove those affected at once from the stable and let them be fed and milked by an outside helper. The remedy is to mix three teaspoonfuls of coal oil in one pound of hot lard and rub on the teats after each milking. The teats should be washed with warm water and castile soap, wiped dry with a soft cloth and then well greased. If teats are much inflamed draw the milk with the silver milk tube. Give each cow with the disease one-half ounce of sulphite of soda twice a day in the mixed feed. This will purify the blood. Be sure to get sulphite of soda and not sulphate.

A Woman's Sympathy

Are you discouraged? Is your doctor's bill a heavy financial load? Is your pain a heavy physical burden? I know what these mean to delicate women—I have been discouraged, too; but learned how to cure myself. I want to relieve your burdens. Why not end the pain and stop the doctor's bill? I can do this for you and will if you will assist me.

All you need do is to write for a free box of the remedy which has been placed in my hands to be given away. Perhaps this one box will cure you—it has done so for others. If so, I shall be happy and you will be cured for 2c (the cost of a postage stamp). Your letters held confidentially. Write to-day for my free treatment. MRS. F. E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

FORMER PETERBORO' BOY TELLS ABOUT CHICAGO

Last night's Toronto Star says:—Mr. A. D. Browne, assistant general manager of the Chicago papers, the Western, British-American and the Canadian American is staying at the Walker House.

Mr. Browne is an old Peterborough boy who has been in the newspaper business in Chicago for 22 years. He got his first experience on the Peterborough Review.

"We have over 100,000 Canadians in Chicago," said Mr. Browne to the Star this morning, "and over 250,000 English, Scotch and Canadians.

"We have over 80 British and Canadian societies, including the British Empire Association.

"Canadians and Britishers man the important positions in the Chicago telephone companies, the Edison companies and the banks," continued Mr. Browne. "Canadians are at a premium in Chicago, even if they are still intensely loyal to the old flag."

Mr. Browne cannot help speaking of the wonderful strides of Chicago's development.

"It is possible to ride in an automobile all day on Chicago's boulevards," he said, "and not go over the same ground twice. Building space is worth its surface in gold. Chicago would not leave Toronto's burnt area lying idle. It would have been covered with tall buildings the year after the fire."

PASSENGER WITHOUT TICKET PUT OFF GRAND TRUNK TRAIN

Mr. Wm. Crozier, the popular and obliging G.T.R. conductor on the local running between Lindsay and Belleville, had rather an amusing time on the down trip yesterday. While Billy attends strictly to business and the comfort of the passengers, he has the reputation of never missing an opportunity of participating in a practical joke, when such is possible, and in this way, has often given pleasure to the passengers, as well as having a good laugh himself. Shortly after the train had pulled out of Lindsay and while he was engaged in taking up the tickets, he noticed a "traveller" that was attracting considerable attention and no slight amusement to the passengers.

The conductor sized up the situation and when the collection of all the tickets had been made, he hastily approached the crew in the baggage car "Say fellows," he said, "I've got a traveller here who has no ticket and absolutely refuses to pay his fare; he looks as if he would be a pretty tough customer to handle, but I think between us we can manage him all right."

While the crew stood around with eagerness in their eyes, it was arranged that when the train arrived at Reaboro station he would be put off, and as the train slowed down the crew were seen to enter the rear coach, with determination in their eyes, chests well inflated, and considerable swagger in their walk, and with a general "England expects every man to do his duty" air about them.

"Which one of these fellows is it," said "Frank," in a hoarse whisper, and with a belligerent glare at the male section of the passengers."

"You go forward," commanded the conductor, "and Scotty, you stand to the rear. Are you ready? Now, there's your man looking out of the window."

Behold it was a young robin, poorly clad, and not old enough to be familiar with the world's way of doing things as yet, and did not know what was to be expected of it when it came to ride on "Billy" Crozier's Special Limited.

The crew hastily made their sneak and to-day are vowing vengeance on the conductor, and say they will get even with him the first opportunity.

How Some Peterborough People Signed the Government Pay-roll

Some thirty persons from Peterborough and vicinity signed the civil service register at Ottawa last week and managed to get on the government pay-roll without an examination or political pull. But under the circumstances they do not deserve much credit. And thereon hangs a tale, as W. Shakespeare and somes lesser literary luminaries were wont to remark.

Some twenty-five or thirty of those who went to Ottawa on the Farmers' Institute excursion were having a look through one of the many offices of the Department of Agriculture. On a desk in the room was the employees' register in which the civil servants of the branch in question write their names every day when they come to work. The Peterborough delegation arrived at the conclusion that the book was a visitors' register and the information comes from an authentic source that every one of the party recorded his or her name in the leather-bound volume.

Then they passed on to view other sights.

NEWS OF DEATH OF MR. A. L. DAVIS RECEIVED WITH REGRET

Toronto, June 15—Mr. A. L. Davis, President of the Imperial Guarantee and Accident Company died at his home yesterday afternoon after an illness of several weeks' duration. Mr. Davis was for many years prominently identified with the business life of Peterborough of which he was three times elected Mayor, before leaving for Toronto, some five years ago, to organize and assume the active management of the company named. Mr. Davis was a son in law of Senator George A. Cox, having some years ago married his eldest daughter, who survives him.

The news of the death of Mr. Davis was received with deep regret in Peterborough. During his long residence here he had been prominently identified with the affairs of the city and the confidence the citizens had in him was shown by his election to the city council and to the chief magistrateship of the city.

The late Mr. Davis was the son of a Methodist minister, Rev. George Davis, and before entering the insurance business conducted a bookstore in this city.

Mr. Davis was superintendent of Charlotte street Sunday School for several years and also leader of the choir and during nearly all his residence in Peterborough was an active member of the trustee board and also quarterly official board, both offices being filled with faithfulness till the time of his removal to Toronto.

A representation from the boards of the Charlotte street church will attend the funeral in Toronto tomorrow.

The party includes visiting gentlemen from Illinois and Montreal and during the ten days of the trip other visitors will arrive from a distance and this yearly outing of the club promises to be very enjoyable. The object of the trip is to "hook" some if not all of the finny tribe at which all the members are experts, and as has been in the past many wondrous stories are likely to be told on their return to the city.

The more you know about tea, the more you will appreciate the delicate fragrance and delicious flavor of "Salada" Tea.

Poll Tax

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The letter of "Puzzler" reminds me that three years ago I had to pay the poll tax, but not since. I know no reason why. I have the highest legal authority that action should not be taken in the police court but in the division court for non-payment of poll tax.

Yours truly,
A VICTOR.

The Picture Shows

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—"Merchant," writing in the Morning Times says the picture shows are an evil and should be charged a high license, say $2,000 per year. He claims they pick up all the small change of the working people.

Now, just a word in reference to the above. If the working people are willing to pay out their small change in return for amusement what business is it of "Merchant's?" People nowadays must have amusement, as well as food and clothes, and when they get it for five cents for three-quarters of an hour's entertainment the "evil" is not apparent. No doubt "Merchant" believes he would get a few more nickles if there were no five-cent shows. He must be a small-souled creature to take that view of the case. Why not license everyone who deals in luxuries?

Yours,

OBITUARY

LATE ALEXANDER BRADBURN.

Manvers township lost one of her pioneer settlers on Sunday, June 13, when Alexander Bradburn passed away after a couple of weeks' illness. He was seventy-nine years of age at the time of his death and had lived in that vicinity for 60 years.

The deceased, through his honest, integrity and benevolent nature had formed a large circle of friends throughout the township and county surrounding and his death will be mourned by many.

The late Mr. Bradburn was born in county Cavan, Ireland, and came to Canada when but a youth. He worked in Manvers township and finally cleared and settled on a farm there—the present homestead where his death took place. Industry and toil transformed a wilderness into a thriving farm. He married Mary Ann, daughter of John Peel, of Cartwright, and together they enjoyed and endured the smiles and frowns of life for many years. His wife still survives.

The children now living are:—George, James, Edwin and John, all of Janetville vicinity; Mrs. Samuel Stinson, of Manvers; Mrs. William Irvine, Peterborough, and Mrs. Geo. Robertson, of Elgin, Man.

4. Don't bathe in water without first ascertaining the depth.
5. Don't swim too far out in the sea or lake without being attended by a boat or expert swimmer.

11. Don't swim without company if you have a weak heart, and then only after consulting a doctor.
12. Don't bathe too soon after eating; wait till your meal is digested.

GYPSIES HAD TO LEAVE LINDSAY

Chief of Police Ordered Them to Move on and They Did

Lindsay, June 14.—A large number of gypsies arrived in town on Saturday morning to spend Sunday in our midst, but their intentions received a rude jolt on Saturday night by Chief Vincent. The gipsies had all their camping outfit along with them, and by the looks of things were prepared to spend a most enjoyable Sabbath. They had a lamb and a couple of plump chickens in their baggage. They had their tents all pitched and ready at the north end of William street, when the chief arrived on the scene. In answer to his questions they told him that they were on their way to North Bay. He gave them to understand, however, that their time would have to be short in Lindsay, and they accordingly hitched up and went off.

The gipsy finds very little sympathy in Lindsay.

THE PINCH HITTER HAS NOT AN ENVIABLE JOB

The pinch hitter's life is far from being a continual bed of roses. To the casual observer it appears pretty soft for a man to sit on the bench every afternoon for seven or eight innings, with nothing to do but watch the game and then be called on to step to the plate in a pinch to hit for some weak sticker.

Nothing of the kind. The man who is kept on the pay roll to do stunts of this sort has his work cut out for him, and even though the rest of the regulars tell him what a snap he has, not one of them would willingly exchange places with him. The pinch hitter holds his job because he can swat the ball. Every time he is sent in to bat for some one he is aware that it's up to him to deliver a safe drive. He has been sitting on the bench possibly the greater part of the afternoon without getting a chance to see what sort of stuff the pitcher is serving, and he knows that the moment he steps to the plate the finger will deliver everything in his repertoire.

Then every one in the stands is looking to him to clout and banking on him to make good. The fans seldom take into consideration that, no matter how good a hitter a player may be, he only makes one base hit in about three trips to the plate. He never knows what moment his manager will take some weak batter that he can be substituted. About the only chance the pinch hitter has to feel jubilant is when he has been called on to perform and drives out the base hit that returns his club victor.

To have the cheers of the fans ringing in his ears at a time like that is mighty fine, but does it atone for the time after he has failed to deliver the much needed hit and on his way to the club house he hears some particularly rabid fan yell: "Get out, you big mutt. You couldn't fall out of a boat and hit the water!"

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

SCORING OF BASE HITS

When the ball from the bat strikes the ground on or within the foul lines and out of reach of the fielders.

When a fair hit ball is partially or wholly stopped by a fielder in motion, but such player cannot recover himself in time to field the ball to first before the striker reaches that base, or to force out another base-runner.

When the ball be hit with such force to an infielder or pitcher that he cannot handle it in time to put out the batsman or force out a base-runner. In a case of doubt over the class of hit, a base hit shall be scored and the fielder exempted from an error.

The Y.M.C.A. intermediates and the Strathconas will play an exhibition game on the Oval this evening. All players interested are asked to be on hand as early as possible.

The Young Victors defeated the Shamrocks last evening by 17—11. G. Helson played a good game for the winners. The contest started at 7 o'clock and was interesting from start to finish. Each team played six men. The line-ups were;—

Victors—Helson, c; Sharpe, p; Lang, 1b; Richardson, 2b; Sharpe, 3b; Bishop, s.

Shamrocks—Long, c; White, p; Kingscote, 1b; Flood, 2b; Yonge, 3b; Belfast, s.

"Dubby" Shea, playing for the G. S. and M. of Brantford at Hamilton on Saturday, had two hits, one of them a two-bagger. The Hamilton team won 3-2. Shea did the catching for the Brantford nine.

Toronto's fielding errors lost yesterday's game to Jersey City, and though Buffalo did not play Toronto has dropped to fourth place.

Pitcher Lundgren has been suspended until he gets into working condition.

Pittsburg won its thirteenth straight game yesterday.

New York won its first game from the Chicago Americans yesterday.

Jersey City has shut out the opposing team in the last four games.

ATHLETICS

Lindsay, June 14.—A twenty-six mile jaunt on foot seems a long journey but Ald. A. J. Campbell and Mr. Alex. Clarke enjoyed—yes, enjoyed—such a tramp yesterday.

The two started for the home of Mr. Andrew McNabb, an uncle of Mr. Campbell, who lives about five miles from Woodville and about thirteen miles from Lindsay. They reached their destination in good time and rested for a while. Then they started on the return trip and reached home about eight o'clock in the evening feeling none the worse for their pedestrian expedition.

The walking was very good yesterday, notwithstanding the slight rainfall in the morning, and the balmy breath of a day in June added appreciable pleasure to the long, but healthful stroll.

CHALLENGE FOR TUG-O'-WAR

St. Peter's T.A.S. think they have got a bit of a pull, and intend issuing a challenge for a tug-o'-war, open to the world, the contest to be decided at their picnic on July 1st. It is understood that members of the team are now practising at the local dentists, and a try-out at hair-pulling has been arranged at a short date. Anyhow the challenge holds good, and it remains to be seen how much can be done on water.

SICK SKINS IN SUMMER

Summer is the hardest time for the human skin. Its delicate tiny pores, if worked under the best conditions, would have a rough time because of the heat. How when they have to work when impaired or damaged by sunburn and heat spots? No wonder one has rough patches, freckles, etc.

Zam-Buk heals sick skin. When a patch of skin on face, neck or arms is blistered by the sun, apply Zam-Buk at once. It will cool and soothe beautifully, and new skin will be quickly formed. When you are footsore or have some chafed places, Zam-Buk will stop that terrible itching and smarting. Keep Zam-Buk handy, use it freely, and this will be the happiest summer you have ever spent, viewed from the skin health standpoint. All druggists and stores.

TORONTO NEWS KEEPS AFTER THE NEWMARKET "DITCH"

Says it is a One-man Canal—Cane Factory Will be Benefitted, But None Others—What a Prominent Liberal Worker Says.

Newmarket, June 14.—In a preceding chapter of the Annals of the Aylesworth Ditch, there were set forth some qualities that have been revealed in the Minister of Justice in connection with this undertaken. A new quality must be introduced, his loyalty to new-found political friends.

Mr. Aylesworth's character looms up colossal in this respect in the light of the inside knowledge so frankly imparted by Hon. Archibald Campbell, and others with whom your representative has come in contact in this interesting quest.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth to-day stands four-square against the Cabinet Ministers that fume and fret and fume and call down curses upon the ditch into which they have fallen under his lead.

When a member of a Government starts out upon a great national undertaking, it may be supposed that after his death at least, history will be true to him and give him his rightful place in her niches of honor.

But it is not post-mortem fame and honour for which Mr. Aylesworth is striving. It is no work on which a nation will gaze with pride that he is striving to consummate.

Did the Aylesworth Canal lead southwards to Lake Ontario, itself upon the water highway from Western Canada's wheat fields to the ocean, then its stretches might be filled with the carriers of produce, of farm and factory, moving down to the central stream that would sweep them onwards to their natural market.

THE PROBABLE MOTIVE.

But, instead, it turns face to the north, and therein rests its secret. Therein lies the motive for Mr. Aylesworth's steadfast championship and maintenance.

It is a canal with singleness of purpose—for one man and his sons.

But this is to anticipate.

The process of examination must be first applied.

The construction of a canal from Newmarket, south or north, it mattered not, mightily appealed to the imagination of the inhabitants. They stopped not to inquire the definite sources of growth that would be theirs; the canal would build up the town, would help the farmers round about; it would cheapen the raw material for the manufacturer and lessen the freight charges upon his output. It would start up factories; it would draw men to work at them; a new era would be ushered in.

Perhaps, if the canal led southwards.

But to-day, the glamor has passed, and of all the glowing promises in store, only one shows likelihood of fulfilment and disappointment reigns and resentment has set in.

Ask the farmer, as the News did, how it will help him, and he laughs.

TO WHAT GOOD?

"What good to carry my grain north to Lake Simcoe, across it, and back again through the hundred winding miles of the Trent Valley Canal, to bring it to Lake Ontario?" he asks in reply.

There are many who see in it the destroyer of the stock farms along its course, when the valley pasture is covered with a weight of clay and the stream where cattle and horses drank is fenced off on either side.

If it is not a destroyer of the stock farms, wherefore the "damage" that the assessors allowed, $9,000 in the four miles between Newmarket and the Landing?

Is it for the E. J. Davis tannery?

A few dollars saving a year on some carloads of tan bark.

A few dollars for the Office Specialty Company.

The News asked Mr. W. C. Howard, farmer and merchant and Liberal worker, the usefulness of the canal.

Would it help the farmers?

He could not see it. It had ruined his farm.

Yes, it might, too. There was a cereal works at Peterborough, and the beets could be carried down to the lake and back to Peterborough by the Trent Valley Canal.

But he did not Lager on this.

Anything else?

THE CANE'S FACTORY

Yes, there was the Canes' factory, where some two hundred men are employed when it runs at full capacity. All their logs had to be brought in by rail at considerable expense. With the canal built they would come in more cheaply, and be a great saving for the firm.

Anything else?

"One cannot tell what benefit it will be," was the reply. "Look at the Metropolitan Railway. Merchants here thought that would ruin them at first, but it has helped the town. The canal would likely do the same."

The secret was out.

To save a portion of the freight on the logs in the factory of Mr. Henry Cane and his sons, the single purpose and use of the Aylesworth canal; a one-man, a one-family, million-dollar freight line!

Mr. Cane has worked for the Liberal cause and given to it for years. He is one of its mainstays. He has been the president of the riding association.

He and his sons have helped Mr. Aylesworth. Shall he turn them down? Shall the canal stop just because Liberal members at Ottawa tear their hair in impotent rage? Shall it stop because Liberal members at Ottawa form a deputation to the Minister of Railways and Canals praying him to stop the waste?

Shall it stop because, as it is whispered, Hon. George P. Graham regards it as the greatest leak in his department, and shudders at the million dollars, to which he will soon be pledged if he reach not forth his hand?

Alone he stands, the Minister of Justice, fighting for the Cane Canal, to be watered by the Holland creek, that in the summer time trickles down the valley, a few feet wide, and a few inches deep.—Toronto News.

THE AMERICAN WON.

Hobbs Picked All the Locks in the Bank of England.

The first world's fair, the Crystal palace at London, was held in 1851. It was at the Crystal palace that the American mechanic showed that he stood second to none in the world. Hobbs challenged Chubb, and Hobbs, the American mechanic, carried off the first prize as a lockmaker. Hobbs represented an American manufacturer of iron bank safes. He placed his safe on exhibition and tied the key to the combination lock on the outside. Inside the safe was placed £250, or $1,250, and the free offer was made to the mechanics of the world that if they opened the safe the money contained therein could be taken for their success. The safe was never opened. At that time Chubb was famous all over England and in Europe as a lockmaker. The Bank of England indorsed Chubb and used his locks exclusively. Hobbs examined the workmanship of the locks and offered to not only enter the outer doors of the Bank of England, but to open also the seven doors leading to the treasure safes, inside of two hours if permission was given. This was too much for the Britishers to stand, and they gave the necessary consent.

Hobbs was on hand two hours before the time for opening the doors of the bank arrived and announced himself ready to go to work. All the tools he had he carried in his vest pocket, consisting of about twenty picks. He opened the front door in seven minutes and entered the bank triumphantly. He next approached the outer door of the treasure safe. In six minutes the door opened, and before one hour had passed, half of the time he asked for, he had his hands in the treasure of the bank, much to the amazement of the directors of the bank and to the intense disgust of Chubb, a man of influence and wealth. He took his defeat gamely, however, and soon set to work to improve his locks. This he did by taking Hobbs into his employ as an adviser.

Knew What He Wanted.

"Gimme a dime's wuth o' dried beef an' sum crackers," said Uncle Josh to the young lady in charge of the ribbon counter in a downtown store.

"You have evidently made a mistake in the place," she smilingly replied. "This is a dry goods store."

"Waal, now, I reckon I know'd that, b'gosh," said the old man, "an' ef dried beef an' crackers hain't dry goods then I'd like to know what in tarnation you'd call 'em?"—Chicago News.

The Shirred Sleeves.

In this day of mousquetaire sleeves it is a problem how to make them so that they will look shirred and yet be quite secure. Furthermore, when they are made of wash net or other washable fabrics it is almost impossible to launder them if they are made in the usual way.

One clever woman has found that the inside seam of the sleeve may be made like a French seam, through which a tape may be run. The tape should be a little longer than the sleeve is when pulled out to its full length. The seam for the second draw string may be taken up on the outer side of the sleeve, and through this also a tape may be run. When the dress is worn the string may be drawn up to the armhole until the sleeve is the correct length, and then the cord may be tied up inside. When it is time to launder them the strings may be untied, the sleeves pulled out to their full length and the work thus made easy.

Bleaching Muslin.

If you want to bleach unbleached muslin at home place a boilerful of deep blue water on the stove and, unrolling the muslin, put it in and let come to a steady boil. Remove from boiler without wringing and hang on line to drip dry in full sunlight.

When dry iron and depend on the first washing to make it a clear white, or wash again in the ordinary way before using.

SOME PEOPLE WHO EARN THEIR PAY BY WAITING

"They also serve who only stand and wait," said a sweet mingler of noise one time and he was right in spite of the fact that almost everybody in large and small cities thinks a loafer is an undesirable citizen. There is no place like a large city for a person to live, move and have his being, maintained entirely by waiting. Did you ever stop to think, how many people right here in Peterborough have waiting jobs?

There are a great many and they earn their money, for in many instances it is harder to wait than keep moving. Cooped up in a small office, situated, south of Simcoe street or Water, one may see a person or several persons in a blue uniform waiting for something to happen. They are the policemen. What are they paid for—just waiting. When something does happen the policeman has certain duties to perform, but his chief job is to be in position when called for. The hardest time experienced by these guarders of the city's peace, is when on duty tramping up and down the street and find nothing stirring. If there is anything to divert the mind, a fight, a robbery or even a drunk, the time passes quicker, but when everything is dead, each minute seems an hour. It is the waiting that tells.

In the city fire hall, there are men who sit in shiny chairs most of the day. What are they paid for? Waiting. If a fire should break out and they were not waiting they would be expelled from the department. The particular fire at which they are needed may not come in weeks or perhaps months, but the firemen draw their pay just the same, although they may not have been outside the station on duty.

At the railway crossing on field street, where gates have not been installed is employed the flag man. He has been in the employ of the railroad the best part of his years but is unable now to do any hard work. He spends most of his time in the little house—waiting. The collision that might occur at this point will probably never happen during the rest of his life. But he is paid for waiting.

Go into a department store and ask for anything from a cake of soap to a $20 suit and you are "waited" on by a clerk who is paid to 'wait' Sit down to a meal in an hotel—you will find waiters. Watch the bass drummer in the band and you think he should get less money than the others. He is waiting for his turn and without his presence the "effect" would not meet with the approval from the pit or the "gods."

These are only a few of the many cases where the man who "waits" is after all a very important being.

APPRECIATION

Lieut.-Col. Stevenson, of the 57th Regiment, has received the following letter from the officer commanding the 38th Regiment, of Brantford, which speaks for itself;—

From O.C. 38th Regt.,
Brantford, Ont.
To Lt.-Col. Stevenson,
57th Peterborough
Rangers,
Peterborough,
Ont.

My Dear Col. Stevenson,—Allow me to thank you and your officers for the great kindness and courtesy which we received from yourselves during our holiday on the 23rd and 24th. The Dufferin Rifles are unanimous in declaring, that never have they been so royally entertained, nor have they ever spent a holiday which has been more thoroughly enjoyed. Not only is this sentiment prevalent among the officers, but it is shared by non-commissioned officers and men.

I wish also through you to thank the good citizens of Peterborough for their unfailing kindness and the magnificent way in which they entertained us. We sincerely hope that it will not be long before we meet again.

With kind regards to you all,
Very sincerely yours,
E. C. ASHTON.

TRIAL TRIPS OF THE "HAMONIC"

The Magnificent New Steamer of the Northern Navigation Company Makes Her Debut on the Great Lakes.

SOME INFORMATION ABOUT THE NEW BOAT

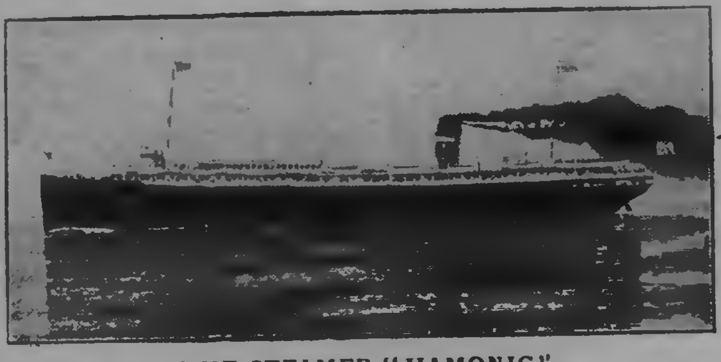
| | |
|---|---|
| Length over all | 365 feet |
| Length between perpendiculars | 341 feet |
| Extreme breadth | 50 feet |
| Moulded depth | 27 feet |
| Gross tonnage | 50.0 tons |

On Saturday last was made the trial trip of the magnificent new steamer "Hamonic," the latest addition to the fleet owned and controlled by the Northern Navigation Company, the boats of which ply on the waters of the great lakes to the north. The vessel is a magnificent example of the shipbuilders' art and reflects the highest credit on her constructors, the Collingwood Engineering and Ship building Company.

The history of the company has been one of enterprise and progress, since the first operations that led to its ultimate formation was begun in 1889. Recently, looking into the future, the company decided to have constructed, the addition to their fleet which was so auspiciously placed in the service last week.

The Northern Navigation Co, being the lake connection of the Grand Trunk Railway and who are interested in the extension of this arm of the transportation service, the railway was represented on the occasion by Mr. Chas. M. Hayes, 2nd vice president and general manager and a large number of the officials of the road. The Northern Navigation Co. were represented by the President, Mr W J. Sheppard, Waubaushene, Mr. A. T. Telfer, vice-president, members of the board of directors. The officials and executive staff were also present, including A. A. Gildesleeve, manager, C H Nicholson, traffic manager and others.

Invitations had been extended to the newspaper men of the province to join in the trial trip and they took large advantage of the opportunity and to the number of over two hundred, including many ladies. A special carried the party from Toronto to Collingwood Saturday morning, and early in the afternoon the Hamonic began her trip over the waters of Georgian Bay, up to the Manitoulin Islands, and down south to Sarnia. It was a very delightful excursion, and the auspices most agreeable. Calling at Owen Sound there was a public demonstration to receive the new steamer, and after leaving that port no stops were made until Sarnia was reached on Sunday about noon. A special train brought the party to Toronto, reaching the city early in the evening.



THE STEAMER "HAMONIC"

During the trip a meeting was held at which the Hon. Frank Cochrane presided and votes of thanks and complimentary resolutions were moved and carried, those taking part in this detail being Hon W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary; Mr J. F. MacKay, vice President Press Association and others. The pressmen decided to present to the Company and the Hamonic a magnificent silver service.

The trip throughout was marked by the most assiduous attention to the comfort and entertainment of the guests. The resources of the boat were at their disposal and were heartily appreciated.

The "Hamonic" is the last boat in marine construction for the lake passenger service. She is the finest exponent of marine architecture afloat on the Great Lakes, both in size and capacity, accommodation and superb equipment. The vessel has cost over a half million dollars to put into service. The company have with magnificent enterprise, done this looking to the future and to the development of the West for a return. In the elegance of the fitting up is a recognition of the fact that the touring public are ready and willing to pay for accommodation of the very highest and even luxurious character, so long as the public believes it is getting in return for what it is asked to pay. No better evidence of this is required than the fact taht the Bankers Association, an American association of large importance has engaged the Hamonic for one week at a cost of $12,000 and will hold its annual convention, the first week of July on the steamer, putting in the entire week on the water. The Company is satisfied that a good share of the tourist traffic, which now flows down the St. Lawrence and along the Atlantic coast can be directed over the great lakes, and with a spirit of enterprise have provided the facilities and accommodation. Canadians who propose a trip this summer, may well consider the route, and if taken in this magnificent vessel, the results will not be disappointing.

The whole ship, from keel to trucks, is strictly the work of Canadian engineers, designers, and builders. While the Canadian yards have turned out many fine vessels, this one will be the first to combine in one hull the latest, best and most valuable features of modern naval architecture and engineering, ever delivered by Canadian builders from Canadian works. The feeling of national pride to which this must appeal is justified in the knowledge that no improvement suitable to a vessel which is to ply the inland waters has been over looked, and that the result is actually the last word in shipbuilding for the lakes.

Her general dimensions are; Length 365 feet; beam, 50 feet; depth (moulded), 27 feet; gross tonnage, 5,000 tons; speed, 21 1-2 miles; passenger accommodation, 400 first class, and 72 second class, besides a crew of 110.

She has been constructed with strict regard to the rules of the Bureau Veritas and the Great Lakes Register, and under the inspection of the last-named corporation. Her rating will therefore be the highest possible in the lake service.

The hull is moulded with remarkably fine lines forward and a clean run aft, having in view a speed commensurate with the power of her engines, easily sufficient to enable her to keep pace with her sister ship Huronic in her weekly trip from Sarnia to Port Arthur, Fort William, Duluth and return. The hull itself is divided by water-tight bulkheads into nine compartments. To prevent rolling, she is fitted with bilge-keels.

As electricity enters largely into the decoration of the ship she is brilliantly illuminated. There is a complete artificial ice and refrigerating plant, and a wireless telegraph installation provided for.

There are five decks, namely; the main, spar, promenade, shade and bridge decks, the first three being of steel construction. On the promenade deck there is ample open space forward and a wide promenade entirely around the ship. Seven trips around the deck constitute a mile. On the shade deck additional promenading and lounging space is provided, and that part forward of the bridge and over the drawing-room will give opportunity for observation to passengers while running the rivers or passing other interesting portions of the route.

The coloring throughout the ship is in one inclusive scheme of mahogany, soft green, old gold, ivory, grey and pure white.

The baggage rooms are at either side of the great stairway, so that passengers may have easy access to their belongings at any time. At the top the stairway opens upon a handsome lobby extending all the way across the ship and having a length of some 35 feet. Settees with cushioned upholstery in dull green leather stand along the walls, and comfortable armchairs are disposed about the floor.

This deck will be almost entirely given over to berth accommodation. Three rows of staterooms on either side open off the corridors, so arranged that each stateroom is a roomy apartment, independently lighted and ventilated from the outside and the corridors as well are amply supplied with light and fresh air. The outside tier of staterooms is provided with double lower and single upper decks, and have extra large plate glass ports opening through the sides of the ship. The inner tiers of rooms have single lower and upper berths, but these as well as all others are unusually wide and long. All staterooms are electric-lighted, fitted with electric bells and supplied with running hot and cold water, the best quality of spring and hair mattresses, linens, rigs and napery. The decoration is in ivory white, corresponding with that of the corridors. The floor coverings are of the finest quality.

The lounge at the forward end of the corridor has particularly attractive features. A soft deep rose color carpet of a special design covers the floor. From the corridor opening off the after end of the lobby more state rooms are reached, and it terminates on either side with baths, barber shop and lavatories.

From the lobby a broad stairway leads to the grand saloon on the promenade deck above. As it is expected this deck will form the principal rendezvous for passengers; the designer has been given opportunity for a free display of the decorator's art. Ascending the stairway, one is confronted by a large mirror and console, carving, paintings and panelling. This room, occupying the entire width of the cabin, is of imposing proportions. The style of decoration is Elizabethian. At the forward end of the room, on both port and starboard sides, are staircases leading up to the observation room. At the after end of the room are glass-panelled doors leading to the main dining-room.

Off the forward end of the apartment opens a spacious corridor panelled in solid mahogany of a design in keeping with the grand saloon. A number of large and comfortable outside staterooms are located here. Still forward of these are eight parlor rooms, four on either side. Rich floor coverings of appropriate tones are laid and Arabian curtains hang from gold cornices over the windows. The furnishings consist of brass beds, dainty mirrors, soft-cushioned divans, and small tables and chairs. Each parlor has a private bath attached.

At the forward end of the corridor on this deck is the drawing-room—a spacious apartment, terminating in a circular front, with large plate glass windows overlooking the bow deck, affording excellent opportunities for observation.

At the after end of the grand saloon is the dining-room. The double entrances, of plate glass, small-panelled doors, are separated by a heavily constructed console supported by carved figures and surmounted by a large bevelled mirror. This room occupies the full width of the ship, and extends 80 feet of its length. It is designed in the design of the French Renaissance, with blending colors, and a prevailing spirit of warmth and light. All the woodwork is in select solid mahogany.

The dining-room and its attendant service rooms are located aft to prevent the odors penetrating the rest of the ship.

Still aft of this and reached from the outside promenade is the smoke room, happily removed from other parts of the ship where a quiet smoke or rubber of "bridge" may be enjoyed by the men. It is designed and finished in the German style.

The second-class passenger quarters are on the after part of the spar deck, and completely separated from other parts of the ship. The sleeping rooms are plain but neatly furnished, and are so arranged that they will accommodate small or large families, or parties of men and women. Ample toilet arrangements and promenading space have been provided for exercise, and an inside stairway leads to the second-class dining room above.

Besides this splendid addition to the Lake Superior Service new passenger terminals are erected at Sarnia. The accommodations comprise ticket offices, commodious waiting rooms with large observation windows of plate glass, a beautiful roof garden, with a canopy roof, ladies' retiring, smoking and baggage rooms, etc., the most complete and up-to-date water terminals on the Great Lakes. Situated directly on the water front, the waiting rooms and roof garden will afford delightful opportunities for observation of the endless procession of every variety of craft passing up and down the majestic St. Clair River, literally within hailing distance, a mighty fleet carrying the commerce of two mighty nations, enjoying in peace and harmony the blessings of the great water highway which separates their borders for 1,500 miles.

BLYTHE'S COUNSEL HOPES TO GET ANOTHER REPRIEVE

Application to Judge Riddell For a Stated Case is Refused and Now T. C. Robinette, K.C., Will Enter an Appeal —Says Postponement of Thursday's Execution is Not Likely to Be Refused—Prisoner is Ill.

Toronto, June 16.—"I do not see how they can possibly hang Blythe on Thursday," said T. C. Robinette, K.C., last night. "It is a pure matter of law now," he added.

Last night Mr. Robinette applied to Mr. Justice Riddell who tried Blythe for the murder of his wife at Agincourt some months ago, for leave to take a stated case to the Court of Appeal. This was refused.

This morning Mr. Robinette will serve the Attorney-General for the province and Sheriff Mowat with notice of appeal. This will be done under section 1015 of the new criminal code which says that where a stated case has been refused by the trial judge, the prisoner shall appeal to the Court of Appeal under section 1023 of the new code, which declares that where an appeal is entered the penalties must be stayed in all cases of whipping or death until the appeal is heard by the Court of Appeal.

This, Mr. Robinette believes, is an absolute bar to Blythe's execution until September, until which date the Court of Appeal is precluded from sitting under the statute.

George Tate Blackstock, K.C., who prosecuted Blythe at the Assizes agrees with Mr. Robinette that Blythe's execution must be stayed. He said last night, "If the provisions of the code are as quoted by Mr. Robinette, then it seems clear that the execution must be stayed."

To-day Mr. Robinette will notify the acting Minister of Justice at Ottawa and all Cabinet Ministers whom he can reach of the position of affairs and believes that there will be no choice but to withdraw Blythe from the shadow of the gallows until after September 14.

Meanwhile Blythe is still despondent and ill in his prison cell, but the hope that he may be saved from the gallows which has crept into many hearts, but of which the condemned wretch knows nothing, is stronger than it has been. A large petition is being circulated and the names hurried to Ottawa.

BISHOP WILLIAMS PRAISES THE THREE-FIFTHS VOTE

At Synod Meeting in London His Lordship Declares That it Prevents Demoralization in the Community—He Also Favors Compensation for Licenseholders Who Are Cut Off—Condemns Betting Evil.

London, Ont., June 16.—Endorsation of the three-fifths clause and of compensation for hotelmen put out of business, with a strong condemnation of the betting evil, were features of the charge delivered by Bishop Williams yesterday afternoon to the Synod of Huron, in session here. The bishop made himself particularly clear in his references to gambling. "Betting and gambling, however widely practiced and however called, are morally wrong and degrading to character," he said. "We need a public opinion sufficiently strong to brand with infamy the betting man or the betting woman as a parasite who thrives upon other people's labor. There is injustice in it; there is robbery, no matter by what name we call it, and, therefore, it is morally wrong.

Regarding the three-fifths clause his lordship said: "The principle is altogether right. The proper function of the civil law is to record and enforce the judgments of the popular conscience. There are some things which the popular conscience overwhelmingly condemns, i.e., fraud, bigamy, white slavery, etc. There is no difficulty in enforcing laws against such offences. But there are other things which the popular conscience does not so overwhelmingly condemn, and when laws are passed by a bare maojrity against such offences they are either not enforced or enforced very feebly for the simple reason that there is a large body of public opinion which does not believe that the things prohibited are morally wrong.

On compensation he said: "But granting that the community has a perfect right to limit or suppress any business or trade which it deems to be injurious to its best interests, there are nevertheless certain moral obligations which the community is bound to observe when limiting or suppressing what is by its own laws a legitimate business.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

Misener Will Upheld.

Hamilton, June 16.—Judge Snyder in the County Court decided that Lemuel Misener, who died at Ancaster on Dec. 1, 1908, was of sound mind and that no undue influence was used in connection with the making of his will. His honor's decision was given in connection with an action instituted by Charles Baugley of Ancaster, to establish Misener's will. The deceased left his estate of about $15,000 to Mrs. Baugley, his adopted daughter. This did not meet with the approval of William Misener of Toronto, a brother of the testator.

Widow Cuts Off Daughter.

Newark, N.J., June 16.—A dining-room table, valued at $15, is the sole bequest made to an only daughter in the will of Mrs. Frances Hartley, widow of a millionaire gun manufacturer, which was probated here yesterday. More than $1,000,000 in cash is distributed among other relatives and friends and several bequests of from $1,000 to $5,000 are made to servants. No reason is given for the cutting off of the daughter, Mrs. Helen K. Jennings of Madison avenue, New York City.

Painting at Laval Stolen.

Quebec, June 16.—"The Gamblers," by Salvator Rosa, a painting valued at about $3,000, was cut from its frame and stolen at Laval University Monday night. The robbery was perpetrated while a lecture was being delivered by Mr. Purves Carter, an English artist, who has been engaged for some time past repairing and retouching the collection at Laval, which is considered one of the most valuable in the British possessions.

Suggested Duty on Pulp.

Washington, June 16.—The Senate finance committee yesterday practically decided to place a duty of one-twelfth of a cent per pound on pulp coming from countries which impose a countervailing duty on like articles imported into those countries from the United States, or hamper the free exportation of their wood products to the United States.

Crime to Sell Skim Milk.

Albany, N.Y., June 16.—The court of appeals yesterday handed down a decision in which it holds that the sale of skimmed milk in New York City is a crime. The court sustains the lower courts in overruling a demurrer of the Liberman Dairy Co. to an action brought by the state to recover $5,000 penalty for the sale of skimmed milk.

Not Disobeying Orders.

Ottawa, June 16.—The attitude of the Militia Department with regard to the Eastern Ontario corps which are going into camp is that there has been no refusal to obey orders. In several cases corps which have made representations and have supported them by reasons which show that it would be difficult or inconvenient to go to camp have been permitted to drop their annual training.

Lion Gets a Hunter.

Naivasha, British East Africa, June 16.—A member of the party of T. C. Selous, a noted African hunter, and George McMillan, a nephew of the late Senator McMillan, of Michigan, was brought in here Sunday mortally wounded by a lion.

Child Fatally Burned.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 16.—Kathleen Cook, aged 5, died yesterday afternoon from burns received yesterday morning while playing in her father's yard. With companions the child was running round a fire which had been started to burn some rubbish, a wind blew the flames in the direction of the child, igniting her clothing.

THE FISHERMEN WERE MUCH THICKER THAN THE FISH

Some Good Catches Made on Lake This Morning — Lake Dotted With Canoes—Opening of Fishing Season.

Now that the season has opened Fishery Inspector Watt will be able to have a little relaxation from his duties as protector of the game fish in this district during the close season. They have been watched carefully and the season should be a good one from the fisherman's standpoint.

This morning before sunrise and when the stars were still dimly shining there were several enthusiasts out on the lake, and some good catches are reported. From now on startling reports will be heard of "authentic" captures of some unusually large ones.

A Peterborough angler who was among the big throng on Little Lake this morning says there were easily 75 canoes on the lake and the swarm of hopeful trawlers made an auspicous opening of the fishing season.

Some good catches were made but the fish were not nearly as numerous as the canoes or if they were they were not in a biting mood. Some wild rumors are going around the city, concerning the big catches made and the tales of the heavy ones landed place some of them in the 20 pound division.

Of the names the Review has to hand of those landing the biggest fish Mr. Lou [illegible] comes first with a 14 1-2 pounder. Some other fairly good ones were landed.

Among those who were fortunate enough to make their early morning's outing worth while were Messrs. Harry Adams and N. Brand and they hooked four nice ones; W. Mitchell, Bobby Long, Herb Routley, Jack Fraser, Ald. Duncan and others.

BLYTHE WILL NOT GO TO GALLOWS TO-MORROW MORNING

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 16.—Walter Blythe, who was to be hanged to-morrow morning here for the murder of his wife, has been reprieved until October 1st by Mr. Justice Teetzel.

The application was made this morning by T. C. Robinette, K.C., on the ground that an appeal had been entered in the Court of Appeal from the refusal of Mr. Riddell yesterday to grant a reserved case, and was granted under the section of the criminal code, which gives a judge power to reprieve a prisoner.

ECLIPSE OF SUN TO MORROW

There will be a total eclipse of the sun to-morrow evening, and it will be partially in Peterborough. The line of totality will pass in the extreme north, over the islands west off Smith Sound. The eclipse will not be visible in its totality in any part of the inhabited Dominion. It will be seen as a partial eclipse in Peterborough about 6.40 o'clock. The sun will go down with the shadow on it.

The next total eclipse will be on August 21st, 1914. The central path of totality will also pass through the Arctic Islands, but nearer the continent than in to-morrow's eclipse.

The shadow path of the total eclipse of July 8th, 1918, will cross the United States from the northwest to the northeast, touching the southern part of British Columbia.

The total eclipse of January 24th, 1925, and August 31st, 1932, will be visible in Eastern Canada. No other total eclipses will be visible in Canada in the 20th century!

Keep these dates in mind—

FELL BACKWARDS OUT OF SECOND STOREY WINDOW

Fred Norman, an Englishman, was rather severely injured this morning while working on a house on London street. Norman, who is a laborer, was sitting on a window sill putting some putty on the window, when the paper in which he had the putty fell off the sill and in reaching out for it lost his balance and fell backward to the ground. His back was sprained and both his wrists are swollen and discolored as a result of the fall.

Dr. Brown attended the injured man.

THE PRESENTATION TO FIREMEN OF BOOK ON FIREFIGHTING

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—It is a gratifying thing to find that the Laymen's Missionary Movement is already bearing fruit, not only abroad but at home. It is stated in the press that a family Bible has been placed in the Fire Hall for the use of the firemen. This is quite right. The good old precepts of the good old book will not fall as seed on a barren ground and in such a way those who fight fire in this world may learn to stand from under in the next. It can be used as a text book. Besides the moral effect of the fine example, will do much to inculcate a proper public spirit, and is hoped, modify the inclination to do to the other fellow as he would do to you—only do it first. It is not unreasonable to expect that other public services will be provided with family Bibles, irrespective of the fact whether there are families or not. The bands on the steamboats have equal claim to doctrinal recognition. It would do much to ameliorate the years of a trying service, and inculcate the soft answer that turns away wrath if the street railway service were provided with bibles. — good, heavy ones, that would make an impression. Most people will agree that in introducing the beneficent influences of the bible, the police station should not be neglected, that the iron hand of authority might be tempered by sundry admonitions to prove all things and hold fast that which is good.

And the Aldermen. What about the Aldermen? Are they a coterie of unregenerates? Why not make an effort to place on the Mayor's desk in the hall of audience a good, big imposing looking bible, and occasionally have its pages referred to on knotty questions of order and procedure. If all this were done the money cost would be only a trifle but the good to the community at large, incalculable.

Yours truly,
ONE WHO KNOWS

TRIED TO KILL MAYOR OF CITY

Bellfontaine, Ohio, June 16.—What is believed to have been an attempt to assassinate Mayor William A. Niven and burn his residence in this city was made early yesterday, when a bottle filled with kerosene, which had been set ablaze, was thrown through a window of his house.

Mayor Niven issued warrants in the blackhand cases last week. Bloodhounds have been secured to follow the trail of the man seen running from the scene at the time of the explosion.

MONTREAL WILL BUY WATERWORKS

Montreal, June 16.—The city will lose no time in complying with a recent enactment of the Legislature empowering it to expropriate the Montreal Water & Power Co. in its entirety. At a meeting of the special committee it was decided to notify the company of the city's intention to proceed with the expropriation. The cost of the expropriation will be about $5,000,000. Of this amount $1,300,000 goes to the shareholders of the company.

BANK MANAGER UNDER ARREST

Quebec, June 16.—Wm. P. Lindsay was yesterday morning placed under arrest upon a warrant issued at the instance of the crown, charging him with false pretences. The charge arises out of the recent trial of Geo. Atkinson in connection with the attempted forgery of Geo. W. Davis' name for $1,000. Mr. Lindsay was manager of the Levis branch of the Bank of British North America, when the alleged forgery was committed.

POISON GIVEN BY MISTAKE

Toronto, June 16.—Accident was responsible for a terrible tragedy at Humber Bay on Monday afternoon, when Freda Margaret, the six months' old daughter of James Whitehead was poisoned by her aunt.

In administering medicine to the child who had been ailing for some time, the aunt inadvertantly gave her deadly poison from a bottle closely resembling that which contained the drug which was to have helped the little one to health.

The mother and father are overcome with grief. Coroner Forbes Godfrey investigated the case and decided that an inquest was necessary.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The attempt to list U. S. Steel on the Paris Bourse has failed.

The Y.M.C.A. has raised $179,635 in Montreal in its building fund campaign.

Sir A. Conan Doyle's morality play "The Fires of Fate," was presented in London last night.

Cambridge's last senior wrangler is P. J. Daniel of Trinity College. The examination passes out this year.

The five-year-old daughter of Mr. Cook of Niagara Falls was fatally burned by her clothing catching fire.

Rev. Dr. M. R. Fishburn, a Congregational minister, said to have been a native of Toronto, is dead in Washington.

W. J. Thorne, a Socialist member, caused great excitement in the British House of Commons by denouncing the Czar as an inhuman brute.

A band of gipsies camped near Belleville complained to the police that one of the young girls had absconded after stealing $500 from her parents.

RAY LAMPHERE IS REPORTED DYING

Sister of Associate of Mrs. Guinness Denied Admittance to Prison

Laporte, Ind., June 16.—In response to a letter from her brother, Ray Lamphere, Mrs. James Finley on Monday hurried to the Michigan City Prison, to see the prisoner, notorious through his association with Mrs. Guinness, the arch-murderess, for the burning of whose home Lamphere was sent to the penitentiary. Lamphere in his letter stated that he recently had suffered four hemorrhages and believed death was imminent. This belief was confirmed in the mind of Mrs. Finley by the refusal of the prison authorities to allow her to visit her brother in the hospital ward.

Despite her pleadings, the deputy warden was obdurate, replying: "Lamphere is extremely low and cannot see anyone."

It is understood that an effort to secure his immediate parole will be made, but his demise is expected before this step can be taken.

Detective Sent to Jail.

Albany, N.Y., June 16.—August Kuhne, acting police captain of the detective bureau in the Borough of Brooklyn on Nov. 26, 1907, must go to jail for thirty days and pay a fine of $250 for contempt of court. He disregarded an order of habeas corpus in arresting Frank Jenkins, banker, charged with forgery, and insisting on photographing him and taking his pedigree.

WIDOW WINS SUIT AGAINST FORESTERS

Ottawa, June 16.—The widow of Angus MacCuaig of Ottawa wins her case against the Independent Order of Foresters and gets $1,000 and the right to take action for a second $1,000 for insurance on her husband's life. MacCuaig was a member in good standing with $2,000 insurance, when he became insane. Then his dues became unpaid and he was suspended. Application was made for disability benefits and they were refused on the grounds that such application could only be considered when the member was in good standing.

Judge Clute yesterday held that since these benefits were due MacCuaig, when he became insane, he should then have received $1,000 without paying any further dues and it did not matter whether the benefits were claimed at once or later.

McGILL WILL BE EXAMINED AGAIN

Toronto, June 16.—Charles McGill, the president of the Ontario Bank, who is serving a sentence in Kingston Penitentiary, will be brought to Toronto as a witness in connection with the settling up of the defunct bank's affairs. Mr. Justice Latchford, in chambers at Osgoode Hall yesterday morning made an order for McGill's production as a witness on the return of appointments before Referee George Kappele on June 23. The order was asked for by Mr. Robt. McKay and was unopposed. McGill is objecting to being placed on the list of contributors to the Ontario Bank for 1,713 shares and being made a contributor for $171,300.

SLEPT ON EDGE OF THE FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 16.—The dead body of John W. O'Neil, aged 35, was found below the river bank at the American end of the upper steel arch bridge early yesterday morning in a mutilated condition, the result of the fall of more than 125 feet down the precipice. The appearance of the bank above indicates that O'Neil slept there Monday night. The soft earth bears the imprints of his feet and it is thought the man, confused from sleep, fell over the bank. The back was broken, all of the ribs on one side fractured, and both legs and one arm were broken.

Every farmer in the West is optimistic about this year's crop.

DELEGATES GATHER FOR THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS

Convention of Five Hundred of the World's Most Notable Women Workers Begin Their Sessions at Great Quinquennial Assembly—Elaborate Program of Entertainment is Prepared for Them.

Toronto, June 16.—About 500 notable women from twenty-three different countries began to assemble to-day in Toronto, on the occasion of the fourth Quinquennial International Congress of Women.

The previous meetings were held in Chicago, London (Eng.), and Berlin (Germany), so that Toronto is one of a big four.

The proceedings begin so far as the public are concerned, with the reception at University convocation hall tonight, which will be open, as all the meetings are, to ticket-holders.

The proceedings to-night will consist of the presentation of the address of welcome and other matters of general interest. During the day the executive officers will meet, and various committee meetings will be the chief business activity until next Wednesday, 23rd inst., when the regular sessions of the nine sections begin.

A number of more or less social functions have been arranged for during the next two weeks. The first of these is the mayor's reception tomorrow evening at the City Hall. On Saturday, 19th, Mrs. Sanford will entertain those taking part in a trip to Hamilton. On Tuesday, 22nd, Lady Edgar has arranged a trip to Lake Simcoe, and one to Niagara follows next day. A garden party at Government House on the afternoon of the 25th is the Ontario tribute. On Saturday, 26th, an excursion to Guelph and the model farm is the engagement. On Monday, 28th, Mrs. Kemp will have a garden party at Castle Frank, and the Toronto Council of Jewish Women will entertain the Jewish members of the congress. Mrs. T. M. Harris will entertain at the Lambton Golf Club on Tuesday, 29th, and the local council of women will hold a reception at the Parliament Buildings on the last day of the congress, Wednesday, 30th inst.

The congress proper opens next Wednesday, 23rd inst., when the nine sections proceed to their deliberations. Three evening sessions, to be held in Convocation Hall, will focus the interest of the whole congress of those who are unable to attend during the day. Each evening is in charge of three of the nine sections, so that the whole field of the congress will be covered in the three meetings.

On Thursday, 24th inst., art, literature and the sections on liberal professions for women will provide the program. On Monday, 28th, education, health, and physical training and philanthropy are the controlling sections. On Tuesday, 29th, laws concerning women and children, the industrial section, and social work and moral reform will be taken up.

Lieut.-Governor Gibson, Sir James Whitney and the Countess of Aberdeen respectively will preside at these three meetings. Among the speakers will be Hon. Mrs. Wilkinson, England; Mrs. Agnes Knox Black, Miss Jane Addams, Chicago; Prof. Ramsey Wright, Lady Dockrell, Dublin; Sir Wm. T. Thompson, F.R.C.P., Ireland; Fraulein Ide Kirch, Germany; Miss Sybella Gurney, Miss James, Great Britain, and Mrs. O. C. Edwards.

WILL NOT HAVE TO PAY FOR HYDRANTS TILL NEXT YEAR

The Water Commissioners were present at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night and asked where the hydrants were to be placed on the new water mains that were being laid.

The chairman of the committee, Ald. Butler, said the committee had no money to pay for any more hydrants this year. He would not stand for going outside the appropriation, although there was no doubt that the hydrants were needed.

Mr. T. F. Matthews said he knew the council was short of funds this year and the commissioners were willing to do anything reasonable to help them out. He suggested that the hydrants be placed this year where required, but that no charge be made until after the 1st of January, 1910.

The aldermen considered this a fair proposal, and decided to accept it, provided the city solicitor says it is legal.

It was moved by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that the committee place hydrants as follows—Two on Aylmer street, north of Smith street; one on Weir street; one on James street at Market street; one on Rink street, east of Aylmer street, and one on Bethune street, north of Smith street.

The motion was carried.

WHAT IT WILL LEAD TO

The following from the Kingston Standard is well worth laughing at. Of course the Globe quotes it with approval:

> Kingston, Ont., Standard (Conservative)—We still think, therefore, that the North Waterloo voters would be paying a deserved personal tribute to a brilliant young man if they gave him a seat by acclamation—and we hold that the acclamation need not necessarily be taken as expressing approval of the Laurier Administration but might be regarded rather as a purely personal compliment to the young man.

The young man, Absalom, should be proclaimed "safe," so the Standard says, because he deserves the compliment. Is he the only one? If not, the compliment should not be confined. But who is to say "who." And then the lovely prospect looms up of press-agents pressing it upon the public that Mr. So-and-so deserves it, whereas the truth might be, and probably is, that Mr. So-and-so deserves a term in the "pen." To follow the advice of the Standard would be to proclaim political anarchy. No. It is better to let the will of the people take its natural course. Why cannot the Standard trust the people? It should encourage rather than discourage the "verdict of public opinion." The picking up of a few favorites and conferring immortality upon them by the Press may, possibly, appear well enough, but we should not care to trust it very far. The public will never be satisfied with anything but its own choice, and if sometimes it has cause to be dissatisfied it has no further recourse and must needs put up with it. This is the essence of Democracy, and when it gets to be cynical, as the Rev. J. A. Macdonald observes, it is on the brink of the river of death, and when it gets to be unable to proceed in the usual way it will be so near destruction that such advice as the Standard's will not save it.

THE ALDRICH BILL

> After a debate of several weeks' duration the Aldrich tariff bill has been read a second time by the Senate of the United States. This means, as a similar stage means in the Canadian Parliament, that the measure has been accepted in principle and also in its more important details. It is probable that, after so protracted a discussion, the motion for the third reading will easily and promptly be carried.
>
> As the customs schedules stand at present the tariff is highly protective, probably more so than the McKinley tariff and less so than the Dingley one. If there is on the average a reduction in the draft from the present scale of taxation, it amounts to so little that, it is not likely to be acceptable to the tariff reformers in the Republican party.—The Globe

(The trend of the editorial from which this part is taken is like the above, a quiet, even resigned acceptance of the fact that the U. S. stands solidly for protection, artizan and agricultural alike. Hitherto the Globe has been subject to fits of despondency over the alleged stupidity of the Americans, but since these did not serve as "horrible warnings" to the latter, as expected, the Liberal journal resumes its gravity and looks pleasant. Possibly in the course of time in some post-quaternian era the doctrinaire editor of the Globe will realize that Protection is not a principle, but a necessary expedient just as fighting back or preserving the balance is not a principle but a measure of safety. As a principle, F. T. is unassailable, but as a matter of practice it must be like all principles, either universal or not at all.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Speaking in London, Eng. the editor of the Globe, referring to the present day ridicule of things decent, observed that:

"Cynicism, said Mr. Macdonald, was the death of democracy. "Let us make the picture of life a little brighter, a little nobler, and the reflection that we should get in the press would be a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The press agency work being done to prejudice the prosecution in the West Peterborough protest by means of 'despatches' sent out from Ottawa, Peterborough, etc, is a growing scandal.

The attempt of the authors to make it appear that everybody is anxious to have the protest called off, the leaders of the Conservative party at Ottawa included but that the coterie of Mr. Stratton's enemies at Peterborough will not consent, is futile. What will the 220 "other gentlemen" think of it?

What will be the outcome of the recent revelations made before the Methodist Conference by men who have got that fierce courage which alone is fit to cope with giant evils? Will the amelioration of the miseries of womankind be left to Fate as heretofore while we hold the smug and even tenor of our way, or will we try to make our manhood, our great professions square, at least in some small degree, with that measure of consistency which used to be expected of us and of them?

It is quite evident that nothing is more true than that "the letter killeth."

"It's a disgrace and a shame to Christianity," said Rev. W. E. Hassard, when pointing out that in the north country there was a waste of men and money due to the overlapping of denominations in small places.

"In one little place of 50 people I found two churches, Presbyterian and Methodist, and a Baptist coming in.

"I said that if the others did not do it the Methodist Church should have common sense and grace enough to put out of such places, and I was criticized for saying so. I replied to one brother by asking if he meant that the 50 people could not go to heaven via the Presbyterian Church." (Applause.)

"What is that motive? What is the aim and purpose of Religion, to begin with? The immediate answer clears a lot of our confusion out of the way. For we see, at once, that an early Religion is not a philosophic effort to explain the Universe. It is not a solution of an intellectual problem. It does not belong, as yet, to that side of our being. It makes no attempt to justify the ways of God to man. It has not yet become aware of moral and intellectual problems that need any solution. Primarily, it is the instinct of a weak, defenceless, timid creature, who, above all things needs something that will help; will shelter; will secure. He has no worth of his own; no sanctity; no security; no force. And he is facing a terrible world, crowded with menace, charged with peril, ready at any moment to rap, and slay, and devour. He can only creep warily to and fro, amid the swarming alarms. Nothing will respect him! The forces that he has to encounter are merciless, and fierce; they know no relenting. Men are as dangerous and cruel as the rest. He must at all costs win some power on his side. He must lie under some protective ban. He must have a friend in power, who will care, and also will clothe him with some defensive sanction, which his foes will fear to outrage.

Is there no such Power at hand? Is there no Advocate, who will befriend, and shield?—Canon Scott-Holland.

OF INTEREST

French Politics

In truth, it must be very difficult for strangers to understand French politics, when the best informed among my countrymen do not find it easy to describe them. It must be remembered that in our country the actual sense of word has often been modified and that the different parties are far from following the line of conduct which their names seem to imply.

One of the principal causes of misunderstanding arises from the fact that those whom we call 'Liberals' are the staunchest defenders of Conservative politics, and the most unyielding partisans of the principle of Authority. The word 'Socialism' is also applied in various senses, inasmuch as we constantly see men of opposed principles calling themselves 'Socialists.' Thus, M. de Mun, one of the heads of the Catholic party, likes to dub himself a socialist; likewise the Abbe Lemire, Deputy of the Nord, whilst the 'Socialistes Unifies' and the 'Socialistes Independants,' the two opposing bodies, hurl insults at one another, each proclaiming the other a lot of heretics.

As to the Royalists, there is only one point on which they agree —the insignificance of the Pretenders. And the most sincere defenders of Monarchy or Empire frankly acknowledge that they have, at the present moment, neither a King nor an Emperor to present to the suffrages of the nation.

If we turn to Parliament we find its till more difficult to understand the position taken up by the various parties. Little is learned by studying the vote in the Chamber, as whatever occurs during the public sitting is of small consequence in comparison to the manoeuvres in the lobbies.

To begin with, here is a Government with Ministers curiously dissimilar in temperament and doctrines. At their head a man who all his life was an ardent 'polemiste' with a genius for opposition who during forty years was an enthusiastic champion in the Press of every organized resistance of the [illegible] in power and whom a strange Fate now compels to take energetic measures to maintain authority. And with him many colleagues, on whom their past weighs equally heavily, likewise forced to bar the route to movements that they themselves helped to start.

This somewhat abnormal situation in the Ministry has, as a fatal result, brought about other anomalies in the various sections of the majority. M. Clemenceau, an advanced Radical, is constantly exposed to attacks — at times underhanded, at others straight forward—by powerful opponents who like M. Combes, are among the most prominent Radicals. On the other hand, M. Clemenceau, who at the time of the Dreyfus affair was the victim of most violent onslaughts, now reckons among his followers men who were formerly his most pitiless opponents. The 'Socialistes Unifies' are fighting him with all their might, which, as a natural result, causes the majority of the 'Socialistes Independants' to give him their support. And thus in the parliamentary battle we see votes to uphold the Ministry given by men whose political ideas seemed diametrically opposed.

The question that interests us is whether, now that parliament meets again after the recess, the Ministry will have the same heterogeneous majority or if it will founder under the multi-colored coalition of the 'Socialistes Unifies,' with certain Radicals, and certain sections of the Right. But the first meeting of parliament will scarcely give us any precise indication; for the interpellation of the postmen's strike will end in a vote of confidence. Yet this must not be considered in any other light than as a desire of the House to protect against a revolt of State officials; and the situation may remain critical for the Ministry as long as the interpellation on the Navy has not been discussed.

It is on this question of the navy that the Opposition will unite all their efforts to overthrow the Clemenceau Ministry, which, during the last few months, has had some serious defeats in bye-elections and which no longer seems to have the necessary cohesion to resist a vigorous attack. Moreover, it appears that this opposition does not solely exist in the lobbies of the Palais Bourbon or the Luxembourg, but is also to be met in the heart of the Cabinet itself. M. Caillaux's recent speech supplies a characteristic indication, and it may be interpreted as a timely declaration of a man who is anxious to relieve himself of certain responsibilities, and who is a candidate for the next combination.

I repeat, therefore, that it would be rash to judge of the strength of the Ministry by the figures of the majority which it will secure at the first interpellation because many who on this occasion will give a vote of confidence to M. Clemenceau will at the first favorable opportunity turn against him.

These incidents are greatly exaggerated by the Press, and they should be reduced to proper proportions in any estimate of the general drift of our politics, which are and will remain, notwithstanding the violence and the frequency of these parliamentary storms, absolutely democratic at home and loyally faithful abroad to the views taken since the 'entente cordiale.'

No doubt there are timid men who see in the impatient attitude of a certain number of workers and of small Government clerks an excuse for a retrograde movement, and I know people who at each more or less sensational strike, or at every diplomatic incident, at once sell out their stock and make ready for flight to distant shores, their portmanteaux full of gold.

Luckily however, we have in France but a small number of these cowards who are always ready to become panic stricken and to clamor for all the reactionary measures which they fancy will protect them.

The vast majority remain calm, thinking it inevitable that a few thousand of the six million workmen in the country should be on strike and refusing to mistake an economical, normal phenomenon for signs of an imminent revolution. There are strikes in all part of the world quite as important, but France holds a privileged position in public opinion, which, by way of compensation, has certain disadvantages; I mean that if she benefits by the attention which everybody bestows on her, she is, as a natural consequence, liable to be too severely judged by the very people who are indifferent to the troubles of a similar kind that take place in other countries. To those severe critics, so prompt to see our country a prey to Anarchy, I beg to submit a few figures. There are in France 5,475 workmen's syndicates, with 890,000 members. Of these 890,000 600,000 belong to the 2,900 syndicates who do not form part of the General Conference of Labour (Confederation generale du Travail.) It therefore follows that this organisation cannot boast of more than 290,000 adherents, of whom scarcely 100,000 are supposed to hold revolutionary or anti-militarist opinions. Under these conditions it would be absurd to pretend that France is hopelessly in the hands of men who create disturbances; and it is necessary to get rid of the habit of judging the ensemble of the Proletariat, so hard-working, and so peaceably inclined, from a handful of fanatics whose influence is undoubtedly limited.

Our friends need have no fear. We are at the present moment in the midst of a crisis, from which we are not the only ones to suffer. But in order to emerge from it without damage it is necessary to understand that a Republic cannot alter its principles to suit political life, but that one day or other it is bound to apply them to the administrative and economic sphere.

This problem is not an easy one to solve, with impatience on one side and indifference on the other. For all that we are not without first-class elements, always ready to do their duty, which are all the more active because they work unobtrusively. In fact despite the small troubles seized upon by sensation-mongers, the work of progress is slowly but surely pursuing its course. The laws for the protection of Labor are passed and carried out, thanks to the constant efforts of the Ministry of Labour; democratic reforms are introduced every day in our code of law; the separation of Church and State has been accomplished without upset, and the most inflammatory protestations have had no effect on public opinion; the income tax will, in all probability, be voted towards the end of the present Session, and the House will not dare to face the coming elections without having at last found a solution to the problem of Old-Age Pensions.

It should be noted, on the other hand, that France continues her foreign policy methodically and composedly; and that she contributes in a large measure towards the maintenance of European peace. The understanding with Germany on the Morocco question has been concluded without effecting in any way our cordial relations with England. On both sides of the Channel it has been understood that France was seeking no new departure, but was endeavoring to remove a trouble ever present to all the Powers. The collective effort of the nations is more than ever necessary to overcome difficulties that are constantly arising, and are threatening even at the present moment. In fact, the position of Mulai Hafid appears extremely critical, the new Sultan having, it seems, adopted a course by which he estranged the foreign colonies, without conciliating his fanatic subjects.

In the Balkans the intervention of France, in close accord with England, has done much towards a settlement of a conflict that might have set fire to the whole of Europe. Our action will be continued in Turkey all the more effective since M. Constans is likely to be soon replaced, and our future representative will no longer be hampered by old friendship with the dethroned Sultan. Our influence—always in accord with England—will no doubt be required in view of a definite settlement in Crete, the last question to solve of all those that came up after the introduction of the new Ottoman regime. It will require a great deal of tact for the united Powers not to offend the susceptibilities of Young Turkey while satisfying the demands of Greece, who despite her desire not to raise trouble with her neighbors, cannot relinquish an annexation which is an accomplished fact. But, fortunately, there are compensations that can be offered to a nation battling with financial complications. The only point is to get them accepted without hurting the "amour-propre" of either party.

Too Much Lawn Mower

Yorkville, Ill., June 14.—Pushing a lawn mower cost Mrs. Elizabeth L. Gertrude Sheridan her life. She was taken to the Aurora hospital yesterday suffering from injuries brought on by the exertions of operating the grass-cutter, and died there today.

Mrs. Sheridan was of an athletic nature and chose the grass-cutting as a diversion. She never had attempted the mowing of the lawn before, but believed it would be only little more than exercise." She had barely finished her task when she fainted. It was believed she was merely tired, but she failed to rally.

GAY OLD MARQUIS MARRIED THEN PUFFS CLAY PIPE

DeClermont, Who Calls Himself Simply Herbert Nomen in America, Takes German Fraulein to Wife.

New York, June 15. — Hubert Nomen, known to his intimates as the Marquis de Clermont, was married yesterday to Martha Anna Prufrock, in the City Hall, by Alderman Herman Beyer, to whom the Marquis gave $5. The Marquis gave his age as fifty-five years. He looks about eighty; his friends say he is ninety-five, and newspapers in 1906 gave his age as sixty-three. Miss Prufrock, who as. gave her age as twenty-six and looked it.

Notwithstanding the fact that the marriage was an international one the bride being German, the bridegroom French and the Alderman American, the couple are to live unostentatiously. In fact, the Marquis was found last evening lying on a cot in a hall bedroom in the tenement house at No. 103 Third avenue, near Thirteenth street, with his shoes, shirt and socks on, and a clay pipe in his mouth.

As regards apparel, he did not look the nobleman, but his long face, with its high-domed forehead, his manner and his diction, though he speaks brokenly, gave the impression that he might very well be a nobleman, after all. His looks gave the impression, too, that he was more, much more, than fifty-five.

FAMILY 1,000 YEARS OLD.

"I am Hubert Nomen," he said. "In France I am the Marquis de Clermont, but here in America I do not claim the title. The family is over a thousand years old. I am the last of my line. My age? Humph! I am fifty-five and I feel twenty-five. Put that down—I feel twenty-five. Ninety-five? Nonsense!" And the old fellow chuckled as if highly amused.

"Rich? — No; we are all poor," he went on. "Ruined in the French revolution. I have nothing but a small income that comes to me month by month from France. I have a castle, yes, at Auverge near Lyons. I was there a little while ago, and we are going back again soon—perhaps."

The Marquis chuckled again. He took from his coat four small pictures, of the stamp photo variety, showing a young woman, the bride.

"She is a nice girl, a great girl," he said, looking at them and chuckling till his white beard trembled. "I like my wife! Ha, ha, I have never been married before. She is younger than I am, yes. That is as it should be; is it not? But I come of a great family. Mind you, though, I do not claim my title in this country."

Mrs. Nomen, seemingly not at all disturbed by the acquisition of a title, was found two floors below. She hails from Berlin and offsets her husband's strong French accent with her even stronger German speech.

"He told me he was fifty-five," she said simply when asked her husband's age. "I don't know anything otherwise. It does not matter. He has been very good to me and I could not have done better, even with a younger man."

She seemed entirely unaffected and natural. She said she was alone in this country and did fancy sewing for a living. They hoped to go away soon, she added.

The tenement was old but the Marquis's apartment was spotlessly clean though it contained an odd assortment of things. Newspaper pictures covered the walls. The trunk bore cigarette boxes, books and newspapers. Behind it was a small oil stove. On the bed was the wedding feast—a box of crackers and a half dozen oranges. The bridegroom's new hat and new shoes were on view and a second clay what is tich dirt.

Nomen came to this country on a visit in 1880 and returned again in 1895. He lived for ten years in North Adams, Mass., where he got the public all through his ability as a chess player and his courtly manner. There he announced his engagement to the Duchess Marguerite de Penthievre, of Bourgoyne, but soon it was said the wedding had been postponed because he did not like to cross the ocean in the winter time. The Marquis was asked last night why the marriage never took place.

"I turned Protestant," he explained "and the engagement was broken off. The Duchess was a Catholic."

The old occupant of the tenement bed-room had a lot of clippings saved up showed his pride in his prominence. Nevertheless in the City Hall he gave his name only as Hubert Nomen aged 55, born in France, whose father's name was Jules. He said nothing of his title. The young woman seemed proud of the aged husband to be. Immediately on obtaining the license they were married.

NEEDLEWORK HINTS.

Bags Acceptable Gifts at Any Time of Year.

A FASCINATING NEW MODEL.

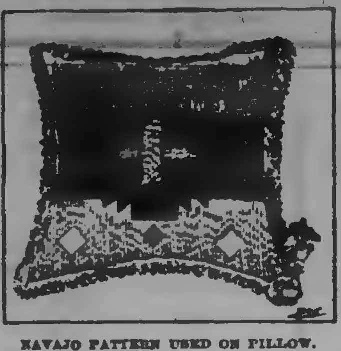
Handy Contrivance For Use In the Library—The Latest Embroidery Designs Are Borrowed From the Indians—The Old Navajo Patterns.

As no woman can ever have too many workbags, they make popular gifts at any time of the year. One of the loveliest of the new ones this year has a raffia bottom in a simple, quickly woven design, made up over a bag of colored silk or satin, cut in a square, with the casing run in a circle so that the four corners fall over in deep points.



NAVAJO PATTERN USED ON PILLOW.

The silk may be entirely doubled and the casing stitched through the two thicknesses, or only the upper part is lined to the depth of the casing. Ribbon the same color as the silk or, if the bag be flowered, to match one of the tones in the flowers is used for drawstrings.

These are nice gifts for children to make who have learned raffia work in school. The girls and boys can do the bottoms of the bag, and mother can make the bag itself and put it together. Another bag that is very useful in the library is a small and cleverly contrived affair to hold a ball of string. A receptacle for this purpose can easily be cut from soft leather. The bag is made of four pieces of leather brought to a rounding point at the bottom and shaped like the petals of a flower at the top. The leather pieces are placed together with leather strings which are slipped through the center of the cover, which is cut in scallops or sections around the edge. Each section of the bag is rolled over at the top, and every other scallop of the cover is tucked inside the bag. The sections of the bag are decorated with three eyelets each, which are worked in twisted silk.

The newest art embroideries are being done in patterns borrowed from the Indians. The gobelin tapestry stitch is used with heavy mercerized floss and applied to heavy canvas in such a way as to cleverly represent some of the old Navajo patterns. The work is exceedingly simple to do, as each stitch is stamped on the canvas. Table runners and pillows in these patterns are very artistic.

Rare Dishes For Society.

This is the season when novel things are the craze of the nation. There is a hint that even in dinner giving a touch of originality may be expected. The clever hostess leaves the beaten path and plunges into new fields. Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter has an entire menu made up of rare East Indian dishes with which she plans to please the jaded palates of Washington officialdom. The president, next to a good new story, likes, of all things, to partake of a good new dish. Consequently everybody in Washington is going through the family cookbooks and digging out old recipes of every land against the season, when seven dinner parties a week make up what fashionable folk must suffer. Then comes a navy man who has taken in the antipodes on his sojourn about the globe, and he has a recipe for beef and mutton stew which epicures call good. Gingerbread made according to a recipe that was old centuries ago is becoming popular in Washington society. Mrs. Roosevelt guards the recipe as her husband protects the diplomatic secrets of the nation.

A Double Writing Table.

The furniture makers have put out a very good writing desk for a sitting room. It has an upright centerpiece filled with pigeonholes on both sides. There is a lid on each side which is large enough to be fitted out with the usual desk implements. Two people can sit at it comfortably without staring into each other's face, as the center upright is higher than the head.

There are thirteen prisoners in the local jail at the present time. They are all males.

IT'S ENGLISH, YOU KNOW!

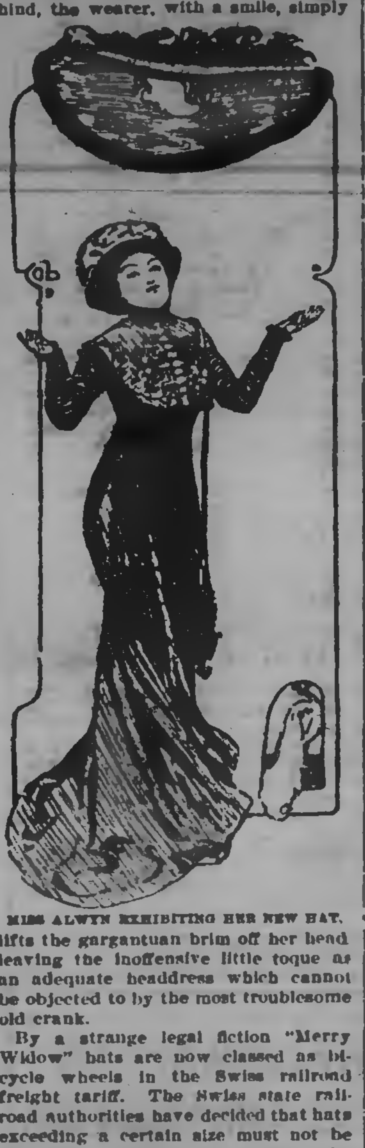
A "Double Barreled" Matinee Hat Worn by a Londoner.

A novel solution of the matinee hat problem has been introduced by Miss Jean Alwin of London.

She has designed a hat consisting of two parts, the crown and the brim, which are made quite separate. The crown in itself forms a tiny toque, offering a minimum of obstruction to the view of any one sitting behind it, while the detachable brim forms an enormous exaggerated "Merry Widow" affair.

When the hat is worn at a matinee and causes the usual protests from behind, the wearer, with a smile, simply lifts the gargantuan brim off her head leaving the inoffensive little toque as an adequate headdress which cannot be objected to by the most troublesome old crank.



MISS ALWYN EXHIBITING HER NEW HAT.

By a strange legal fiction "Merry Widow" hats are now classed as bicycle wheels in the Swiss railroad freight tariff. The Swiss state railroad authorities have decided that hats exceeding a certain size must not be worn by lady passengers, but must be carried as baggage.

THE LATEST GAME.

Suspense, and It Promises to Become Very Popular.

Suspense is the name of a new game which promises to be popular. An enterprising girl introduced it recently at a party, and it scored an immediate hit. It was played something like this:

One of the guests entered the parlor with a manuscript, which he asked the company to listen to while he read.

"James Harrigan, coal baron, frowned when he looked up from his papers to find Albert Percival Duval before him," the guest read.

"'I tell you, young man, it's no use, and I don't want to discuss it. Before I'd let you marry Phyllis'—

"'Don't say anything you'll regret later,' the young man interrupted, facing the older man with a steely glare, 'because I'm going to marry her anyway in spite of you.'

"For a minute Harrigan lost his temper. 'Get out of my office, you impertinent puppy, or I'll throw you out!'

"For answer Albert only stepped over to the door, slammed it shut, drove the key home and locked it. Then he turned to face the angry millionaire.

"In place of the imperturbable man of business he saw the Harrigan who used to be pit boss. Harrigan jumped to his desk, pulled out a drawer and drew a gleaming six shooter. 'A move and you're a dead man!' he started to say.

"But Duval as he turned from the door had seized a heavy bronze ink well from the secretary's desk. Quick as a flash he threw it. The heavy missile struck the revolver just as Harrigan brought it to cover his opponent.

"With muttered curses the two men came together. Weaponless, brute strength against brute strength, they struggled and writhed. Slowly, mercilessly, Harrigan's fingers tightened around the younger man's throat. He jammed his head between a corner of the desk and the floor."

"Now, what happened next?" the guest who was reading the story demanded of the listeners. "Every one's got paper and pencil. Quick! You've got five minutes to write the next paragraph. Don't write over fifty words."

Recovering from their surprise, the guests got busy. Some had serious answers, others laughable ones. The prize for the best answer was a copy of one of the "six best thrillers." The sequel that won it ran like this:

"Just as James Harrigan was crushing the last breath from Duval's body he stopped, gasped and released his hold. The younger man's coat had come open. On the waistcoat gleamed a pin.

"Why, you're a fraternity brother of mine," he said. "I beg your pardon. Get up and let me dust you off."

Edmonton real estate brokers have rung the death knell of curbstone brokers in that city.

Pioneer Days in Missouri.

In 1851 there was in Huntsville a man who pulled teeth for 25 cents and a photographer who made daguerrotypes at $1.50 each. The first was called "doctor" and the second "professor." They moved in the highest circles, as being the representatives of the sciences and arts. With deer, birds and all manner of game in the woods and fine fish in the streams so cheap that the poorest larders were stocked with it, the grocers did a big business in mackerel, herring and sardines. The latter were real dainties, because the better food was so plentiful the pioneers got tired of it.

LEGISLATURE WILL BE ASKED TO CONFIRM THE BY-LAW

City Council Passes Resolution in Reference to Purity Ware Measure—Business Men of City Guarantee Fine Site for Company.

At a special meeting last night the city council passed a resolution to ask the Legislature to confirm the Purity Ware bylaw which was recently voted on. A letter was read from Purity Ware Limited, asking the city to make a definite proposition in order to make it possible to carry on negotiations with the Montreal financial concern interested. It was stated that if the city offered something definite it might be possible to arrange matters so as to proceed with location of the industry here.

It was moved by Ald. Gillespie, and seconded by Ald. Turner,—"That the City Clerk write Purity Ware Ltd., and inform them that the council is now in a position to furnish the power in accordance with the arrangements made with them, as it has a letter from the Peterborough Light and Power Company offering to supply power in accordance with the arrangement, and that steps have been taken to ensure the passage of an act by the Legislature of Ontario to confirm the by-law voted on to aid the company, and that the council will apply and press for the passage of such an act and has no doubt whatever that the act will be passed when the Legislature meets."

If the Legislature does not confirm the by-law, the city will offer the company a free site and cheap electric power. Two of the city business men went around yesterday and in a few hours nearly $3000 was subscribed to give the company a free site if the by-law is not confirmed. Enough of the business men are putting up $100 a piece to make up the amount required.

Those present were: Mayor Rush and Aldermen Buller, McIntyre, Turner, Gillespie, Duffus and Metheral.

OTHER MATTERS

Mayor Rush referred to the death of ex-Mayor A. L. Davis and said it would be well to have the city represented at the funeral. On motion of Ald. Buller and Ald. Gillespie, the Mayor was appointed to represent the city at the funeral.

A letter was received from the township council of Cavan, asking for an opportunity to wait on the city council with reference to securing assistance in building a road on the 14th concession of Cavan.

This matter was up before the council last year. The request of the Cavan council was left in the hands of the Mayor.

The Mayor was also instructed to arrange a meeting to give the Ministerial Association and Rev. Father McColl an opportunity to address the council.

PROPOSE FLUSHING GUTTERS AND SIDEWALKS TO HELP KEEP DOWN THE DUST

Ald Turner will at the next meeting of the Board of Works propose that the gutters and sidewalks on George street from Brock to Charlotte streets be flushed late at night or early in the morning. After eleven o'clock pm, or before five o'clock am, is Ald. Turner's suggestion.

Ald. Turner believes that to do as outlined above would be a great help in keeping the dust down. Many complaints are being made by the merchants at the present.

Ald. Turner asked the Water Commissioners at last night's meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee if there would be any objection to the city using the water for flushing purposes.

Mr Matthews said he did not think there would be. The work would have to be done by a competent man in order that the hydrants would not be put out of order or cellars flooded

Ald Turner said the intention was to have a first class man in charge of the work if it was decided to go ahead with it.

Ald Turner also inquired if citizens having lawn services could water their boulevards free of cost and Mr. Matthews said they had that privilege.

FIRE CHIEF AND CHAIRMAN WILL ATTEND CONVENTION

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night and cleared up a large amount of business. Ald. Buller was in the chair and Ald. Turner, Morgan and Hicks and Chief Howard were the others present.

Chief Howard asked for the privilege of attending the International Convention of the Fire Chiefs of America. He asked that one of the aldermen or some public spirited citizen be authorized to go with him, and that an appropriation be set aside to pay his expenses.

Ald. Turner said he was quite willing that the chief should go.

Ald. Morgan also agreed to send the chief and added that he would like to see the chairman of the committee go too.

Ald. Hicks was also agreeable.

Ald. Turner and Ald. Hicks moved that the chief and the chairman of the committee be sent to the convention and that their expenses be paid. The convention will be held at Grand Rapids, Mich., on August 16th to 22nd. The two delegates will be allowed $50 each.—Carried.

Geo. Grange, assistant chief of the fire brigade, was paid his salary for the 16 days he was off duty on account of injuries.

Chief Howard brought up the matter of holidays for four of the men at the fire hall, who were entitled to the two weeks holidays that were provided for in the proposed by-law that the committee had considered favorably. The cheif wanted authority to grant the holidays and put on a substitute while the men were having them.

The intention is to give the men their pay in full while they are absent.

After some discussion the matter was left over till the next meeting.

DR GREER'S ACCOUNT.

Dr. Greer was present at the Fire, Water and Light Committee in reference to the non-payment of his bill for attending to a fireman who was injured at a fire last August. The account was only a small one ($10), but he was instructed to send the bill into the city.

The committee last year passed the account and the Finance Committee threw it out.

The chief explained that the man was injured through a faulty chemical.

Teh committee passed a resolution recommending that the account be paid by the Finance Committee.

It was decided to purchase a Bible for the fire hall.

WAS SPLENDID BOARD AT THIS MORNING'S MEETING

And All the Cheese Sold Brought 11 3-4 Cents — Bidding Was Brisk—Mr. Cook set the Prevailing Price.

All the cheese at the meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning went at 11 3-4 cents. It was not all taken by one bidder at his was not all taken by one bidder at this price but this figure was reached for the different lots sold.

There was excitement too over some little tilts that took place but these amounted to nothing and simply added a little variety to the ordinary routine.

The showing made by the factories was splendid, 4127 cheese being boarded and nearly every factory sent a good representation towards the excellent total.

Perrytown was a new comer today and made its advent with 35 boxes.

Westwood took first place in the matter of cheese boarded, placing 220 for the buyers selection.

It was a few moments after the usual hour when the session opened owing to a short delay and Mr. Gillespie started the ball rolling by offering 11 cents. This was advanced to 11 1-8 by Mr. Gunn. Mr. Riddell made it 11 1-4, Mr. Cook raised it to 11 3-8, Mr. Gillespie made it 11 7-16, Mr. Cook 11 1-2. Mr. Morton 11 5-8, Mr. Gillespie 11 11-16, Mr Cook 11 3-4.

This put an end to further advances and Mr. Cook named Killarney, Norwood, King Edward, Myrtle, Indian River.

Mr Weir offered 11 3-4 for further selections and took Keene, Lang, Shearer, Cedardale, Stoney Lake.

Mr. Gillespie offered 11 3-4 for further. He selected Central Smith, Villiers, Bensfort, Westwood, East Emily Trewern, Maple Leaf, Ormonde, Selwyn, Warminster.

Mr Cook went 11 3-4 for further selections and chose Oadkale, Warsaw, Crown, Daisy D, Shamrock.

Mr. Gillespie made it 11 7-16 for further selections.

Mr. Kerr named that price for the balance of the board.

Mr. Gillespie raised the bid to 11 3-4 for further and Mr. Cook went 11 3-4 for the balance of the board.

Some factories refused and he took Fleetwood, Cavanville, Fraserville. Pine Grove refused so did Lakefield, Young's Point, North Dummer and Perrytown.

Mr. Gillespie added Young's Point, to his list.

This concluded the business of the board and the usual two weeks' adjournment was called.

The cheese was boarded as follows;

| Keene | 160 |
| Warminster | 125 |

An Opinion Wanted

Editor of the Review.

Sir—Would you please give an answer to the following question as it affects my happiness and may help others? I was engaged to a girl. We broke. Out of pique she engaged herself to another she did not love. I am ready to make up and what should I do? An answer will oblige.

Yours truly,

The Coming Eclipse

Editor of the Review

Sir,—The plane of the ecliptic will pass the corundum of the sun at 2.30 p.m. on June 17th but as it will then be broad daylight few will be able to see it. I regard the attempt to signal Mars as inopportune owing to the foggy weather reported from Jack's Creek. The concavity of the atmosphere is now provable and can be seen any day from Armour's hill.

Yours truly,
W. A. B.

One of the Merchants

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I presume that you have often heard the different merchants complain of people going or sending to Toronto and buying the different things they require, instead of buying from the merchants in Peterborough, but can you wonder at people from Peterborough going or sending to Toronto or other places for their supplies, when some of those very same merchants give any orders they may have, to men that are outsiders, and just traveling through, and do not pay taxes or help to support our city in any way.

There are just as good merchants in the city of Peterborough as can be found in any part of our vast Dominion, and it is a slur on our mechanics in Peterborough, when outsiders are engaged to do work that can be done equally as well, and probably better, and just as cheap by our own mechanics in Peterborough.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain.

Respectfully yours,
MECHANIC.

The proceeds which amounted to considerable, will be used to furnish the library.

WEDDING BELLS

SISSON—GILLESPIE

A wedding that is of interest to the many friends of the bride and groom in the city took place, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Gillespie, when their daughter, Mabel Jean, became the wife of Mr. Chas. Everett Sisson, son of Mrs. Thomas Sisson, of Otonabee.

The ceremony was performed at two o'clock, by Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Stratford, assisted by Rev. R. W. Raddiford, of the Park street Baptist church, in the presence of over sixty guests. The parlors were prettily decorated in white and green. The bride and groom were standing before a bank of ferns and palms, with white snowballs and bride's blossoms. Miss Annie Sisson, cousin of the groom, played the wedding march while Mr. Horace C. Wright, of Toronto, sang "The Bedouin Love Song" after the ceremony. The bride, who was unattended, wore a dainty Empire gown of champagne San Toy, with beautiful hand-made lace sleeves and yoke, the gift of an aunt.

Some pretty frocks were worn by the guests, Miss Bessie Gillespie wearing pink voile over pink silk; Miss Edith Gillespie, Rajah silk, and Mrs. Gillespie, the bride's mother, a handsome black voile. Miss Emma Pender of Cobourg, wore white mull with trimmings of white Irish lace.

Other out-of-town guests were Dr. and Mrs. Bonnycastle, of Campbellford; Mr. Peter Gillespie, of Toronto; Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Stratford; Dr. Robert Mann, of Toronto, and a number of others.

A large number of beautiful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Sisson, evincing the high esteem in which they are held in the city. The city officials sent a cabinet of pearl handled cutlery, and the Water Commissioners a handsome cheque.

The bride's travelling suit was of blue cloth with blue net waist over silk and blue hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Sisson left on 4.48 C.P.R. for Honey Harbor, Muskoka, where they will spend a couple of weeks. On their return they will reside at 515 Gilmour street, where they will receive after September 15th.

She wore a Paris white leghorn hat with white plumes and [illegible] and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley The bridesmaid wore a dress of pink Gloria voile over taffeta pink with trimmings of satin and French val. Her hat was of pink chiffon. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the bride's parents, 582 Aylmer street, and at high noon a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at which about forty friends and relatives were present. Guests from out of town, were the Misses Treacy of Brantford; Mr. and Mrs Harry O'Brien of Ottawa; Miss Irene Cunningham and Miss May Curtin of Lindsay. ### City Council Asked For $500 Each for Water Commissioners

At the council meeting last night Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., asked for permission on behalf of the Water Commissioners to charge $500 each more for their services during the construction of the dam, which will occupy all this year and part of 1910. The duties of the commissioners will be very heavy while the dam is being built.

Mayor Rush asked the Commissioners to make their request in writing. This will be done.

BITS IN MOUTHS EXCEPT WHEN THE HORSES ARE FEEDING

A few weeks ago Ald. Morgan objected to the practice at the fire hall of leaving the bits in the horses' mouths when they are not in use. Ald. Morgan contended that it was bad for the horses. Other members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee did not agree with this. To settle the dispute the city clerk was instructed to write the fire departments of other cities in the province and secure information on the matter.

The replies were read at the committee meeting last night and were practically all to the effect that the bits were left in the horses' mouths except when they were feeding. This is what is done here.

JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP GOES TO NORWOOD TEAM

Norwood, June 14.—The final game of the Junior Midland League was played in Norwood Monday evening when the locals again took the Havelock juniors down another notch by the score of 2—0.

The game was the fastest either of the teams has played this season and some fine playing was shown by both the locals holding their positions better and playing a faster game at all stages.

This has now settled the league, the championship going to Norwood without a defeat or a goal scored against them.

Mathewson, of Havelock, the referee, started the game at 7.10 and Havelock rushed. Two shots in quick succession were turned out by Hawthorne in goal in fine style. Then the locals pressed and after 7 minutes of fast combination play, Rogers, from right wing, placed a beautiful shot to Searight in front of goal. Searight then passed to Kidd, who with a clear shot scored the first goal. Again from the draw off Havelock succeeded in putting in a couple of shots, neither taking effect. End to end rushes were frequently broken up by the invincible defence work of Kempt and Doherty.

Shortly before half-time, Richardson at right, made a lone rush and from many yards out placed the ball in the corner of the goal for the second tally.

The second half was in favor of the locals, who were, however, unable to score, though several very hard shots were put in. Bennett, in goal for the visitors, played a good steady game and kept the score down with the help of Tomlinson at back.

The juniors deserve great credit for their playing. Every man putting up a good game, especially Richardson.

The game ended with the score 2-0 in favor of the locals, who now have the championship.

GOLF AND CRICKET SWINGS; "W. G." GIVES GOOD ADVICE

The Body-Swing Gives Weight and Follow-Through in Golf—Body-Weight Comes Down Upon Ball in Cricket.

"My first-class cricket career is over, after a very long and delightful innings," writes the veteran cricketer, W. G. Grace, in a little shilling volume just issued, called "W. G.'s Little Book." In this he gives advice on batting, fielding, umpiring and on cricket journalism.

"W. G." says that the lot of the professional cricketer of the present day compared with that of the past has been changed very much for the better. If he is a sound man and has his heart in his work he really has a remarkably good time, especially if he has something at his back in the shape of a trade or business to fall back upon when the day comes that the county eleven is complete without him.

OUR FINEST BAT.

"W. G." says the finest cutter he ever saw was the Hon. C. G. Lyttelton, now Viscount Cobham, and that Charles Fry is the best batsman we have.

Discussing cricket and golf, "W.G." says;—"I am not at all sure that golf is a good game, from an educative point of view, for youngsters, as it must be admitted that is a selfish game, as each golfer plays for his personal advantage, and often glories in the mistakes of his opponents.

"There are a great variety of cricket strokes, and generally they are very different from golf strokes. Some people who ought to know better say the drive is the same in cricket as in golf; the differences, in my opinion, are these. The cricket stroke is a hit, and the golf drive should be a sweep or swing.

"W. G." ON GOLF.

"Again, in driving or hitting in cricket the bat should be taken quickly straight up or back, but [illegible] of the club should be taken slowly back and swept down in a different plane to that of the cricket drive. The secret of success in batting is that the batsman should get well over the ball and play with a straight bat. In most golf strokes the reverse is best. The grip in cricket and golf is quite different, notwithstanding what my friend, Geo. Beldam, says about it.

"In cricket you grip the bat handle more or less tight with both hands, if anything firmer with the right hands, and one's thumbs are round the handle. In golf you grip the club with your fingers, and your thumb should be down the handle, or nearly so, and not round it, as in cricket, while your left hand should grip the handle like a vise. Then in golf you should make your body work on a definite axis in order to get the full body-power into your drive, and at the same time keep you head still. There is no twisting the body in the same way for any cricket stroke.

WHY CRICKETERS CAN'T HIT GOLF BALLS.

"There is one thing about the game that is not a little curious. How is it that first-class batsmen, really good-class players, who have gone on for years hitting a fast moving ball with accuracy, find it so difficult to hit a stationary golf ball? It cannot be only because of the smaller size of the latter. I am inclined to think that the difference in the striking implement and the plane of the receptive swings is the real trouble. A cricket bat should be swung perpendicularly for most driving purposes, while a golf club never should be."

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

SCORING OF BASE HITS.

When the ball is hit so slowly, towards a fielder that he cannot handle it in time to put out the batsman or force out a base runner.

---

In all cases where a base-runner is retired by being hit by a batted ball, unless batted by himself, the batsman should be credited with a base hit.

---

When a batted ball hits hte person or clothing of the umpire, as defined in Rule 53, sec. 6.

---

In no case shall a base hit be scored when a base-runner is forced out by the play.

---

The Y.M.C.A. and Strathconas practised together on the Oval last night. The Y. team are playing good ball and should make a good record in the intermediate league this season. The batting of both teams was good and the fielders were kept busy. The batteries were; Y.M.C.A., Armstrong, Maguire and Dobbin. Strathconas—Hickey, Ferguson and Wilson.

---

Toronto won and lost at Jersey City yesterday, and will play another double-header to-day.

---

Kelly was put out of the second game for disputing a decision of Umpire Stafford's.

---

Rochester lost twice but is still on top, and there was a general shifting of positions among the several division teams.

---

Pittsburg continued its winning streak, and won its fourteenth straight.

WRESTLING

Whisper, isn't it time Mr. Thomas Flanagan took a tumble and called off that wrestling turn to his athletic meet next week, or is Scarboro' Beach to be the business address for the most disgusting, brutal and inhuman sport possible with the exception of bull fighting that we know of? What one sees in witnessing a couple of men gouging one another's eyes out or crushing of bones is beyond us and the east end park is ill advised if it allows this kind of jerk-water, shady amusement to figure upon its athletic programme.—Toronto Telegram.

ST. ANDREWS' WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

All Saints' Were Defeated in Junior Church League Game Last Night by 10-1

St. Andrew's defeated All Saints' last night at Boswell's field by 10—1 and are now the holders of the Bradburn cup, emblematic of the championship of the Junior Church League for this year. The batting of the winners and the errors of the losers were features of the contest. Mr. Will O'Brien umpired satisfactorily to both teams.

The batteries were—All Saints'—Taylor and Woods; St. Andrew's—Creswell and McConnell.

SHOOT OF GUN CLUB

The regular shoot of the Peterborough Gun Club will be held in the Driving Park to-morrow afternoon at 4.30.

Money a Fleeting Joy.

Ellnor was very anxious to bring home an Angora cat from Maine last summer. Her mother objected, thinking that the care of a cat from Maine to Connecticut was entirely too arduous a task, so she tried to "buy off" Ellnor. "If you will say no more about the cat," she said, "I will give you a dollar to spend in Boston." Ellnor looked quite thoughtful for a moment, then said, "But, mother, how much longer a cat would last than a dollar."—Delineator.

Getting Ready to Propose.

A train stopped abruptly a few miles outside the little station of Hergats, in Bohemia, and the passengers alighted to ascertain what had happened. They found the guard engaged in shaving the engine driver, who apologized for the delay and explained that he was about to propose to the young woman in the refreshment room at the next station, and he had no time to complete his toilet before starting.—London Standard.

JEFFRIES TAKS LIKE A SAVAGE

Hopes Ketchell Will Kill Johnston—Pretty Undignified Language

Pittsburg, Pa., June 14.—James J. Jeffries, retired heavyweight champion of the world, arrived here this evening. He will box six rounds with Sam Berger at Duquesne Garden to-morrow night. A crowd of 20,000 greeted Jeffries with cheers. He then made the following speech;—

"I see Mr. Johnson is talking a lot. I had hopes that he was in earnest some days ago when he announced that he would be at the ringside to-morrow night to see how I did and that he would ask me some questions. I find he was four-flushing as usual and he didn't intend to come. I would like to have told him in front of the crowd just what I thought of him and his ways.

"I want to say this in all sincerity: I want to meet that black fellow more than I ever wanted to fight any living man. He has no business with that title.

"I have always been afraid of my own strength in a ring, for I fear I would kill a man, but I will have no such fear when I get into the ring with this fellow. For the first time in my life I will then hit a man with all the force that is in me. I want to see how far I can knock him.

"It looks now as if it were up to me to whip this fellow. I think Ketchel has given too much away to this big black fellow, and I don't think Ketchel can beat him. I think Kaufman, too, lacks the experience, and I will have to turn the trick.

"Do I hope young Ketchel beats this black? Yes. I hope for more than that. I hope when Ketchel meets Johnson that he kills him. I repeat that I hope he kills him.

"In six weeks now my theatrical engagement will be over, and then I will talk to this black about the fight. We will then see how sincere he is."

Beck Horse Was Second.

London, June 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Three Canadians qualified in the hunters' class at the Horse Show yesterday. Hon. Adam Beck's entry was second in the class for horses carrying up to fifteen stone, with Leonard, of London, in reserve.

The only event yesterday morning was for the Toronto Cup, given for the best qualified hunters that had competed at the show, but there were not many of these, for the owners of genuine hunters fight shy of jumping their horses over the somewhat artificial jumps to be found at shows.

SALTING BABIES.

An Old World Practice That Goes Back to Bible Times.

"Salting" newly born infants, a practice that dates far back to Biblical times, still obtains in many parts of the old world. The Armenians in the Russian government of Eriwan cover the whole surface of the babe's body with fine salt, especial care being taken with the interstices between the fingers and all depressions, such as the armpit and the bend of the knee, so that no point shall remain unsalted.

The unhappy infant is left in the salt for three hours or longer and is then bathed in warm water.

The Armenians of some districts, having abandoned the practice, are called "unsalted" and are despised by the others.

The modern Greeks also sprinkle their babes with salt. If an enlightened mother protests the midwife is ready with the objection, "But if it isn't salted it will be puny and will never amount to anything."

If this salting process is carried on to excess the poor babes don't stand it at all. The skin becomes as red as fire, the irritation is intolerable, and the child dies in convulsions. Yet there is a mountain tribe in Asia Minor that mercilessly salts its newborn babes for twenty-four hours, which shows that the limits of human endurance are wide in some cases. This ancient custom is still in vogue in many parts of Germany, but the rites are merely symbolical. In one district a little salt is rubbed behind the child's ears, in others a pinch of salt is put on the tongue or a little paper of salt is inserted under the garment. It gives understanding, the people say, and wards off evil spirits.

The action of salt in keeping meat sound no doubt is the reason that this strengthening and sustaining power was ascribed to it. The usage became common in eastern countries, and it was not entirely confined to them. The prophet Ezekiel, referring to the degeneracy of Jerusalem, says:

"Neither wast thou washed in water to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all nor swaddled at all."

To many oriental tribes this means a grave omission of parental duty.

Sustaining Life.

Mrs. Andrew Crosse in her "Reminiscences" describes an old nurse born at Broomfield, England, who lived to be nearly a hundred. "All her life she had eaten 'a dew bit and breakfast, a stay bit and dinner, a nommet and crummet and a bit after supper,' eight meals in all. Besides this it was her invariable custom to mix together all the doctors' stuff left after any illness in the house and swallow it on the principle that what had cost money should not be wasted."

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

"I have one more confidence to repose in you. The nurse who has charge of Miss Grey was in my class in the hospital. We love each other, and to her I dared appeal on one point. Inspector"—here my voice unconsciously fell as he impetuously drew nearer—"a note was sent from that sick chamber on the night of the ball—a note surreptitiously written by Miss Grey while the nurse was in an adjoining room. The messenger was Mr. Grey's valet and its destination the house in which her father was enjoying his position as chief guest. She says that it was meant for him, but I have dared to think that the valet would tell a different story. My friend did not see what her patient wrote, but she acknowledged that if her patient wrote more than two words the result must have been an unintelligible scrawl, since she was too weak to hold a pencil firmly and so nearly blind that she would have had to feel her way over the paper."

The inspector started and, rising hastily, went to his desk, from which he presently brought the scrap of paper which had already figured in the inquest as the mysterious communication taken from Mrs. Fairbrother's hand by the coroner. Pressing it out flat, he took another look at it, then glanced up in visible discomposure.

"It has always looked to us as if written in the dark by an agitated hand, but"—

I said nothing. The broken and unfinished scrawl was sufficiently eloquent.

"Did your friend declare Miss Grey to have written with a pencil and on a small piece of unruled paper?"

"Yes. The pencil was at her bedside. The paper was torn from a book which lay there. She did not put the note when written in an envelope, but gave it to the valet just as it was. He is an old man and had come to her room for some final orders."

"The nurse saw all this? Has she that book?"

"No; it went out next morning with the scraps. It was some pamphlet, I believe."

The inspector turned the morsel of paper over and over in his hand.

"What is this nurse's name?"

"Henrietta Pierson."

"Does she share your doubts?"

"I cannot say."

"You have seen her often?"

"No, only the one time."

"Is she discreet?"

"Very. On this subject she will be like the grave unless forced by you to speak."

"And Miss Grey?"

"She is still ill, too ill to be disturbed by questions, especially on so delicate a topic. But she is getting well fast. Her father's fears as we heard them expressed on one memorable occasion were ill founded, sir."

Slowly the inspector inserted this scrap of paper between the folds of his pocketbook. He did not give me another look, though I stood trembling before him. Was he in any way convinced or was he simply seeking for the most considerate way in which to dismiss me and my abominable theory? I could not gather his intentions from his expression and was feeling very faint and heartsick when he suddenly turned upon me with the remark:

"A girl as ill as you say Miss Grey was must have had some very pressing matter on her mind to attempt to write and send a message under such difficulties. According to your idea, she had some notion of her father's designs and wished to warn Mrs. Fairbrother against them. But don't you see that such conduct as this would be preposterous, nay, unparalleled in persons of their distinction? You must find some other explanation for Miss Grey's seemingly mysterious action, and I an agent of crime other than one of England's most reputable statesmen."

"So that Mr. Durand is shown the same consideration, I am content," said I. "It is the truth and the truth only I desire. I am willing to trust my cause with you."

He looked none too grateful for this confidence. Indeed, now that I look back on this scene, I do not wonder that he shrank from the responsibility thus foisted upon him.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked.

"Prove something. Prove that I am altogether wrong or altogether right. Or if proof is not possible, pray allow me the privilege of doing what I can myself to clear up the matter."

"You?"

There was apprehension, disapprobation, almost menace in his tone. I bore it with as steady and modest a glance as possible, saying, when I thought he was about to speak again:

"I will do nothing without your sanction. I realize the dangers of this inquiry and the disgrace that would follow if our attempt was suspected before proof reached a point sufficient to justify it. It is not an open attack I meditate, but one"—

Here I whispered in his ear for several minutes. When I had finished, he gave me a prolonged stare, then he laid his hand on my head.

"You are a little wonder," he declared. "But your ideas are very quixotic, very. However," he added, suddenly growing grave, "something, I must admit, may be excused a young girl who finds herself forced to choose between the guilt of her lover and that of a man esteemed great by the world, but altogether removed from her and her natural sympathies."

"You acknowledge, then, that it lies between these two?"

"I see no third," said he.

I drew a breath of relief.

"Don't deceive yourself, Miss Van Arsdale. It is not among the possibilities that Mr. Grey has had any connection with this crime. He is an eccentric man, that's all."

"But—but"—

"I shall do my duty. I shall satisfy you and myself on certain points, and if"—I hardly breathed—"there is the least doubt, I will see you again and"—

The change he saw in me frightened away the end of his sentence. Turning upon me with some severity, he declared: "There are nine hundred and ninety-nine chances in a thousand that my next word to you will be to prepare yourself for Mr. Durand's arraignment and trial. But an infinitesimal chance remains to the contrary. If you choose to trust to it, I can only admire your pluck and the great confidence you show in your unfortunate lover."

And with this half hearted encouragement I was forced to be content not only for that day, but for many days, when—

CHAPTER XI.

BUT before I proceed to relate what happened at the end of those two weeks I must say a word or two in regard to what happened during them.

Nothing happened to improve Mr. Durand's position and nothing openly to compromise Mr. Grey's. Mr. Fairbrother, from whose testimony many of us hoped something would yet be gleaned calculated to give a turn to the suspicion now centered on one man, continued ill in New Mexico, and all that could be learned from him of any importance was contained in a short letter dictated from his bed in which he affirmed that the diamond when it left him was in a unique setting procured by himself in France; that he knew of no other jewel similarly mounted and that if the false gem was set according to his own description the probabilities were that the imitation stone had been put in place of the real one under his wife's direction and in some workshop in New York, as she was not the woman to take the trouble to send abroad for anything she could get done in this country. The description followed. It coincided with the one we all knew.

This was something of a blow to me. Public opinion would naturally reflect that of the husband, and it would require very strong evidence indeed to combat a logical supposition of this kind with one so forced and seemingly extravagant as that upon which my own theory was based. Yet truth often transcends imagination, and, having confidence in the inspector's integrity, I subdued my impatience for a week, almost for two, when my suspense and rapidly culminating dread of some action being taken against Mr. Durand were suddenly cut short by a message from the inspector, followed by his speedy presence in my uncle's house.

We have a little room on our parlor floor, very snug and secluded, and in this room I received him. Seldom have I dreaded a meeting more and seldom have I been met with greater kindness and consideration. He was so kind that I feared he had only disappointing news to communicate, but his first words reassured me. He said:

"I have come to you on a matter of importance. We have found enough truth in the suppositions you advanced at our last interview to warrant us in the attempt you yourself proposed for the elucidation of this mystery. That this is the most risky and altogether the most unpleasant duty which I have encountered during my several years of service, I am willing to acknowledge to one so sensible and at the same time of so much modesty as yourself. This English gentleman has a reputation which lifts him far above any unworthy suspicion, and were it not for the favorable impression made upon us by Mr. Durand in a long talk we had with him last night I would sooner resign my place than pursue this matter against him. Success would create a horror on both sides the water unprecedented during my career, while failure would bring down ridicule on us which would destroy the prestige of the whole force. Do you see my difficulty, Miss Van Arsdale? We cannot even approach this haughty and highly reputable Englishman with questions without calling down on us the wrath of the whole English nation. We must be sure before we make a move, and for us to be sure where the evidence is all circumstantial, I know of no better plan than the one you were pleased to suggest, which, at the time, I was pleased to call quixotic."

Drawing a long breath I surveyed him timidly. Never had I so realized my presumption or experienced such a thrill of joy in my frightened yet elated heart. They believed in Anson's innocence and they trusted me. Insignificant as I was, it was to my exertions this great result was due. As I realized this I felt my heart swell and my throat close. In despair of speaking I held out my hands. He took them kindly and seemed to be quite satisfied.

"Such a little, trembling, tear filled Amazon!" he cried. "Shall you have courage to undertake the task before you? If not"—

"Oh, but I have," said I. "It is your goodness and the surprise of it all which unnerves me. I can go through what we have planned if you think the secret of my personality and interest in Mr. Durand can be kept from the people I go among."

"It can if you will follow our advice implicitly. You say that you know the doctor and that he stands ready to recommend you in case Miss Pierson withdraws her services."

"Yes, he is eager to give me a chance. He was a college mate of my father's."

"How will you explain to him your wish to enter upon your duties under another name?"

"Very simply. I have already told him that the publicity given my name in the late proceedings has made me very uncomfortable; that my first case of nursing would require all my self possession and that if he did not think it wrong I should like to go to it under my mother's name. He made no dissent, and I think I can persuade him that I would do much better work as Miss Ayers than as the too well known Miss Van Arsdale."

"You have great powers of persuasion. But may you not meet people at the hotel who know you?"

"I shall try to avoid people, and if my identity is discovered, its effect or non-effect upon one we find it difficult to mention will give us our clew. If he has no guilty interest in the crime, my connection with it as a witness will not disturb him. Besides, two days of unsuspicious acceptance of me as Miss Grey's nurse are all I want. I shall take immediate opportunity, I assure you, to make the test I mentioned. But how much confidence you will have to repose in me! I comprehend all the importance of my undertaking and shall work as if my honor as well as yours were at stake."

"I am sure you will." Then for the first time in my life I was glad that I was small and plain rather than tall and fascinating like so many of my friends, for he said: "If you had been a triumphant beauty, depending on your charms as a woman to win people to your will, we should never have listened to your proposition or risked our reputation in your hands. It is your wit, your earnestness and your quiet determination which have impressed us. You see I speak plainly. I do so because I respect you. And now to business."

Details followed. After these were well understood between us I ventured to say: "Do you object—would it be asking too much—if I requested some enlightenment as to what facts you have discovered about Mr. Grey which go to substantiate my theory? I might work more intelligently."

"No, Miss Van Arsdale, you would not work more intelligently, and you know it. But you have the natural curiosity of one whose very heart is bound up in this business. I could deny you what you ask, but I won't, for I want you to work with quiet confidence, which you would not do if your mind were taken up with doubts and questions. Miss Van Arsdale, one surmise of yours was correct. A man was sent that night to the Ramsdell house with a note from Miss Grey. We know this because he boasted of it to one of the bellboys before he went out, saying that he was going to have a glimpse of one of the swellest parties of the season. It is also true that this man was Mr. Grey's valet, an old servant who came over with him from England. But what adds weight to all this and makes us regard the whole affair with suspicion is the additional fact that this man received his dismissal the following morning and has not been seen since by any one we could reach. This looks bad to begin with, like the suppression of evidence, you know. Then Mr. Grey has not been the same man since that night. He is full of care, and this care is not entirely in connection with his daughter, who is doing very well and bids fair to be up in a few days. But all this would be nothing if we had not received advices from England which prove that Mr. Grey's visit here has an element of mystery in it. There was every reason for his remaining in his own country, where a political crisis is approaching, yet he crossed the water, bringing his sickly daughter with him.

"The explanation as volunteered by one who knew him well was this: that only his desire to see or acquire some precious object for his collection could have taken him across the ocean at this time, nothing else rivaling his interest in governmental affairs. Still this would be nothing if a stiletto similar to the one employed in this crime had not once formed part of a collection of curios belonging to a cousin of his whom he often visited. This stiletto has been missing for some time, stolen, as the owner declared, by some unknown person. All this looks bad enough, but when I tell you that a week before the fatal ball at Mr. Ramsdell's, Mr. Grey made a tour of the jewelers on Broadway and, with the pretext of buying a diamond for his daughter, entered into a talk about famous stones, ending always with some question about the Fairbrother gem, you will see that his interest in that stone is established and that it only remains for us to discover if that interest is a guilty one. I cannot believe this possible, but you have our leave to make your experiment and see. Only do not count too much on his superstition. If he is the deep dyed criminal you imagine, the cry which startled us all at a certain critical instant was raised by himself and for the purpose you suggested. None of the sensitiveness often shown by a man who has been surprised into crime will be his. Relying on his reputation and the prestige of his great name, he will, if he thinks himself under fire, face every shock unmoved."

"I see; I understand. He must believe himself all alone; then, the natural man may appear. I thank you, inspector. That idea is of inestimable value to me, and I shall act on it. I do not say immediately; not on the first day, and possibly not on the second, but as soon as opportunity offers for my doing what I have planned with any chance of success. And now, advise me how to circumvent my uncle and aunt, who must never know to what undertaking I have committed myself."

Inspector Dalzell spared me another fifteen minutes, and this last detail was arranged. Then he rose to go. As he turned from me he said:

"Tomorrow?"

And I answered with a full heart, but a voice clear as my purpose:

"Tomorrow."

CHAPTER XII.

"THIS is your patient. Your new nurse, my dear. What did you say your name is? Miss Ayers?"

"Yes, Mr. Grey, Alice Ayers."

"Oh, what a sweet name!"

This expressive greeting, from the patient herself, was the first heart sting I received, a sting which brought a flush into my cheek which I would fain have kept down.

"Since a change of nurses was necessary I am glad they sent me one like you," the feeble but musical voice went on, and I saw a wasted but eager hand stretched out.

In a whirl of strong feeling I advanced to take it. I had not counted on such a reception. I had not expected any bond of congeniality to spring up between this high feeling English girl and myself to make my purpose hateful to me. Yet as I stood there looking down at her bright, if wasted, face I felt that it would be very easy to love so gentle and cordial a being and dreaded raising my eyes to the gentleman at my side lest I should see something in him to hamper me and make this attempt, which I had undertaken in such loyalty of spirit, a misery to myself and ineffectual to the man I had hoped to save by it. When I did look up and catch the first beams of Mr. Grey's keen blue eyes fixed inquiringly on me, I neither knew what to think nor how to act. He was tall and firmly knit and had an intellectual aspect altogether. I was conscious of regarding him with a decided feeling of awe and found myself forgetting why I had come there and what my suspicions were, suspicions which had carried hope with them, hope for myself and hope for my lover, who would never escape the opprobrium, even if he did the punishment, of this great crime, were this, the only other person who could possibly be associated with it, found to be the fine, clear souled man he appeared to be in this my first interview with him.

"This is your patient."

Perceiving very soon that his apprehensions in my regard were limited to a fear lest I should not feel at ease in my new home under the restraint of a presence more accustomed to intimidate than attract strangers, I threw aside all doubts of myself and met the advances of both father and daughter with that quiet confidence which my position there demanded.

The result both gratified and grieved me. As a nurse entering on her first case I was happy. As a woman with an ulterior object in view verging on the audacious and unspeakable, I was wretched and regretful and just a little shaken in the conviction which had hitherto upheld me.

I was therefore but poorly prepared to meet the ordeal which awaited me, when, a little later in the day, Mr. Grey called me into the adjoining room and, after saying that it would afford him great relief to go out for an hour or so, asked if I were afraid to be left alone with my patient.

"Oh, no, sir"— I began, but stopped in secret dismay. I was afraid, but not on account of her condition—rather on account of my own. What if I should be led into betraying my feelings on finding myself under no other eye than her own! What if the temptation to probe her poor sick mind should prove stronger than my duty toward her as a nurse!

My tones were hesitating, but Mr. Grey paid little heed. His mind was too fixed on what he wished to say himself.

"Before I go," said he, "I have a request to make—I may as well say a caution to give you. Do not, I pray, either now or at any future time, carry or allow any one else to carry newspapers into Miss Grey's room. They are just now too alarming. There has been, as you know, a dreadful murder in this city. If she caught one glimpse of the headlines or saw so much as the name of Fairbrother—which—which is a name she knows, the result might be very hurtful to her. She is not only extremely sensitive from illness, but from temperament. Will you be careful?"

"I shall be careful."

PRUNING THE PEAR TREE.

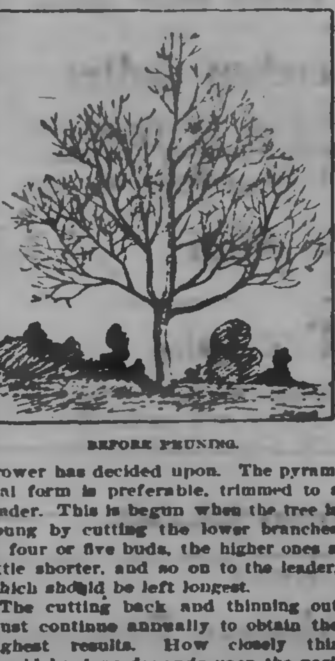
What to Cut, How to Cut and Why the Cut.

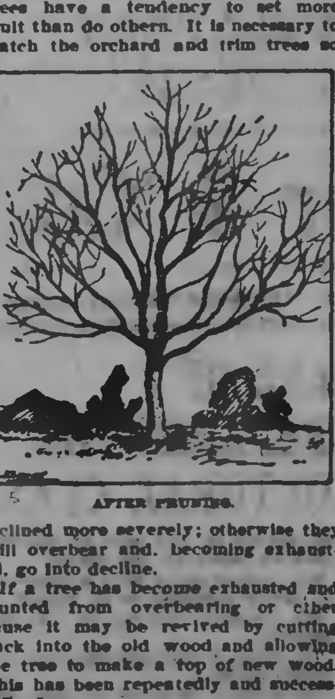
It may be safely assumed that all modern farmers are interested in fruit. Next to the apple, there is no fruit in such general demand as the pear. How to make a pear tree most productive is a subject that must interest every fruit raiser. Success begins with proper pruning.

In pruning the pear orchard a symmetrical shape should be given the trees, according to the form that the grower has decided upon. The pyramidal form is preferable, trimmed to a leader. This is begun when the tree is young by cutting the lower branches to four or five buds, the higher ones a little shorter, and so on to the leader, which should be left longest.



BEFORE PRUNING.

The cutting back and thinning out must continue annually to obtain the highest results. How closely this should be done depends upon the variety and the vigor of the tree. Some trees have a tendency to set more fruit than do others. It is necessary to watch the orchard and trim trees so inclined more severely; otherwise they will overbear and, becoming exhausted, go into decline.



AFTER PRUNING.

If a tree has become exhausted and stunted from overbearing or either cause it may be revived by cutting back into the old wood and allowing the tree to make a top of new wood. This has been repeatedly and successfully done.

The person who trims should be able to tell what to cut, how to cut, why he cuts and the probable effect of the pruning upon the tree. If he cannot give a reason for everything he does he is an unsafe man to trust in trimming a pear orchard.

Little Things Worth Knowing.

No shoes should be left on a farm horse's feet longer than two months and on a road horse not more than six weeks.

Barrel salt is too coarse and dissolves too slowly to make good butter salt. Fine table salt is always the most economical to use.

During the last twelve years the yearly average agricultural balance of international trade in favor of this country increased from $234,000,000 to $411,000,000, or 76 per cent.

In digging a round cistern one eight feet in diameter and seventeen feet deep will hold 202 barrels of thirty-one and a half gallons. If ten feet in diameter and eleven feet deep it will hold 205 barrels.

When the staple article of diet is cornmeal mush, fried mush, corn bread, with corn fed meats, and for trimmings corn cakes and corn sirup, and the chief topic of conversation is corn growing, as it is with some people, it certainly looks as if it were an example of a one sided ration.

Leguminous hays are very much more nutritious than the hays from other grasses, even such as time honored timothy. The clover and bean tribe contain nearly twice as much protein as the ordinary grasses. The manure from the legumes contains a proportionately larger share of nitrogen (also more potash) than the manure from other grasses.

MAKING A TUNNEL.

The Way Railroad Engineers Bore Through a Mountain.

Sometimes the construction engineer brings his new line face to face with a mountain too steep to be easily mounted, and then he prepares to pierce it. Tunnels are not pleasant to ride through. They are, moreover, fearfully expensive to construct, and they necessitate a double inspection. But—and the "but" in this case is a very large one—they reduce grades and distances in wholesale fashion, and so in a mountainous country the engineer must be prepared to drive tunnels and the folk who come after him to operate them. The tunnel job is apt to be a separate part of the work. It calls for its own expert talent.

If the tunnel is more than a half or three-quarters of a mile long it will probably be dug from a shaft or shafts as well as from its portals. In this way the work will not only be greatly hastened, but the shafts will continue in use after it is completed as vents for the discharge of engine smoke and gases from the tube.

The ordinary course of such work is by the use of cutting shields proceeding simultaneously from the portals and from the footings of the shafts. These shields are to be likened to steel rings of a circumference only slightly greater than that of the finished tunnel. Men working on different levels of this shield with pick and with drill and dynamite constantly clear a path for it, whereupon it is pressed forward. Tracks follow the cutting shield, and more locomotives, steam or electric, are used in removing the material. The use of electricity keeps the tunnel quite clear of gases and makes the safest light for the workers.

In rare cases the rock through which the tunnel is bored is strong enough to support itself. But in most cases the engineers prefer to line the bore, with brick, as a rule, and this lining is set in place right in the path of the cutting shield. After long weeks and perhaps months of work the time comes when the different bores meet and the tunnel is a single underground tube from portal to portal.

The leader of the Black Hand gang operating in and around Fernie, BC, has been captured.

We are sorry to say that some of Norwood's so-called sports showed on a recent date just a slight trace of dirt. A bus load of youngsters drove up to Norwood on Saturday afternoon last and defeated our youngsters in a game of baseball and arranged to play football after tea. When they arrived at the ground they found the big fellows —we would like to say young men—in possession of the field and who flatly refused to give it up to their little brother sports. Upon being remonstrated with by several who had gathered to see the little fellows battle for supremacy, the young men showed where they lacked in a striking degree the true spirit of sport and fair play.

The occurrence has caused considerable comment throughout the village and many are heard to say that there will no doubt be an opportunity some time to show that even the little fellows have their rights, and no sporting club can be successfully carried on without the co-operation of the citizens generally.

As Wednesday of this week is the opening of bass and lunge fishing quite a number of our local fishermen are preparing to go to either Round Lake or Trent River, to spend the day.

The Methodist and Presbyterian S. S. picnic will be held on Wednesday to Bobcaygeon per CPR via Burketon junction and quite a number are intending to take this opportunity of visiting that delightful resort and it is expected an enjoyable outing will be held.

BY-LAW READ FOR THIRD TIME AND PASSED YESTERDAY

At Special Meeting of County Council—$4,000 for Bridges—The Warden's Address.

The members of the County Council met yesterday afternoon at the County Council chamber and transacted considerable business. The most important was the reading of the by-law for the third time which calls for the issuing of debentures for $4,000 to be used in building bridges in the county. This business was done at a special meeting. All members were present with the warden in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

On motion of Messrs. Fife and Shaw the by-law was read a third time and passed. It was stamped with the corporate seal and duly signed and numbered 949.

On motion of Messrs. Russel and Fife, the clerk was authorized to have the by-law registered in the registry office for the county, and have the registration inserted in the Peterborough Examiner, according to statute. On motion of Messrs. Moher and Darling, the council adjourned to meet in regular session.

The reading of the minutes of the special meeting was dispensed with.

Moved by Mr. Kidd, seconded by Mr. Coben, that the tenders for the debentures that are now in the hands of the treasurer, be opened and considered—Carried.

Moved by Mr Darling, seconded by Mr. Russel, that the tenders of Geo. A. Stimson & Co. for $4,000 debentures at 4 1-2 per cent. per annum, of $4,051.00 with accrued interest be accepted—Carried.

The warden then read his address, which was as follows—

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

To the Members of County Council, for 1909.—

Gentlemen,—I am sure all join with me in recognizing our painful duty to refer to the death of the late Judge Weller. The high esteem in which he was held, not only by the different councils that represented the county, but also the county officials and citizens of the county, is in evidence that I voice the sentiments of all in extending our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family for the great loss they have sustained. Again I would ask you—as did my predecessors—to join with me in recognizing the hand of a kind Providence for the prospects of a bountiful harvest. I would like to draw your attention to the establishing of county roads in all counties and note the benefits they derive by taking advantage of the government grant in that way, thereby building permanent roads, as they are much desired and absolutely necessary.

The finances of the county, from a general standpoint, appear to me very satisfactory, and much credit is due the council, from the fact that the chairman of the Finance Committee has been able to prepare a report, setting forth the facts in his recommend that the old rate, namely 2 4-5 mills on the dollar, will cover current expenditures.

All the particulars of not only the general expenditure but the House of Refuge and school expenditures will be set out by him who is thoroughly capable of dealing with the matter to the satisfaction of all.

I will not deal with the matter of bridges, as no doubt the chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee will bring in his general report, which will also be supplemented with reports from the different commissioners.

It is very gratifying to observe the co-operation of the chairman of the Finance Committee and his colleagues in not increasing the current liability to meet the debenture liquidation, although they are offering $4,000 for sale, yet debenture No. 607 having matured in 1908, the amount will not be increased. There was a deficit of $1,970.53 at the end of 1908, but the greater part of that was due to permanent improvements at the House of Refuge, not provided for either by debenture or current levy, yet I think your finance report will show reasons satisfactory to all.

My attention has been drawn to providing for the extinction of the white plague, and I respectfully ask you to look carefully into the reports and correspondence that is in the hands of the clerk.

The efforts of your County Council acting in conjunction with the ratepayers of the county, have been rewarded by a response from the Dominion and Provincial Governments in the extending of a wharf at Lakefield, the moving of the swing-bridge at Buckhorn, from the locks to the channel, thereby averting an hour's delay in some cases to the travelling public; the widening of the approaches to the new Buckhorn bridge, and the establishing of an agricultural class in the High schools at Norwood with a grant of $1,200 each year from the Provincial Government.

In all matters concerning the House of Refuge the chairman of the Board will discuss with you.

In conclusion allow me to again thank you for the confidence you have placed in me, and to thank you for the assistance you have given me in my official capacity, and to assure you that the success of this council is altogether due to you.

Wishing you and the county prosperity, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
R. H. SCOTT.

Moved by Messrs. Hayles and Comstock that the account for hymn books for the House of Refuge be paid.—Carried.

On motion the council adjourned for luncheon.

Report of the committee appointed to deal with the Warden's address.

Your committee beg to report as follows;

1. That we endorse the reference to the great loss sustained by the county in the death of Judge Weller and coincide in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

2 In referring to the prospects of harvest returns, it is but another of the many on record in Ontario which we heartily join in recognising.

3 We will be pleased to have county roads established thereby taking advantage of Government assistance.

4. 5. 6. We concur with the Warden in his references to the finances of the county and trust that his anticipations will all be realized.

7 That in the matter of providing for the suppression of the white plague, your committee will readily endorse any assistance towards the successful carrying into effect any endeavor.

8 We with yourself must congratulate the county upon the results of the several departments to the Government during 1909.

9 Your committee will be pleased to consult and assist the Board of Management of the House of Refuge at all times.

10 The honor conferred upon you by placing you head of the municipality for 1909, is an honor well deserved and we beg to state that we appreciate the dignity with which you fulfil the obligations of the office and also our efforts will be at your service for the balance of the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. BREAULT,
Chairman.

WHAT IS ITCH DIRT

It is the old Anglo-Saxon name for dandruff and it's a good one. If you have dandruff you have itch dirt and the little microbes that are part and parcel of dandruff are working persistently night and day and sooner or later will reach the very life of your hair and destroy its vitality.

Then you'll be bald—Bald to stay—for not only the wonderful rejuvenating properties in Parisian Sage can grow hair after the hair bulb or root is dead. Parisian Sage cures Dandruff. Wm. Madill, the druggist, sells it—recommends it and guarantees it; only 50 cents a large bottle and your money back if it fails to cure Dandruff, Falling Hair and Itching of the Scalp.

TO JUBILEE POINT FARMERS' PICNIC

This year the Farmers' Picnic will be held to Jubilee Point on June 24, instead of Idylwyld, as last year. Excursions will be run from all quarters, and speakers from a distance will give short addresses. Last year the excursion was an enjoyable one, and it will likely be so this year.

PETERBORO'S BRILLIANT PROSPECTS

There was never in the history of Peterborough a time when prospects were brighter than they are now. The city officials state that there has been double the number of building permits issued already this year more than the best previous year and the prospects are that this percentage will go up even higher.

Think what it will mean when the new factories begin running; simply this, more families will of necessity move to the city, employment will be given to others in the city that need it and thus create a demand for homes either to rent or purchase in other words prosperity is bound to advance more or less in every portion of the city.

¶ People who are contemplating purchasing homes will do well to see J. T. O'CONNELL & CO'S list now and get terms. We have a choice selection of properties at moderate prices and easy terms. ## EXPENDITURE ON TRENT CANAL TO BE CUT DOWN

From $2,500,000 to $1,000,000 Says Hon. Geo. P. Graham at Toronto—Talks About the Newmarket Branch.

Toronto, June 16.—The Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. G. P. Graham, who was at the King Edward this morning, gave a short interview on the Newmarket canal.

"'Did you see what Senator Campbell said about it at Thornhill?" was asked of the Minister.

"'I am not responsible for what Senator Campbell says," he replied.

"How much will be expended on the canal this year?"

"I do not know how much," replied Mr. Graham, "it will be comparatively little, for the expenditure on the whole Trent Valley Canal had to be cut down from $2,500,000 to $1,000,000, and the Newmarket canal can get only its share."

"'It is charged that the valuators paid too much for the land required for the right of way, allowing $100 an acre and 'extras' for damages,'" observed the reporter.

"All the valuations were made in the usual way," was the response. "The work was placed in the hands of reliable, responsible men and done in the usual way."

"And the payments made just previous to the last general elections?"

"'The money was paid just as it would have been paid if there had been no general elections?"

At this point Mr. Graham changed the subject to the Soo canal, and said that he thought the break would be repaired by Saturday or Monday at the latest.

The Minister is accompanied by Mrs. Graham and is in the city chiefly for a rest.

BUILDING IN WHICH MEN SLEPT STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

Not a Pane of Glass Was Left in the Windows—Men Injured But None of Them Killed.

Tweed, June 16.—The thunder and lightning storm of Sunday evening was fierce in the vicinity of Mr. John Winters' lumber camp and mill at Hogan P.O.

The north end of the building in which the men were sleeping was struck and torn out. Michael Candon, of Deseronto, had his eyebrows and back of his head burned. Joseph Paul of Belleville, had his arm and face burned, William Andrews had an ear hair burned, and Thos. Flanagan and Chas. Sedgewick were both badly shaken up, though they escaped without any serious injuries. Not a particle of glass was left in any of the windows in the building. The blankets on the bed occupied by the two Andrews boys were scorched brown.

How the men ever escaped with their lives is beyond comprehension.

BRITISH STEAMER SHELLED BY RUSSIAN WARSHIP

London, June 17.—A British steamer approached near the Russian warship Guarding Bjorkoe, Finnland, for the meeting of the Czar and Kaiser today was shelled by the Russians, according to a report received to-day. The incident may result in international complications. The affair has produced great excitement. Six shots were fired by the Czar's warship, but not one struck the mark. The British steamer fled beyond range and the warship did not pursue. The warship did not pursue. The warship has been patrolling the Finnish coast of Bjorkoe strict watch for suspicious looking vessels.

MOTHER OF FAMILY COMMITS SUICIDE

New York, June 16.—A barnyard tragedy on the farm of A. B. Fretz, near Cedar Grove yesterday morning cast a gloom over the little community which lasted all day long.

Mr. Fretz, with no evil intention whatsoever, but simply to keep Josephine from scratching up his vegetable garden, tied her to a sapling with a string fastened to her left leg. Josephine was a Plymouth Rock hen, with a brood of eleven chicks.

Well, Josephine, naturally of a joyous and optimistic disposition, brooded over what she evidently considered a humiliation and disgrace, and yesterday morning, in a fit of despondency, she contrived to hang herself with the string, notwithstanding the distressed and horrified peeps of her eleven children.

Their agitation attracted the attention of Napoleon, the husband of Josephine, a splendid specimen of a Plymouth Rock rooster. He instantly saw it would be impossible to rescue Josephine unless in some way he could sever the string which was choking her life out. Near her was burning a pile of brush and rubbish, which Robert, the hired man, has set fire to.

Napoleon ran to the fire, plucked therefrom a burning brand and flew with it into the sapling. Holding the brand close to the string, he burned it in two, and Josephine fell to the ground with a dull, sickening thud. It was too late: Life was extinct and her eleven chicks were spring orphans. Napoleon has seven other wives, so Fretz hopes that he in time will forget his sad loss.

LAST OF CHEAP BREAD IN U. S.

Kingston, R.I., June 17.—"We have seen the last of cheap bread in this country," said Eugene Davenport, dean of the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., at the graduating exercises of Rhode Island State College yesterday.

Dean Davenport estimated that in another hundred years the population of the United States would be 1,400,000,000, or more than 400 to the square mile of territory, and said:

"Any way you can figure it, we are near the end of cheap food in this country, which means that population is beginning to overtake the food supply.

"The time is coming when the landless family will be at a tremendous disadvantage, because each new individual must shift for himself."

MUST TAKE OUT A LICENSE

There are still several milk vendors and proprietors of eating houses who have neglected to take out a license for the conducting of their business. They have been properly notified and are aware of the law in this respect. The fee is not large, and it would be better to attend to the matter at once and thereby save impending trouble.

AUSTRALIA TO GIVE ASSISTANCE

London, June 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Melbourne cable says Col. Foxton, delegate to the defence conference, sailed yesterday. He is authorised to discuss alternatives to the Dreadnought scheme including a provision for a great naval base for the imperial navy at some Australian port and the assumption by the Australian navy of full responsibility for policing the Pacific Ocean. Col. Foxton will assure the Admiralty that the desire of the Commonwealth is to accept British guidance in the construction and management of the proposed subsidiary navy, and to undertake that the whole of Australia's warlike machinery will be so organized as to be instantly available for imperial emergency.

ARE FAVORABLE TO CHURCH UNION

Winnipeg, June 17.—The annual charge of Archbishop of Rupert's Land to the Diocesan Synod at its opening was admirable in effect and significance, because it made strong appeal in favor of ultimate union of Christian bodies, because it included reference to the liquor traffic stating that the Church of England could no longer be charged with having no policy on the matter, and because it drew attention to the university commission in selecting the university site, his grace asking the synod to pass a resolution of censure on the dilatory methods of the commission. Speaking of the location of the metropolitan see, his grace also said that he favored the maintenance of the see by Rupert's Land, but the diocese should give up some of the privileges in the matter of electing the bishop.

PASSENGER TRAIN WAS DERAILED

Elmira, N.Y., June 17.—Erie passenger train No. 9, westbound, was wrecked near Waverley early yesterday. Every car on the train except one left the rails while the train was running at high speed. Many passengers were shaken badly and cut by flying glass.

The cause of the derailment is supposed to have been the breaking of a brake beam, which fell from its place and tore up over a thousand feet of track before the train left the rails. The coaches toppled over on their sides, less than 25 feet from the Chemung River, now swollen by rains.

POLICE CHECK THE CROWDS AT FASHIONABLE WEDDING

Curious Women at Miss Melvin-Jones Wedding Are Unruly—Great Gathering of All Classes Struggle to Pass Police at Fashionable Affair in Toronto.

Toronto, June 17.—St. Andrew's Church, West King street, was filled by a fashionable congregation yesterday afternoon on the occasion of the marriage of Rev. T. Crawford Brown, pastor of the church, and Miss Eallien Melvin-Jones, only child of Hon. Senator Lyman and Mrs. Melvin-Jones.

Long before the hour appointed crowds began to assemble outside the church, and the police had difficulty in making way for the carriages, private automobiles and taxicabs.

Various pleas were made to the ushers by women of all classes to gain admission to the church. Old and young jostled each other to secure points of vantage. Every window in the buildings in the neighborhood was filled with interested spectators. At different times the crowd of women became unruly, and on the arrival of the bride with her father, broke through the cordon of police and threatened to overthrow the canopy leading to the church. It was an awful moment. The police were powerless to hold the surging thousands in check. Like a mad rush at a bargain counter women pushed, fought and screamed, and only the prompt action of able-bodied men averted a disgraceful scene.

Another rush was made when the bride drove away. Looking through the crowd one could see elderly females and young girls with tense, drawn faces showing a determination to get near at all costs, and they were only restrained by a cordon of police.

As Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who drove up in a taxicab, arrived, a sudden hush came over the great congregation. With all the grace of a French courtier Sir Wilfrid passed down the aisle, his distinguished bearing and immaculate dress making him a conspicuous object.

After the ceremony in the church there was a big reception to 800 guests at Llawraden, Senator Melvin-Jones' home.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Brown left by the 10 o'clock train for Montreal and will sail by the Empress of Britain for England and the continent.

LATEST NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Imperial Labor Exchanges.

London, June 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Commons Winston Churchill, debating the Labor Exchanges bill, said he proposed to discuss with the self-governing colonies, with the object of seeing what information could be exchanged between immigration offices and labor agencies in the colonies and the labor exchanges to be established here.

There was no reason against a complete imperial system of labor exchanges.

Inquest In Private.

Rosthern, Sask., June 17.—After sitting eight days, the inquest held by Coroner Stewart into the sudden death of Mrs. Katrina Dyak concluded early yesterday morning. The coroner issued warrants for the arrest of both.

Must Return Manuscript.

Ottawa, June 17.—Morang & Co. of Toronto contracted with Dr. W. D. Lesueur to write the life of William Lyon Mackenzie, and paid $500 for the manuscript. The claim for damages was withdrawn and Justice Clute yesterday directed the return of the manuscript.

Men Could Not Swim.

Newark, N.J., June 17.—Two men and a dog went out in a round bottomed boat in a small lake in a park here Tuesday night. The dog returned to shore alive, but the men are dead. Charles Peterson and Wm. Rover, both laborers, about 30 years old, are the victims. The boat upset and neither could swim.

Fewer Immigrants.

Ottawa, June 17. A heavy falling off in arrivals for the first four months of the year is shown in the Government statistics for immigration. It is attributed largely to the doing away with charity-assisted immigration.

EXECUTION IS POSTPONED PENDING OUTCOME OF APPEAL

Englishman Who Murdered His Wife at Agincourt Cannot Be Hanged Until After the Sitting of Supreme Court in September—May Have Life Sentence After All—Manslaughter, Says His Counsel.

Toronto, June 17.—Blythe will not hang until October 1 and if the general opinion be correct he will never go to the gallows now.

Yesterday T. C. Robinette, K.C., secured an order from Mr. Justice Teetzel, under section 1,063 staying the execution till October to allow an appeal to the Court of Appeal.

This was later served on Sheriff Mowat and Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright. The whole proceedings were carried out with lightning speed. Mr. Robinette put his automobile into commission for the service of his notice of appeal under sections 1,015 and 1,023 and for the order.

Blythe was informed of the stay by Governor Chambers, who was accompanied by Rev. Canon Farncombe, Blythe's spiritual adviser. When the governor broke the news Blythe, who has borne all other notifications with fortitude, broke down and wept. "His utterances were too deep, too sacred to be made public," said the governor.

The motion before Justice Teetzel was made at 1 o'clock. The hearing took but a few minutes and Blythe's fate, which has wavered through many vicissitudes was once more given a lease of life.

The grounds of Mr. Robinette's application are that the evidence disclosed manslaughter and not murder; that Justice Riddell, the trial judge, wrongly charged the jury that the crime was murder and not manslaughter and that proper time was not granted for the preparation of the defence and that evidence was wrongly admitted at the trial.

Mr. Robinette relies on an English case closely analogous to that of Blythe's crime for the doctrine that this act, done under the influence of liquor, is manslaughter. In that case Mr. Justice Darling said:

"Every one is taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts, but this presumption may be rebutted (a) in the case of a sober man, in many ways. (2) It may also be rebutted in the case of a man who is drunk, by showing his mind to have been so affected by the drink he had taken that he was incapable of knowing that what he was doing was dangerous, i.e., likely to inflict serious injury."

This order of Judge Teetzel's is identical with that which stayed the executions of Frank Capelli at Parry Sound and Jacob Sunfield at Hamilton.

A PROMINET SENATOR DEAD

Death of Senator Thibadeau, Widely Known French-Canadian Politician

Montreal, June 17.—The death of Hon. J. Rosaire Thibadeau, high sheriff and Senator of the Dominion, removes a man who was better known to the English-speaking commercial, political and financial community than any living French-Canadian.

It was Senator Thibadeau who kept the Liberal party alive in this city for a quarter of a century, and thus prepared it for the prosperity that came later on. When the late H. Beaugrand was fighting the Nationalists, who were clinging to Mercier, it was Thibadeau and his straightforward Liberalism who was always the man behind the gun.

Then, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was defeated in Drummond and Arthabaska, and was said to be intending to retire from public life, it was Rosaire Thibadeau who suggested that his relative, the then member for Quebec East, should resign and that Laurier should run in his place.

Then, when Tarte, Charles Thibault and a swarm of Conservative leaders, flushed with their success in Drummond and Arthabaska, made a dead set on the young politician, it was again the tireless Thibadeau who organized assistance from Montreal which certainly saved the constituency, and very likely secured the services of Wilfrid Laurier to the Liberal party and to Canadian public life.

Although rich at one time, Senator Thibadeau died a poor man. Of late years he gave a great deal of his time to the interests of the Notre Dame Hospital. He will be buried on Friday morning.

Capt. Viau of the Montreal fire brigade told the commission that he had received bribe money for the promotion of men on the brigade. In one case he got 200, and as he had a lot of hard work in it he kept the money.

POWER SCHEME FOR BROCKVILLE

Conroy of Aylmer, Que., representing a large power development company on the Gatineau, which is contemplating the erection of a transmission line to Brockville, taking in intermediate points. ## WILL BUY PAPER IN OPEN MARKET

Chicago, June 17.—Owners and publishers of daily newspapers holding membership in the Inland Press Association will patronize the open market for print paper instead of getting their material by contract, under a decision of the association reached Tuesday night. The representative of a Canadian print paper mill asserted he would furnish paper at a figure which the representatives of rival concerns declared was lower than the cost of manufacture in the United States.

NEW NEWSPAPER FOR HAMILTON

Hamilton, June 17.—Hamilton is to have a new daily paper, an official Conservative organ, that will support the Government's Hydro-Electric project and be strongly anti-temperance in its views.

This is the outcome of the attitude pursued by The Spectator in bitterly opposing the Government's power scheme and knifing Conservatives who fought the Cataract Power Co., of which William Southam, president of The Spectator, is a director.

A meeting of "moneyed" Conservatives interested was held here a few days ago. It was the intention to divulge no information until everything was ready, but the news leaked out.

LADY ABERDEEN FORMALLY WELCOMES WOMEN DELEGATES

In Happy Speech She Tells Gathering of Women Workers and Guests What Purpose of Session Is—Work of Committees Begins at Once—Dr. Anna Shaw Says Suffragette Tactics Are Unnecessary Here.

Toronto, June 17.—The University Convocation Hall was a riot of color last night at the inaugural meeting of the Quinquennial International Council of Women. The flags of all nations grouped and massed in themselves conveyed a great meaning. They represented the combination and unity of the international gathering which they graced. From the panels of gold and purple and crimson looked down the royal arms of the British Empire, the white cross on its crimson field of Switzerland, the straggling stars of the southern cross which form the emblem of Canada's sister dominion, the eagle of Austria, the double-headed eagle of the empire of the Czar, the rampant lion of Scotland, the arms of Sweden, Norway, Italy, Argentine, Denmark, Belgium, Germany, Canada, Bulgaria, Greece, and over all the Golden Rule.

It was the Golden Rule which formed the basis of the speeches of all the delegates of these varied lands, a message conveyed in English in each instance—but an English bearing the stamp of the country of the messenger.

Lady Aberdeen on her arrival was accorded a very warm welcome. By the Canadians it was the welcome of a home-coming, and by the other delegates the welcome conveyed appreciation of a great work. She delivered the opening address in which she said, in part:

"Ladies: I must say to you I feel very much to-night like an old mother coming back to see again a young daughter.

"By the very fact that it is the occasion of our coming of age, and that we have arrived at years of discretion, the world has a right to enquire of what stuff we are made and what is our contribution to the world's life. I think we are here to answer for the faith that is in us."

She spoke of those who had watched over the cradle of the council in 1888 at Washington, now no longer in the flesh, and paid tribute to the memory of Frances Willard, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony. She was honored to be able to wear the brooch that Miss Anthony was presented with at Geneva.

"What do we stand for and what do we offer?" she asked. The answer would come clear and strong. The work of the council "induces them to stand together for common action, and even more, to adopt the difficult attitude of refraining from action."

"Just because we are wedded to no one propaganda, just because we impose no restriction and no shibboleth we welcome all women, of all sects and nations and classes, who are willing to join us in carrying out the principle of doing unto others as we would have them do unto us, that golden rule which is our sole test has brought us into a union so strong we can help the great movements of our generation."

"The keynote of our success and influence must always lie in being rather than doing, in the spirit of our work rather than in the work itself, in the motive underlying our union, rather than in our actual federation.

"As long as we cling," she concluded, "to that sheet anchor, the spiritual forces behind our work and behind our international comradeship, we will surely work miracles of which we do not yet dream."

Addresses were delivered by the national chiefs or their proxies in introducing the delegates and speeches of welcome were made by the provincial, civic and university authorities.

The delegates lost no time in getting into committee work at 'varsity. Of the committees which convened in the afternoon the most notable was that on suffrage and rights of citizenship. Rev. Anna H. Shaw, who was appointed convener of this committee at Berlin five years ago, presided. Representatives from 15 different nations were present.

When the ovation which was tendered the distinguished convener subsided, Dr. Anna Shaw said this was the most enthusiastic and representative international suffragist meeting she had ever attended. The cause had made wonderful progress since it was endorsed by the international council at Berlin and made a fundamental department of the council's work. It was making marvelous progress everywhere. Not only was it one of the most popular of movements, but it had become one of the most fashionable.

"I have just come from New York City, where Mrs. Oplo Belmont and other leaders of fashion are devoting themselves to its interests," she said. "Mrs. Ivins, whose husband is regarded as the greatest constitutional lawyer in New York, is another of our leaders."

"It is not necessary for us on this continent to adopt the militant methods of some of the British societies, but if I considered it wise to do so, I should not hesitate. We are making magnificent progress by means of public meetings, literature and organization."

COUNTY ROADS

The County Council is holding its June session. The perennial question of county highways is being considered. A reference has been made by the committee on the warden's address to the possible advisability of taking advantage of the Ontario Government's Million Dollar Good Roads Fund, which was set aside as a fund to be drawn upon by counties for improving country roads. A county is entitled to one dollar from the fund for every two it puts up itself. Already dissatisfaction is felt with this arrangement. While some counties have taken advantage of it others think it is not liberal enough on the part of the government which subsidizes new districts like new Ontario, which is largely a speculative field, most lavishly. Are the older counties not entitled to equal treatment? They are, certainly. It will be well for our County Council to make, with others, strong representations to the Ontario Government on this point. The time has come for a strong forward movement in this direction. Vast benefit would accrue to a province that is in need of expending its resources upon itself and while the new projects of the Government may have their merits there is no just reason why the older and yet undeveloped regions of the province should not be developed first. A deputation from the County Council in concert with those from other councils might do a fine stroke of business for this county and the Review will back them up to the best of its ability. Sir James Whitney is not the man to turn a deaf ear to the requests of those who must bear the burden and the heat of the day and have done so for so long a time. Our opinion is that a highly developed county with government roads, government schools, etc., is what the people are entitled to and that which will do more permanent good to the province than much that is engaging its attention just now.

THE LAW'S DELAY

"Sir Edward Carson, in the House last week, suggested that the congestion in the Law Courts amounted to a denial of justice to litigants."—Public Opinion (Eng.)

The "law's delay" in Ontario is for all practical purposes just as great. So long as the refining of technical interpretation goes on, with the necessary supplement of appeals, aided and abetted by delays in procedure which are really unnecessary, the immense aggregate loss to those seeking justice in the courts will continue. Why is it that sometimes all haste is made, and even a witness in the box is required to answer promptly and to expedite the course of justice? Yet courts and the process of procedure is so long-drawn that judgment, which in some cases (criminal and involving the liberty of the subject) is given in from 24 to 48 hours after the apprehension of the criminal, is in civil cases, except those of the division court, held over for all sorts of interlocutory or subsequent processes. We see it every day. Are the lawyers to blame? Does it really take so long to get at the facts and the law? The answer, we surmise, will first be found in the paucity of judges. A few more High Court Judges with a stiffer limit to appeals, and those appeals confined to merits, and we should have less of the immense loss now inflicted upon those having business in the courts. As the matter stands it is generally recognized that the process of enforcing civil law is cumbersome and absurdly long-drawn out. There is in popular opinion a much needed reform in adjudicating upon "the merits." There is still too great a tendency to let the courts get clogged and jammed when a little more skill and a little better management would clear the jam away and give free course to the tide of material progress.

THE HORROR OF IT

Special to the Review

Toronto, June 14.—"At this morning's session of the Toronto Methodist conference a number of the young men and the older ministers engaged in mission work in Toronto told terrible stories of the manner in which young women, mostly from the country districts, were forced into lives of shame because the wages they received at the places of employment usually open to them were not sufficient to keep them from dying of actual want.

One instance was cited of a minister's daughter, who had been so forced to leave the straight road and other equally distressing cases were vouched for. No definite action was taken."—Despatch to the Review.

The terrible tidings conveyed in the Review's despatch of Monday have been known for years. It is almost incredible that a well-organised and supposedly civilized people can go on from day to day returning thanks for blessings received and yet neglecting the rescue of the unfortunates condemned to a physical, moral and spiritual death by the harpies of the day. Yet it has been allowed to continue while time is wasted and all sorts of theories are being advanced and argued upon. Do the doctrinaires think that God will excuse them for their neglect? There would have been a greater outcry long since, but for the fact that there are none to cry out but the victims themselves and shame stops their mouths. Surely this is the cruelty of fate. Can a nation or a people be blessed which allows such things?

Blaming girls for not going into domestic service is about as sensible as blaming people for deserting farms and going into the city.

FOR THE GLOBE'S BENEFIT

The New York World is pre-eminently a representative Democratic journal. It is known the world over, and is regarded as one of the most powerful critics in the United States. The following editorial from that journal of recent date ought to to be of some use to its Toronto confrere in reforming the latter's opinions.

DISAPPEARANCE OF A SCARECROW.

In his able survey of American affairs in the National Review of London. Mr. Maurice Low says;

> "Free trade, political issue and political bugbear, is dead in the U.S." thus says the New York World, which in the old days, the days when there was a great, vigorous militant Democratic party, was forever preaching the virtues of free trade and proclaiming it as the cardinal principle of Democratic policy. This is the frank confession of an honest Democratic newspaper which no longer seeks to blind itself to the changed conditions unwelcome though they may be.

The error into which Mr. Low has fallen is so common and so persistent that it challenges repeated correction. The World never preached free trade and it never proclaimed it as a cardinal Democratic principle. In all its career, the Democrats never declared in favor of free trade. The most radical of its platforms, that of 1892, denounced plutocratic protection as robbery and favored tariff taxation for public purposes only.

The melancholy fact is that whenever it has been proposed to check or to reduce the greed of the protected trusts they have usually been able to defeat the movement by cries of free trade. Mr. Morrison's proposed horizontal reduction of 10 per cent. was denounced as free trade; yet it would have left the schedules twice as high as Hamilton and Clay, the fathers of the American system, deemed sufficient for protection. The Democratic Wilson tariff was called free trade, although its average rate of taxation was as high as that of the McKinley tariff.

While there is no free trade party in the United States and no possibility of a free trade advocacy so long as we must raise hundreds of millions of revenue from imports, it is deplorable in every way that free-trade or trade as free as possible should everywhere be looked upon as a frightful evil, the mere mention of which is sufficient to discredit and defeat the most unselfish efforts of honest men.

The World's remarks on the subject of the disappearance of free trade as a political bugbear were based upon facts. While Republicans in Congress are forced to depend upon Democratic votes for the maintenance intact of the protective system, even salaried agents of the tariff gluttons will hardly venture hereafter to scream free trade when honest Democrats join honest Republicans in a demand that robbery and oppression shall cease. In that sense the free-trade scarecrow has vanished. —New York World.

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Belgium the government railways charge as street railways do with us. For $2.50 the tourist can make a two-thousand-mile trip.

The Norwood High school will admit pupils to its new agricultural course free for at least the first year. Mr. Duffus has been appointed teacher.

Now that the Council is purchasing a bible for the fire hall, it would be well for the Ministerial Association to detail one of their number to hold a class there each Sabbath.

As it is never the case that the working man gets too much pay or too many holidays we are in favour of granting him as much as he can get of both, at all times. There is no danger of pampering him unduly.

The stand of the Review on the horse show for Peterborough question last winter and at intervals since, has been approved of, we are glad to see by our contemporary, the Examiner, as well. The Review is open to those who would care to express an opinion upon this important matter.

Mayor Oliver says one child is worth more than all the dogs in Toronto. This view will ultimately triumph over that of those who think one dog worth more than all the children.—The Globe.

The abuse of privilege and the triumph of selfishness and puerility cannot last. Ultimately, as the Globe remarks, humanity will win.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier came to power in 1896 with the aid of the Orange Association. Let that fact be remembered. It is vital. No objection was made to his race and creed by the electors of this province upon that occasion, nor upon any succeeding occasion. Whenever that quotation has been revived it was necessary to look to Quebec. La Presse has done it before, it is doing it now. At best it is a dirty business. But when the record of the Government is so shady, when it is building dry canals and protecting proved rascality, when it is anxious to turn public attention away, it is dirtier than ever."—The News.

OF INTEREST

Activities of Women

(Toronto News.)

The International Women's Council is chiefly significant as marking the beginning of the Twentieth Century from the condition of a hundred years ago. In the course of a century the modern world has undergone an amazing transformation in its social and political fashions. Women have invaded a hundred avocations. They are in the shops, in the schools and in the churches. They are out on mission fields, on Boards of Education and in the Civil Service. They are influential in the great causes of social and moral reform. They press hard for political equality and an equal franchise.

We turn with impatience and anger from the methods of British suffragists. But at the back of the mind lies a suspicion that there is a shrewd method in this madness. British public opinion particularly has often to be shocked out of its sleep. The whole history of political reform shows that more enter in by violence than by prayer and (fasting). It seems certain that the suffragette have gained more ground by the turbulence of their agitation and the coveted distinction of an easy martyrdom than could have been won in the same space of time by quiet and and orderly advocacy.

Women have done much to develop what we call the world-conscience. It is this conscience that will express itself during the next two weeks in the deliberations of the Congress. There have been many women of craft and guile in courts and salons. It is no new thing even for the fate of nations to turn upon a woman's smile, a woman's ascendancy over a King or a Minister. But never before in the world's history were women organized for so many divine ministrations, and so mighty in alleviating human misery, in purifying human refuse, in pouring sunlight into the dark places of great cities, in carrying succor and healing to the lonely settlers in remote forests and on wide, vacant prairies.

It is said that America is the paradise of women. If that be true, we do not need to despair over American civilization. There is great virtue in any land where women are respected and protected, and where children are happy. No human civilization can rise higher than the spirit of a good woman. It is a hard doctrine which teaches only the survival of the fittest. It is a higher teaching to restore the unfit, to renew the diseased, to give life to dead and vacant minds, and to make the earth a more cheerful dwelling place for those who sweat in hard places and herd in crowded tenements.

The Women's Congress does not believe that poverty and ignorance are the necessary inheritance of a great portion of mankind, or that the misery of the poor must endure forever. Its whole aim is to improve conditions by systematic teaching and faithful labor, and to impose upon governments sound measures of social and industrial reform. A glance at the programme of the Congress reveals its activity in many directions, and shows that its enthusiasm is restrained by practical considerations, and its zeal informed by judgment.

The women of the Congress from other lands will find in Canada a high average of comfort and intelligence. They will find us soundly concerned to maintain good relations between capital and labor. They will not find many poor and not many rich. They will learn that we are far more anxious that poverty should decrease than that wealth should increase. They will find that we are beginning to be anxious about the character of our cities, and eager to prevent the appearance here of the evil conditions which distress so many Old World communities. If they go out into the townships they will see as fine a rural population as any country ever possessed, whose forebears with hard labor and patient self-sacrifice laid the foundations of this Commonwealth, and whose doors were always open and whose tables were always set with an open-hearted hospitality which even Toronto in these more luxurious days cannot excel.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Firm—Hogs Active and Steady at Buffalo and Chicago.

LONDON, June 16.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 12¾c to 14¼c per lb. for Canadian steers, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10¾c to 10¾c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 16.—(Special.)—A private cable received from Glasgow to-day reported the market for Canadian cattle much stronger than it has been of late and noted a sharp advance in prices, with sales at 12¾c to 14¼c per lb. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings consisted of 600 cattle, 650 sheep and lambs, 400 hogs, and 1165 calves. A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for grass cattle and prices for such were lower on account of the poor condition they were in, but the market for stall-fed stock was just as firm as ever, as supplies were limited. The attendance of buyers was fairly large and the demand was fair for good beeves, but the trade in the common and inferior classes was slow. A few choice stall-fed steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c; good, at 5¾c to 6c, while the top figure paid for the best grassers was 5½c, and the bulk of the sales were made at 4¾c to 5¼c. Good fat cows brought 5¼c to 6c, and the common grades, 3¾c to 4c, and good bulls sold at 4¼c to 5c per lb. Of the 600 cattle offered there were fully 200 milch cows, for which the demand was rather limited. A weaker feeling developed. Prices ruled $10 to $20 per head lower than a week ago. The top price realized was $80 and sales were made from that down to $25 each. Owing to increased supplies of sheep the market was weaker and prices were ¼c to ½c per pound lower than on Monday, and even at this reduction the demand was limited and sales slow at 3¾c to 4c per lb. The trade in lambs was fairly active, and as the quality of the stock was better than it has been of late, prices ruled higher with sales at from $3 to $5 each, and in some cases as high as $7. The supply of calves was very large for the season of the year, but as some of them were in first-class condition, as high as $12 was paid for choice ones and the commoner ones sold from that down to $1.50 each. The market for hogs was steady under a fair demand and sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Calves—Receipts, 2620; irregular; veals, $6 to $8.37½; choice selected, do., $8.50; grassers, $3.25 to $3.75; buttermilks, $4 to $4.50; dressed calves, steady; city dressed veals, 8½c to 12½c; country dressed, 8c to 11c; dressed buttermilks, 7c to 8½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5821; steady at $3.25 to $5; culls, $3; lambs, steady to strong; poor to prime, $7 to $8.75; one car choice, $9; culls, $6.50; all sold.

HORSES AND AUTOMOBILE RACED ON LAKEFIELD ROAD

Douro, June 15—Miss Katie Sheehan of Peterborough has been home on a visit for a few days during the past week.

Mrs. Fred Hyde, of Rochester, N.Y., is visiting her mother, Mrs Michael O'Brien.

Mr. Wm Sheehan of Sault Ste. Marie is home on a visit after an absence of ten years.

Mr. Edmund J. Allen is wearing a broad smile. It's a girl.

Mr. Frank Maher, reeve, is in Peterborough attending the session of the county council.

Mr. Fred Doughty, general agent for the Empire Cream Separator, and Mrs. Doughty of Peterborough spent Thursday in Douro.

Mr. John O'Brien of Peterborough, is visiting his brother, Mr. Maurice O'Brien.

Mr. John Sullivan is preparing to build a new barn. He started the excavation for the cellar Thursday.

Mrs. James Mahoney, of Warsaw was visiting friends in the village one day last week.

The fishing season opens on June 16th.

Mr. Richard Sheehan, Jr, was in Peterborough on Saturday for a new fishing outfit to be in readiness to snap the first fish on Wednesday.

A very exciting race took place on the road which leads from Lakefield to the village on Friday. The competitors for the palm of victory were three horses and an automobile. The horses were grazing along the road about four miles from the village, and apparently when they saw the gasoline wonder approaching they thought they would show the pleasure seekers of the twentieth century, that horses came in before automobiles. The horses, having the start, held it and panting freely reached the village with staring eyes and ears erect, and flowing manes and tails thrown over their backs. The horses took one street while the auto pursued its course down another. Those who saw the finish earnestly declare that horses came in before autos.

The funeral of Mrs. Michael McCliggott who died on Thursday took place from the residence of Mr. James McCliggott, near Nassau, on Saturday. The funeral which was largely attended, left the house at eight o'clock in the morning and proceeded to St. Joseph's church and thence to the Douro cemetery for interment. The pall bearers were Mr. Garret McMurry, Patrick McMurry, and Thomas McMurry brothers of the deceased, and Messrs James McCliggott, John and Wm McCliggott. Mrs. McCliggott was well known throughout Douro and her being called away at so early an age was a matter of deep regret in the whole community.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hurpey of Indian River were the guests of Mr. and Mrs Wm. Young on Sunday.

Miss Kitty Ann Cranley is spending a few weeks in Otonabee.

Messrs. John M. Walsh, George McKeiver and Michael McKeiver took in the Farmers' Institute excursion to Ottawa on Thursday.

Mrs Wm. Condon is visiting in Ennismore.

Mr Charles Crowley is home from Ottawa, where he has been visiting his sisters, Misses Maggie and Laura.

Douro will not be behind in sending boys to the front on Monday. Mr Austin Allen and Mr Emmett McCann will represent the village.

Friends, though not surprised, are deeply grieved to hear of the death of Mrs. Michael Kennedy, who died here after a long period of sickness. Our deepest sympathy is extended to her many friends, who regret her loss.

Mr. William Ryan and Mr. Wm. Garvey were renewing old acquaintances in Otonabee on Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Burns has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Devlin for a few days during the past week.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien was the guest of his uncle William on Sunday.

Mr. Marks, of Peterborough, local agent, and Mr. Hate, of Toronto, general agent for the Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. did a good stroke of business in this locality on Tuesday.

Mr. Michael McManus and Mr. Frank McManus left on Tuesday for Dakota, where they will spend a month visiting friends.

A number of our Douro boys are taking in the Farmers' picnic down the river on Thursday.

Mr. Michael Barry, operator of the township road grader, started operations for the season on Thursday. Mr. Barry is a tip top man at the job and his work is making a vast improvement on the roads.

ADVANCED VIEWS OF THE CLERGY

New York, June 14.—Although the Rev. Archibald Black, a young Edinburgh theological graduate, declares that he does not believe the Biblical accounts of Adam and Eve, the Virgin birth or the Resurrection, he was to-day admitted to the pulpit by the New York Presbytery after a warm debate on heresy. His case was recently held up, and taken under advisement. Among the questions fired at the young theological student during the examination to-day were the following:

"Do you believe the story of Adam and Eve as related in the Bible?"

"Not in its literal sense; I accept it as a figure," he replied.

"And do you not believe they fell from eating the apple?"

"No."

"Do you believe in the Virgin birth of Christ?"

"I believe that Christ is divine, but I do not accept the story of the Virgin birth."

"What is your position as to the Resurrection?"

"I do not believe in the flesh and blood resurrection of Christ."

The Rev. Dr. Wylie, of the Scotch Church; the Rev. Dr. Richards, of the Brick Church, and the Rev. Dr. Duffield, of Old First, supported Mr. Black's theological position before the Presbytery.

The Taking of Lorena

By ANNE HEILMAN.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

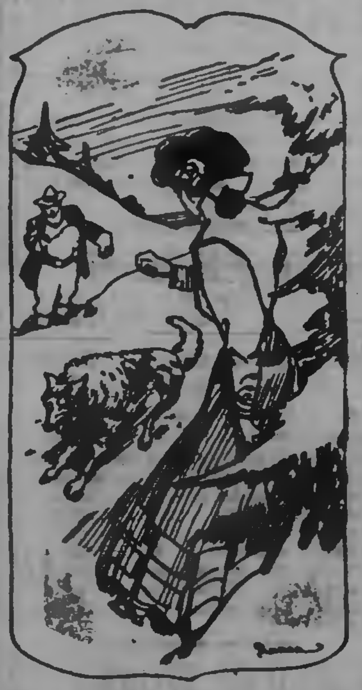
Although it was the third week in April, there were sudden and chill whiffs of wind from the north, accompanied by flying particles of ice and snow, grim warning that winter had not yet renounced its sway in the northland.

Floyd Jordan, striding down the steep mountain trail, halted irresolutely near the abrupt turning at Farrell's bluff. He appeared to be meditating deeply. Suddenly he threw up his head, squared his shoulders and hurried on, not in the direction of the boarding house in the gulch, but toward Farrell's cabin.

Farrell's cabin was two log houses joined together and chinked with mud. There were other cabins of the same simple architecture scattered over the mountain side and nestled in the gulches, but white curtains hung at the Farrell windows, and the windward side of the living room was hung with gay Navajo blankets; the brown fur of a mountain bear was on the floor, and its mate was spread luxuriously beneath the red pillows of a couch. And, set like a torch in the south window, a geranium, potted in a brilliant Indian basket, lifted its scarlet blooms.

But Jordan felt without seeing this harmony. He was looking into the face of the girl who had opened the door. It was a face of light and shade that spoke the swift thought before the voice found words, a face to hold a man's glance in a crowd. She resumed her seat by the fire without replying to Jordan's genial greeting.

He seemed to fill the room. Six feet two and broad shouldered, he looked even larger in the clumsy canvas coat, corduroys and high laced boots of the prospector. He whipped his hat against his knee, evidently disconcerted by the girl's hostile attitude.



LORENA SCREAMED AND CLOSED HER EYES. TWO SHOTS ROARED OUT.

"That you, Floyd Jordan?" inquired a voice from the inner room.

"Yes, Mrs. Farrell. "How're you feeling?"

"Somewhat better, I'm glad to say. Sit down and warm yourself, Floyd. It isn't to be wondered at that people have rheumatics in a land where there's ten months winter."

Lorena closed the door. "Floyd Jordan, what are you coming here again for?" she burst out suddenly.

"Wouldn't be very neighborly not to drop in with your mother sick and your dad away, would it?"

"Didn't I tell you that I never would speak to you again and that I never wanted to see you?" she said fiercely, taking a few steps toward him. Even in that moment, with her eyes blazing with unjust and unreasonable anger, the miner's heart throbbed acknowledgment of the tall, pliant, reedlike grace before him.

"Yes, Lorena, but I have just a little hope that you don't always mean what you say."

"Don't you think I mean it when I tell you I've heard how you bragged to the boys at the store that you could take me whenever you got good and ready?"

"I never said anything of the kind. Some one has garbled my words to suit his own purpose. I've been about you—I've loved you from the first time I ever set eyes on you, and I've never said a disrespectful word about you. I've been thinking of building a cabin on my claim, if you'll have me, Lorena. If you won't I'll sell out and go back to the States."

"You can't go any too quick to suit me," answered the girl, her voice tense with scorn. "And you can tell those loafers at the store that I'm not to be had so easily. I'd rather die than marry you, Floyd Jordan."

"I reckon that settles it," said Jordan, rising and buttoning his coat. "Please tell your mother goodby for me." And he was gone.

"Lorena Farrell, what have you done?" demanded her mother, limping into the room. "You ought to know that Floyd couldn't have said anything like that about you. Depend on it, those Blake girls made it all up. You've driven him away for good this time. He'll keep his word. He always does. He will go back to the States, mark my word!"

Lorena stealthily opened the door and looked after her lover's retreating figure. He had almost reached the bluff. Something stirred in her throat.

The long stretch of trail that ran away through the dreary landscape seemed like her life, and Floyd was going out of it. Her heart yearned for him. What would her life be without him?

"Lorena, where are you?" called Mrs. Farrell, emerging again from the bedroom. The girl was not in the room. The mother opened the door and looked out. A wall of whirling white met her vision.

"She has gone after him and is caught in the storm!" gasped the mother.

A knock sounded on the door. Floyd entered, noisily stamping the snow from his feet. "Thought I'd come back and have another talk with Lorena"— he began.

"Oh, Floyd, she's gone after you!" cried the distracted woman, wringing her hands. "She got sorry right after you left"—

"I'll find her," said Floyd quickly; "don't worry." And he dashed back into the storm.

When Lorena softly closed the kitchen door she could just see Floyd rounding the bluff. "Floyd, oh, Floyd, come back!" she called, all her reserve gone, her fierce pride thrown to the stormy winds that blew the fringe of her shawl into her eyes.

Realizing that he could not hear her, she started after him, but by the time she had covered half the distance a sea of white swept in between and blotted him from her view.

She hurried on, calling his name repeatedly, but the furious wind tore at her breath and walled her about with fleecy clouds. Suddenly she felt that she was off the trail.

She turned to the right and then to the left, but could not find it. Desperately she struggled on, until her tired limbs compelled a pause in the shelter of a bluff. She leaned panting against a rock, all unconscious of a pair of eyes which glared from a willow thicket near by.

The green lights in the eyes flared brighter, a long red tongue licked long, snarling jaws hungrily, and forth from the covert stole a lank gray wolf.

Lorena uttered a startled cry. This was no coyote to be chased with a stick. It was a wolf of timber stock, a great beast, strong as a mastiff! He emitted low snarls as he slunk in half circles across in front. He was undecided.

While he circled, drawing a little nearer at every turn, Lorena fell back—back toward the bluff, keeping her white face always toward the creeping beast.

She took off her heavy shawl and suddenly threw it blanketwise over the wolf's head. Then she fled desperately.

Once clear of the scrub, she ran on, plunging through drifts, stumbling, falling to rise again and push her flight. Of direction she could take no heed. All she could do was to place distance between herself and the famished brute. But when, weary and breathless, she paused for rest out of the drab drift stole the lank gray shadow.

With a terrified shriek Lorena ran on until she had to stop, spent, unable to take another step. She saw the wolf, licking his hungry jaws, leaping toward her with no indecision left.

Lorena screamed and closed her eyes. Two shots roared out. Looking up, she saw Floyd Jordan, with smoking revolver in his hand, standing over the prostrate beast.

"Floyd, oh, Floyd!" she sobbed as he came to her with eyes tender and anxious. He picked her up from the snow, wrapped her in his coat and held her against his breast.

The storm was lifting. Farrell's cabin could be discerned not a quarter of a mile distant.

"I'm dead sure now I'll build that cabin on my claim," Floyd said as they started homeward.

An Illusion Shattered.

The son and heir is seven years old—old enough to spell out, with helps over the hard words, "Alice In Wonderland" and to enjoy it hugely, especially the memorable duet between the mock turtle and the griffin. Recently as a great treat he was permitted to accompany his pretty young aunt to luncheon at one of New York's famous restaurants and as a crowning joy invited to select his own delicacies. Long and earnestly he pondered over the bill of fare; then his eyes grew big and his face illumined as he laboriously read the list of soups.

"Yes, thank you; I've precided what I want," he said, with nervous gayety. Then, with an impressive knitting of his brows, he addressed the attentive waiter, "I'll have one very, very small mock turtle, but don't make it into soup; just bring it along alive and kicking."—Woman's Home Companion.

Won the Bet.

"Well, old man," said Smith to Brown as they sat at breakfast in the hotel, "you've lost your bet."

"How do you make that out?"

"Didn't you bet me a guinea last night that we'd see a gale from the north this morning?"

"Yes."

"It's turned out a beautiful day, with a soft, warm wind from the south, and yet you say you haven't lost your bet."

"That is so."

"Why not?"

"Do you see that man coming up the steps of the hotel? That's my friend McCluskie, from Inverness."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Well, I've won the bet, for he's a Gael from the north."—London Answers.

DEHORNING OF CATTLE.

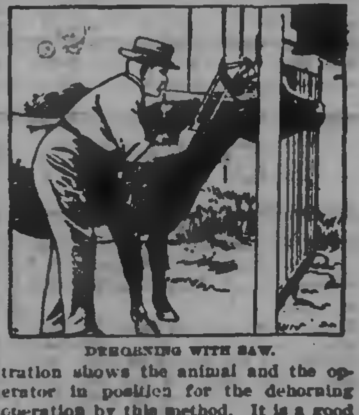
In a report of the bureau of animal industry Richard W. Hickman, V. M. D., chief of the quarantine division, says of dehorning cattle:

The dehorning of partly developed and adult cattle can be very satisfactorily performed without other apparatus or instruments than a good, strong clothesline and a clean, sharp meat saw or a miter saw with a rigid back in the hands of a fairly good mechanic. The same simple means for controlling the animal are just as applicable when the dehorning knife is to be used as when the horns are to be removed with the saw. This consists in securing the head of the animal to the horizontal rail or stringpiece which holds the upper ends of the stanchion boards. The animal is put to the stanchion in the usual manner. Then one end of a heavy clothesline is passed around the upper part of the neck and tied in a knot that will not slip; otherwise it will choke the animal. The free end of the rope is now carried between the horns, through the stanchion, to the front, up and over the horizontal stanchion rail, then down underneath the neck and up and over the top of the stanchion rail to an assistant, who should hold it firmly. Now release the stanchion, allowing the animal to withdraw its head, so that the horns are just inside of the stanchion rail or stringpiece. Then, keeping the rope tight, pass it once around the muzzle, up and over the stanchion rail and through to the front again to the hands of the assistant, who should stand three or four feet in front of the animal and hold the rope firmly, but prepared to release it when told to do so by the operator. The animal is now ready for the dehorning operation.

It is necessary that the rope be held by an assistant, as in the event of the animal struggling during the operation so as to throw itself off its feet, or if there appears to be danger of its choking, the rope may be slackened promptly at the word of the operator and the animal partly released. This, however, is rarely necessary, for as soon as the head is secured the operator should be ready, standing at the right shoulder of the animal with his saw, and proceed to saw off first the right and then the left horn. The horns should be severed at a point from a quarter to a half an inch below where the skin joins the base of the horn, cutting from the back toward the front. The illustration shows the animal and the operator in position for the dehorning operation by this method. It is a good plan before commencing the real work to experiment upon an animal in the matter of control by snubbing the head to the stanchion rail as described.



DEHORNING WITH SAW.

If the stanchion rail is too wide to permit of properly securing the lower part as well as the upper part of the animal's head, the turn of the rope around the muzzle may be omitted and the last lap of the rope carried around the stanchion rail to the front and to the hands of the assistant. The rope should pass each time over the neck of the animal to the stanchion rail, so that the laps are between the horns, in order that the rope may not interfere with the work of the saw.

It is not usual to apply any preparation after the operation of dehorning to prevent bleeding, as the loss of blood is not sufficient, as a rule, to be of consequence. Care should be taken, however, to prevent substances from getting into the openings left after the horns are removed. The horn cores are elongations of the frontal bones of the skull and are hollow. They communicate with the frontal sinuses, or air spaces, of the head. Therefore substances which would act as an irritant in these cavities are apt to set up an inflammation, resulting in the formation of pus or an abscess, which may prove quite serious. Fragments of horn detached in the process of dehorning would serve as such irritant and by their presence in these cavities cause inflammation.

If the animals are dehorned when the flies are about, it is well to apply some pine tar with a view to keeping the flies from the wounds. Some operators do this in nearly all cases, thinking that it facilitates healing. The dehorning operation should always when possible be performed in cool weather and upon animals which have at least attained the age of two years.

Inquiries are frequently received as to whether the operation is painful and whether it may not be classed as cruelty to animals. Those who have had extensive experience in dehorning appear to agree that the pain induced by the operation has been greatly overestimated, as careful observation has shown that shrinkage in the milk yield following the dehorning of cows as well as the decrease in the butter fat yield are very temporary and insignificant. On the other hand, the worry, pain and cruelty often inflicted by cattle upon their mates before being deprived of their horns is much more to be considered.

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON'S SESSION OF COUNTY COUNCIL

Deputation from Douro re Boundaries of School Section Six—School Inspectors Read Reports—Council Went to Buckhorn This Morning.

The members of the County Council were in session all of yesterday afternoon and most of the time was taken up by the Finance Committee.

A deputation from Douro composed of Messrs. Albert Darling, H Jery, C Sigbe and W J. Bullock were present in connection with some school changes. Mr. Darling addressed the council about school section No 6. He said it was too large and the boundaries should be changed. He asked that arbitrators be appointed to decide upon the boundaries.

The matter was referred to the school committee.

The reports of the school inspectors for East and West Peterborough, were read by Messrs. Brown and Lees and received.

They were referred to the school committee.

HOSPITALITY APPRECIATED

Under the heading the "Hospitality of the People of Peterborough," the Peterborough Normal School Review says;—

"During our sojourn here we have heartily appreciated the kindness shown us by the people of Peterborough. They have on all occasions welcomed us with hearty good will and we wish to express our sincere gratitude for their hospitality. The churches made us feel very much at home, some gave social entertainments, which, we need not say, were highly enjoyed. If the guarantee of the editor and staff be a sufficient pledge we may say that never did more bountiful repasts meet with youths and maidens better capable of appreciation."

"We thank also the ministers who gave up their Friday afternoons to instructing us. We assure them that their labours have not been in vain; we have profited by their classes and feel much better equipped, through their efforts, to meet and combat the trials and difficulties of our lives. We always looked forward with pleasure to religious instruction on Friday afternoons."

COUNTY COUNCIL DROVE TO THE LILY LAKE BRIDGE

Sink Hole at the South End of the Bridge is Dangerous—An Addition to Each End is Necessary—Will Be Discussed at Friday's Session.

The sink hole in the back Communication road in Smith was visited by the members of the county council last night. The bridge which crosses this place is known as the Lily Lake bridge. The people of Smith township have spent considerable money at this point in an endeavor to remedy the trouble but the result has been a failure.

The township of Smith have asked the county council to assume this bridge and it was on the invitation of Mr. Graham that the members drove out last night. At the south end of the bridge the ground bed has begun to sink and there is about two feet of water in the centre. It is not so bad at the north end but the building of an addition to both ends will be necessary.

The matter will be discussed at Friday's session of the council.

THE GLOBE GIVES GREAT CREDIT TO THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

The Ontario Cabinet is entitled to the public thanks for recommending the cancellation of the charter of the Dufferin Riding and Driving Park Association. Hon. Mr. Hanna and Hon. Mr. Foy are especially to be commended for the thoroughly judicial spirit that characterized their investigation of the standing of the association. The charter was simply a cloak for the operations of professional bookmakers. The meeting had not even the excuse that it promoted contests between good horses, for the horse that appeared there was forever after outlawed. It could not be defended on the ground that it afforded a day's innocent amusement for large numbers of people, for large numbers did not resort there. It was fortunate, therefore, that the charter could be declared lapsed and non-existent.

While human nature is what it is the prevention of betting between man and man will be difficult, if not impossible. Professional betting, however is something that the moral element of the community will not cease to combat. What its effects have been in other lands is too plainly seen, and everyone who cares for the public well-being cannot escape the duty of opposing the spread of its baneful influences in Canada.—The Globe.

GYPSIES INTERFERE WITH SCHOOL AT BOBCAYGEON

Special to the Review.

Bobcaygeon, June 16—Hark, hark, the dogs do bark, the gypsies have come to town; some in rags, a number of nags, but none in the velvet gown. The gypsies—well yes the gypsies—that is what everybody says; just what induced them to try the Kawartha lakes as a summer resort no one seems to know but as we were trying to think not of worldly things who should appear to distract our attention on the Sabbath but those very same. The bright trappings of the ladies were quite noticeable. The merry widow style of headgear, together with the fantastically dressed children at once drew the attention of the Sunday School scholars and it was not long till the whole town knew. Well, they squatted, and right beside our public school too. Sure there was a time on Monday. Wild Bill's Buffalo show of the west was no comparison. No side shows, no grand stand, no elephants, although scholars and gypsies were hobnobbing around, each trying to get a flank movement on the other, and the principal declared that either the school or the gypsies would have to move. It really seemed for a time as if Vivian Lancaster's red coats would have to appear before Mr. McMullen, constable, got their faithful promise to move at 8 am. Tuesday. Some may have, but we understand they expect their queen along any time and may be just kind of waiting around to give Her Majesty a reception. Just where they came from seems a mystery. Tradition has it that they are a part of Napoleon's army sent to Mexico, half a century ago. There may be some French but just how much we are at present unable to say. They have the dark Spanish-Mexican hue, their language French, their attire—although not quite aristocratic—is seemingly good enough and they are happy. They know enough to mind their own business, and are quite harmless in many respects. No drunkenness and if there is profanity it is a blessing we don't know what they say. May peace and happiness go with them.

HALLEY'S COMET

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Let me call the attention of Mr. Collier, Dr. Marsh, Mr. Lowry and other members of the local Astronomical Society to the fact that astronomers are awaiting the return of Halley's comet. I had expected the local society to remark upon its failure to turn up before this, but possibly they were not aware that the comet is not really expected until the return of Orion in the autumn. It will then reach its perihelion.

Yours, &c.,

PETERBORO'S BRILLIANT PROSPECTS

There was never in the history of Peterborough a time when prospects were brighter than they are now. The city officials state that there has been double the number of building permits issued already this year more than the best previous year and the prospects are that this percentage will go up even higher.

Think what it will mean when the new factories begin running; simply this, more families will of necessity move to the city, employment will be given to others in the city that need it and thus create a demand for homes either to rent or purchase in other words prosperity is bound to advance more or less in every portion of the city. ¶ People whoare contemplating purchasing homes will do well to see J. T. O'CONNELL & CO'S list now and get terms. We have a choice selection of properties at moderate prices and easy terms. If you have not time to call during the day came any evening and we will show you any property on our list—We're always at your service.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR THE THREE

Is What is Asked for by Water Commissioners Not $500 for Each One

The Review wishes to correct an error in the reference in last night's issue to Mr. Moore's request to the council on behalf of the Commissioners. What was asked for was an allowance of $500. amongst the three commissioners during the construction of the dam, not $500 each as was reported.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

Somewhat Mixed

Editor of the Review

Dear Sir,—I notice that the shadow path of totality in connection with the eclipse of the sun this evening, passes over the Arctic islands. If this is true will not the photosphere of the solar discus be affected? And will not the resultant effect interfere with the aerial nebulae? If this is true the city officials are to blame, Yours truly,

W. A. B.

General Disinfection

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Permit me to say that I have had some experience in disinfection and I do not think you disinfect sufficiently in Peterborough. I would strongly advise that everybody should be disinfected regularly once a day here by public disinfectors. This will ensure freedom from epidemics.

Yours etc.,

TRAVELLER.

Excursion to Jubilee

Golden Link Rebekah Lodge are running an excursion to Jubilee Point on Saturday, June 19th. Boat leaving Wolfe street wharf at 8 a.m. The charge for children from 12 to 16 years is 30 cents. Those under 12 go free, not as stated in the poster.

Newmarket carried by-law for the issue of $20,000 debentures. Granolithic walks will be laid and the roads within the corporation improved.

Geo. A. Lester, of Winnipeg, was fined $20 for abusing a cat.

FEW TRAMPS AROUND CITY

Weary Willies are Keeping Away From Peterborough—Said to be Few in Ontario

The almost total absence of tramps from the city is causing considerable surprise this season. The summer is the time of year when these knights of the road move about. A few years ago Peterborough was a sort of mecca for them and the country round about was usually infested with the transients. As a result of the harsh ruling of the police magistrates throughout Ontario the habitual finds it better to stay elsewhere. The railways have decided not to allow the tramp to ride on freight cars any more. Long terms in Central Prison at hard labor are out of the question for the inveterate rambler. Thus, from Peterborough and from Ontario generally there has been a tramp exodus and the rag-a-muffin Weary Willie of a few years ago has now become a rare spectacle.

SELL CLOTHES TO GET MONEY TO GO HOME

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 14.—The annual clearance sale in Ann Arbor is on. With many students the all important question is to raise enough money to settle up with the landlady and buy a ticket home, without incurring parental displeasure by sending for "more money," so the university bulletin boards contain all sorts of interesting news for the bargain hunter, and old clothes men and book stores are reaping a harvest.

"Good dress suit for sale cheap," explains one student's situation, while books, typewriters, overcoats and cameras are offered at low prices. Of course, with the seniors it is a question of shipping a quantity of stuff including everything from books to canoes, and ready cash looks better to them than a freight bill.

Loan shops are kept busy providing the necessary car fare for some, and if certain articles are missing among the students embarrassment will be saved if no questions are asked, for a "coed" may be blamed for a deal in which one of Ann Arbor's "uncles" is really a party to.

LOOKED LIKE CASE OF "JOY RIDING"

Automobile Abandoned at the Cemetery Last Night—Police Were Notified

The police authorities were notified this morning by Mr. Frank Wise, superintendent of Little Lake cemetery, that an automobile had been left near the cemetery last night about 10.45, and that it still remained there. The machine was described as a large one, painted black, with a buggy top, and was numbered 1,262. Mr. Wise was not at home at the time, and was considerably mystified as to why the automobile had been abandoned. It was surmised that persons had stolen the machine and gone "joy riding," as is a common occurrence in large cities. Enquiries were made, and it was finally ascertained that the owner was Mr. Dickson Hall, who had been out for a spin last night, but on arriving near the cemetery the tire on one of the wheels blew up, bringing the automobile to a sudden stop. On account of the lateness of the hour the owner did not bother notifying any of the residents of the vicinity, and this was the cause of all the excitement.

Off to Buckhorn

The members of the County Council left this morning at 7.30 by bus to Chemong where they will take the steamer Manita to Buckhorn. The council are going up for the purpose of inspecting the dam and bridges in which they are interested. The party will return this evening and the session of the council will be resumed to-morrow morning.

THE HONEYMOON

The honeymoon has no definite duration, but is longer and shorter, according as the temper of the high contracting parties determines, or their relatives, or the weather, or the mode, or the comparative cost of travelling and staying at home. Briefly, it is that interval during which the man, going out in the morning, remembers his kiss and forgets his overshoes, as distinguished from the interval during which he remembers his overshoes and forgets his kiss.—Brooklyn Life.

Shocks in Strawberries

Baltimoreans who are enjoying now the delightful fruitage of the Anne Arundel berry fields little realize that each berry is an electric dynamo. Perhaps that is a partial explanation of the uncloying pleasure with which the berries tickle the palate.

The earth is always charged with negative electricity and the air with positive, the charging of the earth being secured by water. When the leaves begin to burst forth they become charged with negative electricity from the earth. As the leaf expands it also becomes inductively charged with positive electricity from the air, as likewise do the flowers. When the fruit commences to form, however, nature provides an impermeable insulator, represented by the rind or peel enveloping the fleshy portion of the fruit, but at the same time the negative charging continues from the earth to the centre, or core, through the stalk, this central negative cell being insulated from the positive fleshy cell by a thin skin.—Baltimore News.

INTERMEDIATE GAMES TO BE PLAYED AT RIVERSIDE

The Grounds Committee Have Placed Their Property at the Disposal of the Intermediate League Teams—Games Will be Played in Evening.

The games scheduled to be played in the Intermediate League next Saturday have been called off, and a meeting will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening, June 22nd, when each team is asked to send a representative. The committee in charge of Riverside Park have intimated to the president of the league that they would be willing to allow the teams to play their games on their property, provided they are played in the evenings. This will be appreciated very much by the league, and as a means of adding interest to the games no charge will be made for admission to the fans, who will no doubt turn out to witness the contests. A new schedule will be drawn up and umpires appointed, so it only remains for the teams to do their part if they wish the league to be a success, and they now have a chance which should be taken advantage of.

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

George Moriarty of the Detroit Tigers says he prefers a team that has plenty of nerve to the one with the science. He says it is nerve that wins in baseball.

Baseball by electric light is not considered a success. It was tried at Cincinnati and the immense reflectors which are necessary illuminated the field as bright as day.

Rube Waddell has fanned 56 men in 10 games.

Mullin has a record of 44 strikeouts in 11 games.

Walter Brodie for years a clever hitting outfielder of the Baltimore and Pittsburg clubs is back at his old home in Virginia, out of baseball for good.

Durham, the latest acquisition to the Toronto Maple Leafs, secured from the New York Giants, looks very much like a lemon.

The Detroit Tigers are winning consistently. The addition of Bush, the 19 year old wonder, a .300 hitter at first and third has given the champions just the strength needed to win a third time.

Mullin's superb pitching is helping the Tigers to lead the procession.

Rain has been particularly disastrous to the National League. Thirty-four games have been postponed on account of the weather. New York has supplied most with 11 games put over and St. Louis least with 5.

Pittsburg holds the highest percentage of any league in organized baseball.

Hugh Jennings, the Detroit manager is a lawyer by profession and practices during the winter at Scranton.

Toronto took two games from Jersey City yesterday and the Leafs are now tied with Buffalo and Montreal for second place.

Philadelphia stopped Mullin's winning streak by defeating the Tigers by 5-4.

Toronto has secured Newton from the New York Highlanders.

The Commercial Travellers team came down from Peterborough on Saturday afternoon and the boys picked up a team to accommodate them. The result was 20 to 8 in favor of the locals.

There was some good ball in spots by the visitors but the spots were not very large and the locals had a good practise at batting.—Hastings Star.

Several city league baseball stars, it is likely, have played their last game in local company for with the closing of Ottawa University yesterday the College nine is disbanded.

"Mac" McCarthy, who held down the third sack for the students, and Jack Corkery, who used to beat them out at first, have graduated and returned to their homes—the former to Ogdensburg and the latter to Peterborough.—Ottawa Evening Journal.

"FAN" ENDORSES SENIOR CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE

Sporting Editor Review.

Dear Sir,—I would like to say a few words in regard to the Senior City Baseball League. I have witnessed all games played to date and have been agreeably surprised at the article of ball played by the four teams. The contests have been fast, considering the short time the players have been together, and as the season progresses I hope to have the satisfaction of witnessing classy ball and to know that I have done a small part in encouraging the boys who appear to be working hard for the success of the league. One thing I like is the promptness in which the games are started, and the agility the players show in taking their positions in the field and at the bat. Although one of the games last Saturday was drawn out considerably, it was not purposely brought about by the opposing players, who had, and what team does not have an off day? There has been no trouble on account of shortage of balls and I like the umpire's work. In fact I am completely satisfied with the work of the teams in the past games, and only hope that next Saturday, and also in the future contests the fans will endeavor to do their part to help the players, who are in every sense of the word worthy of the support of the baseball fans in this city.

Thanking you for space.

Yours, etc.,
FAN.

AUSTRALIA WON SECOND MATCH

London, June 16—Surrey beat North Hants today by two wickets.

The Australians won the second test match against England by 9 wickets. England's second innings only netted them 121.

Worcester defeated Kent by 166.

GOLF

WEST ENDS AND THE STRATHCONAS

Will Play Practice Game at Riverside This Evening

The Straths and West Ends will play an exhibition game at Riverside Park to-night. It will be the final workout of the two teams for the league games on Saturday. The Straths have a stiff proposition before them when they play the T.A.S. in the first game and are endeavoring to get into good shape. The West Ends will clash with the Park street nine and are confident of taking the game, although their confidence does not permit of the easing up of practice. All players are asked to be on hand at 6.45 in uniform.

SPORTING NOTES

Jack Johnson, the pugilist, in the limelight at present, has purchased two city lots in Galveston, Texas, upon which an up-to-date ten room house is to be built for his widowed mother. the house will cost about $10,000 and a gymnasium will be built for the use of Jack and his young brother

Stanley Ketchel's hands are never injured in a fight because he hits correctly and his blows are well directed.

Dan O'Leary, of Detroit, the famous pedestrian, in looking over his records, finds that he has walked 100,000 miles. He has walked in England, Ireland and France.

Jack Munroe, a former pugilist, is now Mayor of Elk City.

Bob Fitzsimmons has made a big hit on the other side, although his fighting days have passed. Bob was the stellar attraction at a recent benefit for Jem Mace in London. Lanky Bob donned the mitts with a local celebrity, and then the ring was turned into an improvised blacksmith shop. The former champion, as the smithy, moulded one of his artistic horseshoes as a souvenir of the occasion, the trophy being offered at auction, and bringing a fancy figure from some friends of Mace's.

Battling Nelson says he will retire from the ring next September.

Fred. Appleby, the English distance runner, who has competed in a number of Marathon races in this country, has returned to England several thousand dollars richer by reason of his races over the Marathon distance. Appleby did not finish first in any of the important races, but he landed money every time he started. He expects to return to this country in September to re-enter the racing game.

New Westminster will play the Tecumsehs, of Toronto, for the Minto Cup, on June 26th, and July 3rd.

Jim Jeffries was to have met an unknown in Pittsburg in the near future, but the sports got wise that the unknown was to be the boilermaker's sparring partner, and the proposed "fight" will not come off

"Parson" Davies, who at one time managed pugilists, such as John L. Sullivan, Peter Jackson, Jack Dempsey, is said to be dying at his home in Chicago.

Jack Johnson has hired a press agent whose duty involves the composition of speeches to be delivered over the footlights by the negro champion.

The capture of a lunge by an employee of a local telegraph office yesterday caused to be presented the somewhat unique spectacle of a lunge at one end of the line and a sucker at the other.

ONE WAY TO STOP THE AUTOMOBILES

The County Council are expending considerable money in an endeavor to improve the roads near Buckhorn and Burleigh, but this is not very pleasant news to automobile owners. Crushed stone has been placed on the roads and as a steam roller is not available, it remains for the horses and vehicles to do the work which cannot be properly accomplished without one of these big heavy machines. The crushed stones would play havoc with the rubber tires of the automobile and it will be some time before the roads will be in proper shape for the horseless carriage to travel in that part of the country.

PLAY BASEBALL BY ELECTRIC LIGHT

Experiment to be Tried in Cincinnati—Powerful Lamps on Talls Towers

Cincinnati, June 16.—The first game of baseball at night will be played on the Cincinnati's club's grounds next Saturday. Also it is the first game that need not be "called on account of darkness," for there won't be any darkness. So "fans" for whom the day is not long enough loudly rejoice.

The Cincinnati Night Baseball Amusement Company has spent $5,000 to illuminate the park. All around it now are 100-foot tall steel towers propped by immensely powerful electric lamps. The light tower on the grand stand illumined the home plate so brightly that no player who slides for it at night can miss it—provided the ball does not get there first. The light on the roof of the covered bleachers is placed so as to throw its rays around first base. In fact, when all the lamps are lighted, every nook and corner of the park will be so well illumined that a black kitten could not hide in it.

The game next Saturday will be between picked nines. Most of the players will be the members of the Daylight Cincinnati Club. The foul lines will be marked out with luminous paint, and it was suggested that the ball should be painted so, too, but the "spit-ball" pitchers objected. If the white players can see each other Saturday, such teams as the Royal Giants, of Brooklyn, and the Chicago Unions will be invited to play at night so as to put the lighting apparatus to the severest test.

The grounds will be rented for other sports, such as foot racing and Marathon running, in which there can be no dark horses, under the circumstances.

In a word, Gerry Herrmann's new enterprise fills a long felt want and provides a new excuse.

"Where have you been, you brute?" the woman in white, with the rolling pin will ask, at 4 o'clock in the morning.

"Besbe ball game, m' dear—bes' game ever see—twe-twenty-six innings—more, nothin' to nothin'—called account of daylight."

WALKER BEATEN

English papers just to hand, contain an account of the defeat of Kerr's great rival, Reggie Walker on his first appearance in England, as follows;

R. E. Walker, of Durban who won the 100 metres race at the olympic games last year and has come over to compete in the amateur championship made his first appearance of the season as a competitor at Abergavenny.

He won his heat at the 120 yards open handicap in 12 1-5 sec. but could only finish third in the final to Walsh of Dublin, and Crutchley, of Abergavenny, respectively.

In the 220 yards won by Woodruff, Machen (Mon.), Walker slipped and was unplaced.

The prizes in both events were withheld. Walker will compete in the 100 yards and 120 yards events at the opening of the new grounds on July 29th.

TO ABOLISH THE FLY

It happens every day, and no one pays very little attention. Maybe it is the butter, or perhaps the slice of bread alongside one's plate. Or else, quite possibly it is the milk in the pitcher. But whatever it is that attracts the omnipresent fly, its appearance as it crawls over the food on the table is unappetising.

The health authorities of New York City estimate that about one-half of the deaths from typhoid in the metropolis annually are attributable to the distribution of the germs by flies But, serious as this matter is, it is of vastly less importance than the destruction of human life, particularly that of young children, by the bowel complaints which these insects are chiefly instrumental in spreading. It is reckoned that deaths from these latter maladies in New York would be reduced from 7000 to about 2000 a year if proper precautions were taken to prevent the breeding of flies.

The insects will breed in fermenting vegetable or animal material of almost any kind. Garbage suits them first-rate. The maggots and chrysalids have been found in great numbers in rotten straw mattresses, among old cotton garments, and even in waste paper that had been exposed to wet

Now, so far as stables are concerned which are accountable for ninety-five per cent of the fly output in cities, the hatching of the insects can be absolutely prevented by the simple device of putting all manure into a covered receptacle, and removing the contents once a week. This receptacle should be a water tight bin or pit, provided with a cover, so as to prevent the ingress and egress of flies

The additional methods demanded are the following; Abolish all unsanitary outhouses. Allow no accumulations of filth of any kind. Compel people to put all their garbage in covered cans, and remove the contents at least once a week. Compel owners of abattoirs to keep all refuse in covered receptacles; and remove at least once a week.—From "Insect a Table Guest," in July Technical World Magazine.

Sustaining Life.

Mrs. Andrew Crosse in her "Reminiscences" describes an old nurse born at Broomfield, England, who lived to be nearly a hundred. "All her life she had eaten 'a dew bit and breakfast, a stay bit and dinner, a nommet and crummet and a bit after supper,' eight meals in all. Besides this it was her invariable custom to mix together all the doctors' stuff left after any illness in the house and swallow it on the principle that what had cost money should not be wasted."

At the Head.

It is stated in Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's "Life of James MacNeill Whistler" in that part which relates to his brief West Point career that the great American painter was not "soldierly in appearance, bearing or habit." Whistler's horsemanship is said to have been hardly better than his scholarship. According to General Webb, it was not wholly unusual for him at cavalry drill to go sliding over his horse's head. On such occasions Major Sackett, then in command, would call out:

"Mr. Whistler, aren't you a little ahead of the squad?"

According to Whistler's version to the Pennells, Major Sackett's remark was:

"Mr. Whistler, I am pleased to see you for once at the head of your class."

She Almost Remembered.

Little Josephine, aged four, was intently studying the pictures in a book and seemed very much interested in a picture of Charles Dickens.

Taking the book to her mother, she inquired who it was.

"That is Dickens, dear," said her mother.

The picture was wonderfully fascinating to the little girl, and when her big sister came from college in the evening she ran and got the book, turned to the picture and said:

"Sister, see! This is a picture of Mr. Darn."

Her sister replied, "No, dear, that is Mr. Dickens."

"Well," said Josephine, "I knew it was some kind of a swear word."—Delineator.

Concrete Church.

"Colonel, we want a contribution from you to help build a mission church."

"Judge, you know well enough that, while I am in sympathy with morality and religion, I don't believe in churches in the abstract, and"—

"Neither do I, colonel. We're going to build this one of concrete."

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,
Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

It was such an effort for me to say these words, to say anything in the state of mind into which I had been thrown by his unexpected allusion to this subject, that I unfortunately drew his attention to myself, and it was with what I felt to be a glance of doubt that he added with decided emphasis:

"You must consider this whole subject as a forbidden one in this family. Only cheerful topics are suitable for the sickroom. If Miss Grey attempts to introduce any other, stop her. Do not let her talk about anything which will not be conducive to her speedy recovery. These are the only instructions I have to give you. All others must come from her physician."

I made some reply with as little show of emotion as possible. It seemed to satisfy him, for his face cleared as he kindly observed:

"You have a very trustworthy look for one as young. I shall rest easy while you are with her, and I shall expect you to be always with her when I am not—every moment, mind. She is never to be left alone with gossiping servants. If a word is mentioned in her hearing about this crime, which seems to be in everybody's mouth, I shall feel forced, greatly as I should regret the fact, to blame you."

This was a heart stroke, but I kept up bravely, changing color perhaps, but not to such a marked degree as to arouse any deeper suspicion in his mind than that I had been wounded in my amour propre.

"She shall be well guarded," said I. "You may trust me to keep from her all avoidable knowledge of this crime."

He bowed, and I was about to leave his presence when he detained me by remarking, with the air of one who felt that some explanation was necessary:

"I was at the ball where this crime took place. Naturally it has made a deep impression on me and would on her if she heard of it."

"Assuredly," I murmured, wondering if he would say more and how I should have the courage to stand there and listen if he did.

"It is the first time I have ever come in contact with crime," he went on with what in one of his reserved nature seemed a hardly natural insistence. "I could well have been spared the experience. A tragedy with which one has been even thus remotely connected produces a lasting effect upon the mind."

"Oh, yes; oh, yes!" I murmured, edging involuntarily toward the door. Did I not know? Had I not been there, too—I, little I, whom he stood gazing down upon from such a height, little realizing the fatality which united us and, what was even a more overwhelming thought to me at the moment, the fact that of all persons in the world the shrinking little being into whose eyes he was then looking was perhaps his greatest enemy and the one person, great or small, from whom he had the most to fear?

But I was no enemy to his gentle daughter and the relief I felt at finding myself thus cut off by my own promise from even the remotest communication with her on this forbidden subject was genuine and sincere.

But the father! What was I to think of the father? Alas! I could have but one thought, admirable as he appeared in all lights save the one in which his too evident connection with this crime had placed him. I spent the hours of the afternoon in alternately watching the sleeping face of my patient, too sweetly calm in its repose, or so it seemed, for the mind beneath to harbor such doubts as were shown in the warning I had ascribed to her, and vain efforts to explain by any other hypothesis than that of guilt, the extraordinary evidence which linked this man of great affairs and the loftiest repute to a crime involving both theft and murder.

Nor did the struggle end that night. It was renewed with still greater positiveness the next day, as I witnessed the glances which from time to time passed between this father and daughter—glances full of doubt and question on both sides, but not exactly such doubt or such question as my suspicions called for. Or so I thought, and spent another day or two hesitating very much over my duty, when, coming unexpectedly upon Mr. Grey one evening, I felt all my doubts revive in view of the extraordinary expression of dread—I might with still greater truth say fear—which informed his features and made them, to my unaccustomed eyes, almost unrecognizable.

He was sitting at his desk in reverie over some papers which he seemed not to have touched for hours, and when, at some movement I made, he started up and met my eye, I could swear that his cheek was pale, the firm carriage of his body shaken, and the whole man a victim to some strong and secret apprehension he vainly sought to hide. When I ventured to tell him what I wanted, he made an effort and pulled himself together, but I had seen him with his mask off, and his usually calm visage and self possessed mien could not again deceive me.

My duties kept me mainly at Miss Grey's bedside, but I had been provided with a little room across the hall, and to this room I retired very soon after this for rest and a necessary understanding with myself.

For, in spite of this experience and my now settled convictions, my purpose required whetting. The indescribable charm, the extreme refinement and nobility of manner observable in both Mr. Grey and his daughter were producing their effect. I felt guilty—constrained. Whatever my convictions, the impetus to act was leaving me. How could I recover it? By thinking of Anson Durand and his present disgraceful position.

Anson Durand! Oh, how the feeling surged up in my breast as that name slipped from my lips on crossing the threshold of my little room! Anson Durand, whom I believed innocent, whom I loved, but whom I was betraying with every moment of hesitation in which I allowed myself to indulge! What if the Hon. Mr. Grey is an eminent statesman, a dignified, scholarly, and to all appearance, highminded man? What if my patient is sweet, dove eyed and affectionate? Had not Anson qualities as excellent in their way, rights as certain, and a hold upon myself superior to any claims which another might advance? Drawing a much crumpled little note from my pocket, I eagerly read it. It was the only one I had of his writing, the only letter he had ever written me. I had already reread it a hundred times, but as I once more repeated to myself its well known lines, I felt my heart grow strong and fixed in the determination which had brought me into this family.

Restoring the letter to its place, I opened my gripsack and from its inmost recesses drew forth an object which I had no sooner in hand than a natural sense of disquietude led me to glance apprehensively, first at the door, then at the window, though I had locked the one and shaded the other. It seemed as if some other eye besides my own must be gazing at what I held so gingerly in hand; that the walls were watching me, if nothing else, and the sensation this produced was so exactly like that of guilt (or what I imagined to be guilt), that I was forced to repeat once more to myself that it was not a good man's overthrow I sought, or even a bad man's immunity from punishment, but the truth, the absolute truth. No name could equal that which I should feel if, by any overdelicacy now, I failed to save the man who trusted me.

The article which I held—have you guessed it?—was the stiletto with which Mrs. Fairbrother had been killed. It had been intrusted to me by the police for a definite purpose. The time for testing that purpose had come, or so nearly come, that I felt I must be thinking about the necessary ways and means.

Unwinding the folds of tissue paper in which the stiletto was wrapped, I scrutinized the weapon very carefully. Hitherto I had seen only pictures of it; now I had the article itself in my hand. It was not a natural one for a young woman to hold, a woman whose taste ran more toward healing than inflicting wounds, but I forced myself to forget why the end of its blade was rusty and looked mainly at the devices which ornamented the handle. I had not been mistaken in them. They belonged to the house of Grey and to none other. It was a legitimate inquiry I had undertaken. However the matter ended, I should always have these historic devices for my excuse.

It seemed as if some other eye besides my own must be gazing at what I held.

My plan was to lay this dagger on Mr. Grey's desk at a moment when he would be sure to see it and I to see him. If he betrayed a guilty knowledge of this fatal steel; if, unconscious of my presence, he showed surprise and apprehension, then we should know how to proceed: justice would be loosed from constraint and the police feel at liberty to approach him. It was a delicate task, this. I realized how delicate when I had thrust the stiletto out of sight under my nurse's apron and started to cross the hall. Should I find the library clear? Would the opportunity be given me to approach his desk, or should I have to carry this guilty witness of a world famous crime on into Miss Grey's room and with its unholy outline pressing a semblance of itself upon my breast sit at that innocent pillow, meet those innocent eyes and answer the gentle inquiries which now and then fell from the sweetest lips I have ever seen smile into the face of a lonely, preoccupied stranger?

The arrangement of the rooms was such as made it necessary for me to pass through this sitting room in order to reach my patient's bedroom.

With careful tread, so timid as not to appear stealthy, I accordingly advanced and pushed open the door. The room was empty. Mr. Grey was still with his daughter and I could cross the floor without fear. But never had I entered upon a task requiring more courage or one more obnoxious to my natural instincts. I hated each step I took, but I loved the man for whom I took those steps, and moved resolutely on. Only, as I reached the chair in which Mr. Grey was accustomed to sit, I found that it was easier to plan an action than to carry it out. Home life and the domestic virtues had always appealed to me more than a man's greatness. The position which this man held in his own country, his usefulness there, even his prestige as statesman and scholar, were facts, but very dreamy facts, to me, while his feelings as a father, the place he held in his daughter's heart—these were real to me, these I could understand, and it was of these and not of his place as a man, that this his favorite seat spoke to me. How often had I beheld him sit by the hour with his eyes on the door behind which his one darling lay ill! Even now it was easy for me to recall his face as I had sometimes caught a glimpse of it through the crack of the suddenly opened door, and I felt my breast heave and my hand falter as I drew forth the stiletto and moved to place it where his glance would fall upon it on his leaving his daughter's bedside.

But my hand returned quickly to my breast and fell back again empty. A pile of letters lay before me on the open lid of the desk. The top one was addressed to me with the word "Important" written in the corner. I did not know the writing, but I felt that I should open and read this letter before committing myself or those who stood back of me to this desperate undertaking.

Glancing behind me and seeing that the door into Miss Grey's room was ajar, I caught up this letter and rushed with it back into my own room. As I surmised, it was from the inspector, and as I read it I realized that I had received it not one moment too soon. In language purposely noncommittal, but of a meaning not to be mistaken, it advised me that some unforeseen facts had come to light which altered all former suspicions and made the little surprise I had planned no longer necessary.

There was no allusion to Mr. Durand, but the final sentence ran:

"Drop all care and give your undivided attention to your patient."

CHAPTER XIII.

My patient slept that night, but I did not. The shock given by this sudden cry of "Halt!" at the very moment I was about to make my great move, the uncertainty as to what it meant and my doubt of its effect upon Mr. Durand's position put me on the anxious seat and kept my thoughts fully occupied till morning.

I was very tired and must have shown it when, with the first rays of a very meager sun, Miss Grey softly unclosed her eyes and found me looking at her, for her smile had a sweet compassion in it, and she said as she pressed my hand:

"You must have watched me all night. I never saw any one look so tired—or so good," she softly finished.

I had rather she had not uttered that last phrase. It did not fit me at the moment—did not fit me perhaps at any time. Good—I, when my thoughts had not been with her, but with Mr. Durand; when the dominating feeling in my breast was not that of relief, but a vague regret that I had not been allowed to make my great test and so establish, to my own satisfaction at least, the perfect innocence of my lover even at the cost of untold anguish to this confiding girl, upon whose gentle spirit the very thought of crime would cast a deadly blight.

I must have flushed certainly I showed some embarrassment—for her eyes brightened with shy laughter as she whispered:

"You do not like to be praised—another of your virtues. You have too many. I have only one—I love my friends."

She did. One could see that—love was life to her.

For an instant I trembled. How near I had been to wrecking this gentle soul! Was she safe yet? I was not sure. My own doubts were not satisfied. I awaited the papers with feverish impatience. They should contain news. News of what? Ah, that was the question!

"You will let me see my mail this morning, will you not?" she asked as I busied myself about her.

"That is for the doctor to say," I smiled. "You are certainly better this morning."

"It is so hard for me not to be able to read his letters, or to write a word to relieve his anxiety."

Thus she told me her heart's secret, and unconsciously added another burden to my already too heavy load.

I was on my way to give some orders about my patient's breakfast, when Mr. Grey came into the sitting room and met me face to face. He had a newspaper in his hand and my heart stood still as I noted his altered looks and disturbed manner. Were these due to anything he had found in those columns? It was with difficulty that I kept my eyes from the paper which he held in such a manner as to disclose its glaring headlines. These I dared not read with his eyes fixed on mine.

"How is Miss Grey? How is my daughter?" he asked in great haste and uneasiness. "Is she better this morning, or—worse?"

"Better," I assured him, and was greatly astonished to see his brow instantly clear.

"Really?" he asked. "You really consider her better? The doctors say so, but I have not very much faith in doctors in a case like this," he added.

"I have seen no reason to distrust them," I protested. "Miss Grey's illness, while severe, does not appear to be of an alarming nature. But then, I have had very little experience out of the hospital. I am young yet, Mr. Grey."

He looked as if he quite agreed with me in this estimate of myself, and, with a brow still clouded, passed into his daughter's room, the paper in his hand. Before I joined them I found and scanned another journal. Expecting great things, I was both surprised and disappointed to find only a small paragraph devoted to the Fairbrother case. In this it was stated that the authorities hoped for new light on this mystery as soon as they had located a certain witness, whose connection with the crime they had just discovered. No more, no less, than was contained in Inspector Dalzell's letter. How could I bear it—the suspense, the doubt—and do my duty to my patient? Happily, I had no choice. I had been adjudged equal to this business and I must prove myself to be so. Perhaps my courage would revive after I had had my breakfast; perhaps then I should be able to fix upon the identity of the new witness—something which I found myself incapable of at this moment.

These thoughts were on my mind as I crossed the rooms on my way back to Miss Grey's bedside. By the time I reached her door I was outwardly calm as her first words showed:

"Oh, the cheerful smile! It makes me feel better in spite of myself."

If she could have seen into my heart!

Mr. Grey, who was leaning over the foot of the bed, cast me a quick glance which was not without its suspicion. Had he detected me playing a part, or were such doubts as he displayed the product simply of his own uneasiness? I was not able to decide, and with this unanswered question added to the number already troubling me I was forced to face the day which, for aught I knew, might be the precursor of many others equally trying and unsatisfactory.

But help was near. Before noon I received a message from my uncle to the effect that if I could be spared he would be glad to see me at his home as near 3 o'clock as possible. What could he want of me? I could not guess, and it was with great inner perturbation that, having won Mr. Grey's permission, I responded to his summons.

I found my uncle awaiting me in a carriage before his own door, and I took my seat at his side without the least idea of his purpose. I supposed that he had planned this ride that he might talk to me unreservedly and without fear of interruption. But I soon saw that he had some very different object in view, for not only did he start down town instead of up, but his conversation, such as it was, confined itself to generalities and studiously avoided the one topic of supreme interest to us both.

At last, as we turned into Bleecker street, I let my astonishment and perplexity appear.

"Where are we bound?" I asked. "It cannot be that you are taking me to see Mr. Durand?"

"No," said he and said no more.

"Ah, police headquarters!" I faltered as the carriage made another turn and drew up before a building I had reason to remember. "Uncle, what am I to do here?"

"See a friend," he answered as he helped me to alight. Then as I followed him in some bewilderment he whispered in my ear: "Inspector Dalzel. He wants a few minutes' conversation with you."

Oh, the weight which fell from my shoulders at these words! I was to hear, then, what had intervened between me and my purpose. The wearing night I had anticipated was to be lightened with some small spark of knowledge. I had confidence enough in the kind hearted inspector to be sure of that. I caught at my uncle's arm and squeezed it delightedly, quite oblivious of the curious glances I must have received from the various officials we passed on our way to the inspector's office.

We found him waiting for us, and I experienced such pleasure at sight of his kind and earnest face that I hardly noticed uncle's sly retreat till the door closed behind him.

"Oh, inspector, what has happened?" I impetuously exclaimed in answer to his greeting. "Something that will help Mr. Durand without disturbing Mr. Grey—have you as good news for me as that?"

"Hardly," he answered, moving up a chair and seating me in it with a fatherly air which under the circumstances was more discouraging than consolatory. "We have simply heard of a new witness, or, rather, a fact has come to light which has turned our inquiries into a new direction."

"And—and—you cannot tell me what this fact is?" I faltered as he showed no intention of adding anything to this very unsatisfactory explanation.

"I should not, but you were willing to do so much for us I must set aside my principles a little and do something for you. After all, it is only forestalling the reporters by a day. Miss Van Arsdale, this is the story: Yesterday morning a man was shown into this room and said that he had information to give which might possibly prove to have some bearing on the Fairbrother case. I had seen the man before and recognized him at the first glance as one of the witnesses who made the inquest unnecessarily tedious. Do you remember Jones, the caterer, who had only two or three facts to give and yet who used up the whole afternoon in trying to state those facts?"

"I do, indeed," I answered.

"Well, he was the man, and I own that I was none too delighted to see him. But he was more at his ease with me than I expected, and I soon learned what he had to tell. It was this: One of his men had suddenly left him, one of his very best men—one of those who had been with him in the capacity of waiter at the Ramsdell ball. It was not uncommon for his men to leave him, but they usually gave notice. This man gave no notice. He simply did not show up at the usual hour. This was a week or two ago. Jones, having a liking for the man, who was an excellent waiter, sent a messenger to his lodging house to see if he were ill. But he had left his lodgings with as little ceremony as he had left the caterer.

"This under ordinary circumstances would have ended the business; but, there being some great function in prospect, Jones did not feel like losing so good a man without making an effort to recover him, so he looked up his references in the hope of obtaining some clew to his present whereabouts.

"He kept all such matters in a special book and expected to have no trouble in finding the man's name, James Wellgood, or that of his former employer, but when he came to consult this book he was astonished to find that nothing was recorded against this man's name but the date of his first employment—March 15.

AN INDIAN [illegible]

His Fearful Punishment by a Primitive Mexican Tribe.

Speaking of [illegible] the Mexican Indians [illegible] curious case that was told [illegible] years ago in the state of [illegible] old Zapoteca chief [illegible] convert to Christianity [illegible]

He said that a [illegible] American botanist [illegible] through the mountains of [illegible] studying the rare and beautiful [illegible] of that region. He had with [illegible] mozo from another part of the country.

He carried several gold pieces sewed in the lining of his jacket. The [illegible] became aware of that fact, and one day when the botanist got down on his knees to drink at a little spring the mozo cut his head off with a [illegible] took the gold pieces and fled to the higher sierras.

Not long after the body was found by some Zapoteca Indians who had seen the botanist in former days studying the flowers and plants near their village. They knew that he was a harmless and good man because he loved flowers. All Mexican Indians love flowers. So they took the body to the chief and told him what they had seen and found. "What!" he said "Shall the kind stranger with the white face who loved flowers and sought not our goods nor insulted our women come to such a dog's death among us and not be avenged?"

He then dispatched four swift Indian runners in different directions with orders not to return without the murderer. After a week's time they returned bearing the malefactor bound in their midst. A council of old men was called, and the case was examined. The guilt of the mozo was proved, as he still had with him the strange pieces of gold.

Then the old chief gave the sentence. It was speedily performed. They led the trembling murderer to the center of the little plaza. There four green stakes were driven in the ground. The murderer was stripped naked and stretched by the wrists and feet in the air among the four stakes, to which he was lashed. Then the Indians made a great heap of unslaked lime under the wretched man's body, and when the heap touched his breast and sides they poured water over it until the scalding steam of the burning lime had cooked all the flesh from the bones. Then they took the bones and threw them into a hole on the mountain side.

And so was the stain of the murdered man's blood covered and vengeance was wrought by the Indians in behalf of "the white stranger who was good and loved flowers."

"But," pleads the ardent young millionaire, who has secured the license to marry the beautiful chorus girl, "why should we postpone our marriage for two weeks? We can just as well run around to the minister, have the ceremony performed and start on our honey"—

"It looks all right from where you sit," she interrupts him. "But I wouldn't even get a look in for press notices if I got married this week while all those grand opera stars are taking up the space. Pet, the best wedding notice we'd get would be a line in the vital statistics."

"Now, boys," said Professor Root, "can any of you describe to me what a half circle is like?"

Up shot half a dozen grasping hands.

"Well, Teddy," said Professor Root, "let's hear your definition of a half circle first."

"Please, sir," answered Teddy, "it's a straight line caught bending."—London Express.

TOWN OF GOLD BRICKS.

Wealth Found In the Walls of Mexican Adobe Houses.

There are many remarkable towns in Mexico, but none more interesting than Guanajuato, "the hill of the frog." It might more properly be called the "gold brick town," for the houses have been found to contain much gold.

This is a curious situation, but it came about naturally. Guanajuato—pronounced Wah-nah-wahto—is one of the oldest mining towns in Mexico, but the value of the place as a town was discovered when a railroad company decided to build a station there. It was found necessary to tear down about 300 adobe buildings, which were made of the refuse of various mines after the ore was extracted.

When it became known that the old adobe buildings would be torn down pieces taken at random were assayed. It was found that because of the old process, which left much gold and silver, they assayed from $3 to $24 a ton. The mean value was estimated to run about $8 gold a ton.

The old buildings have brought about $30,000 Mexican, in gold, and persons who have built since the new machinery has been installed in the mines are bemoaning the fact that the new houses do not contain as much gold as the old.

USE OF PILLOWS.

A Habit That Is Unnecessary and at Times May Be Harmful.

"Pillows are little more than a fad and a rather harmful one at that," said a Germantown doctor. "They should, indeed, only be used by those who sleep on their sides, as they are really injurious to others. When you sleep on your side your shoulder prevents your head from lying level on the bed, and pillows are useful to raise the head to this level.

"The natural and most healthful position for the ordinary person in sleeping is for one's head to be kept perfectly even, just as it would be standing up. Now, for the one who lies on his back while sleeping no pillow is needed to keep the head in this position, and yet 90 per cent of the persons who sleep on their backs use pillows, while those who sleep on their sides use far more pillow than is necessary.

"People get used to having their heads and shoulders propped high up and imagine they could not sleep any other way; but, as a matter of fact, if they would try sleeping with little or no pillow they would not only find that they would feel better in the morning, but also would actually be more comfortable in bed and sleep much sounder thoughout the night."

SHALL THE U.S. HAVE SIX CARDINALS OR TWO? A HOT DISCUSSION GOING ON

References in the Catholic Register to the Condition of the Church in Different Countries—What "Rome" Says.

"Rome" thus dilates on the appeal of Mr. Desmond, editor of the Milwaukee Citizen in the North American Review, for six Cardinals for America—America being, of course, that part of the Western hemisphere generally known as the United States. The article has been copied, or summarised or discussed in the press throughout the English-speaking world, and this week it has made its way into some of the Italian papers under the somewhat terrifying caption: The United States demand six Cardinals—the United States being, in this case, not the whole Western hemisphere, but only that part of it which fills the chair of our worthy contemporary, the Milwaukee Citizen. The main arguments of the article are the good old principles "One man, one vote," and "No taxation without representation" applied on what our fathers used to call "the rule of three." The United States counts some twenty-two millions of Catholics—seven millions or so of them, it is true, are Filipinos, but that hardly makes any difference, seeing that they with all their ecclesiastical and other traditions and appurtenances have been purchased by the United States for the handsome sum of twenty millions of dollars—this is about one-tenth of the Catholic population of the world; ergo, the United States should have about one-tenth of the entire Sacred College, which, as the plenum of seventy, is never perfect, would work out at about six Cardinals. But figures are very provoking after all. Another set of statistics tells us that there are in the United States about 15,000,000 of Catholics and that the number in the whole world is about 300,000,000. On this basis, and taking into account the fact that there are only fifty-three cardinals at present in the Sacred College, an eminent mathematician, consulted by Rome, declares that the United States are "entitled" to two complete cardinals, and very nearly, though not quite, three-quarters of a third Cardinal. Ireland would only have less than two-thirds of a third Cardinal. Ireland would only have less than two-thirds of a Cardinal, while Australia, for instance, would have to content herself with a really ridiculous fraction of a Cardinal. On the other hand, if we proceed on the main lines of the article in the North American Review we shall discover that a comparatively unknown fragment of the American continent to the south of the United States would have a good claim to about ten complete cardinals.

The latter might be rejected on the score that South America does not count for much anyway, and indeed the claim of the United States for six complete Cardinals is strongly supported by the further claim that while Catholicism in the Latin countries is entirely decadent, the Church is in an ideally flourishing condition in the United States. Only it happens that neither of these assertions is true. In France the conditions that have been forced on the Church are almost as bad as they can be, in Italy they threatened to become even worse, but all that has nothing whatever to do with the making of Cardinals. Neither has the amount of Peter Pence collected in this or that country very much connection with the subject, except in so far as this test is concerned there is fortunately nothing to choose between the hierarchies of the Catholic universe. This wonderful attachment to the See of Peter, declared Pius X. only a few days ago, constitutes to-day a striking testimony to the divinity of the Church."

The truth is that a hundred valuable reasons, historical, traditional, political, diplomatic and so on, might be alleged to prove that the present constitution of the Sacred College is what it should be. It will doubtless change in the course of time; indeed, as we have already pointed out, it has greatly changed since the pontificate of Gregory XVI., but the change will be gradual, and in the meanwhile it may be regarded as extremely likely that before long the United States will have two, but not six, Cardinals.—The Catholic Register.

ONE ON THE DOCTORS.

Madame J. Rioux, St. Moise, Que., says:—"Fruit-a-tives cured me of severe Liver Disease. Neither doctors nor any other remedy did me any good, but Fruit-a-tives promptly cured."

"Fruit-a-tives" always cure Liver Trouble, Biliousness and Constipation because they act directly on the liver. They stimulate the secretion of Bile, which decreases the quantity of blood in the liver and thus relieves the Congestion or Biliousness. With plenty of Bile to move the Bowels, there is an end to the Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" are a positive cure for all troubles arising from a disordered liver.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes—prepared by a newly discovered process, and combined with valuable tonics and antiseptics. They are, without doubt, the most popular remedy in Canada to-day.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. If you can't get "Fruit-a-tives" in your neighborhood, these wonderful tablets will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by addressing Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

How Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. Samuel Thompson's Dropsy.

Her's Was a Terrible Case and the Doctors were Powerless to Check it, gut the Great Kidney Remedy Cured it.

Holt, Ont, June 16—Special.—All the country side about here is talking of the wonderful cure of Mrs Samuel Thompson of this place. She was taken sick with Jaundice, and though the doctor was called in she grew steadily worse. Her stomach was so bad she could not keep anything on it. Dropsy set in and she bloated to a terrible size. The doctor came three times to tap her, but her husband would not allow him to do it, saying that if she could not get better they might let her die in peace. Finally she dropped the doctors and tried other medicines, but they did her no good. Her leg burst and the water streamed from it. Then someone told her about Dodd's Kidney Pills and so she asked her husband to get her a box.

After taking them a while she took a bad turn. Something would come up in her throat and she would vomit. The water would just fly from her mouth. But from that time she commenced to get better and today she is a well woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Dropsy by putting the Kidneys in condition to take the surplus water out of the blood. They always cure it.

MR. CHIPMAN IS HERE IN REFERENCE TO SEWAGE SYSTEM

Mr. Willis Chipman, the eminent engineer, is in the city in connection with the proposed new sewerage system in the southern part of the city. He was present at a meeting of the Board of Works last night and gave the members an idea of the existing situation. Mr. Chipman is of the opinion that the second outfall sewer on Park street would be a good thing and will eventually have to be built. At the present time, however, he says that it is not necessary and should not be for ten or fifteen years to come, according to the development of the city. The present sewer is, or should be, large enough to carry off all the sewage matter emptied into it. The trouble is that the lower part is too low and at high water it backs up as far as Rink street. This is a bad condition of affairs and does not allow the sewer to work properly.

The outlet into the river is too low and to overcome this Mr. Chipman suggests that a small pumping station be built on the river bank and operated during high water. That is the only time the sewer needs any assistance. This pumping plant would be in a building about 20 by 20 feet and it with the water would cost about $10,000 or $15,000 at the outside.

In regards to Romaine St. sewer Mr. Chipman reported that from the King Edward school to Lock street there was a fall of three feet which is sufficient to carry off all the sewage matter had the sewer been properly constructed. As it is it will have to be torn up and relaid.

The third proposition is the Edison or Park street drain. This drain starts from Babb's lane or Homewood Ave. and was built of timber some 15 years ago. It runs down to Park street and then to Rink and down Rink across the McDonald property and empties into the Little Lake. This drain is in a very bad condition.

Mr. Chipman suggests that the whole drain be rebuilt of concrete and thus made permanent.

The Edison drain takes care of, or is supposed to all the surface water from the western hills and the territory which it flows into.

THE S. A. BAND CANNOT GIVE CONERTS SUNDAY EVENINGS

It is learned that the Salvation Army band was unable to comply with the request of the City Council to give its weekly band concert on Sunday evenings instead of on Tuesday evenings as last year. It is expected that the S. A. band will give its first concert in Victoria Park next Tuesday evening.

THE RETAIL MERCHANTS IN SESSION

Progress Reported at Gathering at Brockville—Need of Organization Emphasized

Brockville, Ont., June 16.—The tenth annual convention of the Ontario Provincial Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada opened here this morning with a fair representation of delegates from all parts of the province. B. W. Zieman, of Preston, presided. The first session was devoted largely to organization, including the appointment of the standing committees. The Ingersoll Association suggested by telegram that the matter of retailers paying cartage at both ends be brought before the Railway Commission or dealt with in any other effective manner, compelling shippers to deliver goods free on trains. The question was referred to a committee.

This afternoon the delegates were entertained to a drive around town.

At the evening session the convention was welcomed by Mayor Kyle, the president of the Board of Trade, and officers of the Brockville branch. Addresses were delivered by President Zieman, the Dominion president, J. G. Watson and the Dominion treasurer, J. A. Beaudry, both of Montreal.

NEED OF ORGANIZATION.

The president in his address briefly outlined his stewardship, and emphasized the necessity of thorough organization.

President Watson, of the Dominion Board, reported relations with the various provincial organizations as quite satisfactory.

The secretary, Mr. Trowern, of Toronto, in his annual report noted a growing interest being manifested in the branches throughout the jurisdiction, notably Toronto, which had made rapid strides. Altogether, there are now 145 branches, an increase of three, representing a membership of 1,830. This number, however, should be materially increased to still further strengthen the retailers in their fight for their rights.

The society has a surplus of over $300.

Lieut.-Col. H. S. Greenwood, now of "Uplands," Lakefield, who served in the South African campaign, sent to Col. Stevenson, of the 57th Regiment, to-day two pictures of the grave of Sergeant Dan Spence, who was killed in action on the 23rd of October, 1900, during the Boer war. The picture shows the grave, over which a large stone is placed, with an appropriate inscription.

The Dan Spence Ambulance, which was purchased and equipped by the citizens of Peterborough, was to commemorate the death of this young man, who was well known and popular in this city. The pictures will be framed and placed in the sergeants' mess and the officers' rooms.

USED LIKE A CRIMINAL, SENATOR LANDRY'S OPINION

Quebec Politician Waxes Bitter in Description of Treatment Meted Out to Editor of Le Nationaliste, Who Was Sentenced to Three Months' Imprisonmsnt For Newspaper Offence—Asks No Pity.

Montreal, June 18.—Hon. P. Landry, Senator of the Dominion, has been visiting Jules Fournier, editor of Le Nationaliste, who is confined in the Quebec jail, having been sentenced to three months for contempt of court. The Senator says:

"I asked for the prisoner, and he appeared behind a double iron grating which separates by four feet the assassins and the thieves from their relatives and their friends. In the lighted prison cage, which one traverses to reach the grating in question, an ordinary prisoner talks with the members of his family without any restraint whatever; but Fournier, guilty of a newspaper offence, is left without mercy behind a double grating in company with two other prisoners, who were also receiving a visit from several relatives.

"As three people only can sit in front of the grating, I was obliged to trouble the conversation of the two other prisoners, as they were forced by the circumstances to interfere with mine, for the reason that the distance separating Fournier and myself was so great we had to converse in a very loud tone to be at all understood.

"Fournier was dressed in the ordinary prison garb, a sort of blue drilling, barred trousers, and a ten-cent straw hat, all being worn to a fringe, having been used by several prisoners who had used the clothing before him.

"I remember some years ago, when Mathurin, who had been condemned to death, was awaiting his execution, of having paid a visit to the miserable man, Mr. Bernatchese being governor of the jail. He personally brought me to the prisoner, whom I could see close at hand, and I also remember that he wore his own clothing. In comparing, therefore, the treatment inflicted upon Fournier and those who visit him with that accorded to Mathurin, it will be easily understood what sentiments such a visit produces, and if I do not give expression to my indignation here it is because I do not want him to suffer for the just indignation because of the persecutions to which he is made to suffer to-day.

"He, however, supports it all bravely, convinced that he had right on his side when he denounced the administration of justice; he has no desire to lessen the value of his act in bowing before those who threatened him with imprisonment. He entered his cell holding his head high. He underwent the ignominious treatment of being made the victim of an insulting inspection like a vile criminal, and after they had stripped him of everything he possessed, they took away his clothing and replaced them with the garb of a vulgar bandit. He endured, however, all these humiliations with the serene conscience of a man who had done his duty. From his prison cell he will walk out carrying high his head."

"Fournier neither asks pity or favor. In fact he has nothing to ask from the reign of despotism and terror which exists all over the Province of Quebec. Fournier will do his time, and others will suffer like him, but the day will come when the cup will run over, and the people will do justice to themselves."

RUPERT'S LAND SYNOD ENDORSES PRINCIPLES OF GOTHENBURG LICENSE SYSTEM

Lively Debate on Canon Murray's Resolution, Which Was Finally Adopted—Three Parties in the House—Mover Has No Faith in Local Option—Prohibition is Inconsistent With Liberty.

Winnipeg, June 18.—The Anglican Synod of Rupert's Land endorsed the principles of the Gothenburg license system as the best means of controlling the liquor traffic, after a protracted debate. The synod was divided into three camps: the advanced temperance party, the moderate, who desired Gothenburg control, and therefore favored the resolution which was submitted yesterday by Canon Murray, and a third party, who desired things to remain as at present. Canon Murray, in moving the resolution, said:

"The liquor traffic, as at present carried on in Manitoba, is a source of much evil, moral, physical, intellectual and industrial. Most of the remedies which have been tried, and have been most popular, have not been attended with sufficient success to justify following." The canon discussed, first, prohibition, which had been put forward. Even if prohibition could be carried out, it is regarded as a remedy impossible for the Anglican body, being inconsistent with the principles of Christian liberty for which the Church stands. With the exception of the rural districts, where a vast majority of the people do not desire intoxicating liquor, prohibition does not succeed. The speaker went largely into statistics to establish this. The failure of prohibition was attributed to lack of public sentiment; secondly, it was merely negative. That method is not constructive, and it does not remove the lust of private gain; it does not put the liquor traffic out of politics.

The results cannot be secured by local option, and he believed the only real restraint lay in following the Gothenburg idea.

The debate developed the fact that the sentiment of the synod was overwhelmingly in favor of the Anglican Church declaring itself upon the great question, and offering, a well-defined policy to its people. The resolution finally carried by a large majority.

THE DAM HAD TO BE BLOWN UP

North Bay, June 18.—The effect of the dams built over a year ago at French River, to keep the waters of Lake Nipissing at normal level the year round, has been most disastrous, especially this year, with abnormally high water. Much property along the shore line has been flooded. Representations made to the Government by the Town Council of North Bay resulted in an examination, followed by the blowing up with dynamite of one of the dams Wednesday to allow the water to get away. New dams will be constructed on different plans.

Men Need Conciliation.

Ottawa, June 18.—The maintenance-of-way men on the G.N.R. are desirous of having a new schedule of wages drawn up, and the Labor Department has been applied to for a board of conciliation and arbitration. J. G. O'Donoghue will represent the men, and W. J. Christie of Winnipeg the company. Various classes of employes of the G.T.P. are wanting wage schedules and working conditions rearranged, and an application has been made to the Department for a board of conciliation and arbitration.

HARRY THAW SANE NEW PROCEEDING

Fishkill Landing, N.Y., June 18.—Harry K. Thaw was taken from the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan to White Plains yesterday far a hearing before Justice Mills to determine whether or not he is now sane. Thaw was in custody of Dr. Baker and two attendants from the asylum, and was accompanied by the Rev. George H. Toop, rector of St. Luke's Church at Matteawan, for whom he has formed an attachment. Proceedings similar to those now in progress were instituted last summer, but were withdrawn by Thaw after Justice Mills had refused to grant him a hearing before a jury.

PAID MONEY TO GET PROMOTED

Montreal, June 18.—At the royal commission yesterday, among the many members of the fire department who were heard, Capt. Presseau was the only one who testified that money had been paid for promotion.

The captain's experience occurred some years ago when he was approached by one of the surgeons in the department who undertook to secure his promotion for $200. Presseau compromised for $150, and shortly afterwards was advanced to foreman. His subsequent promotion did not cost him anything.

Justice Cannon announced that he would continue the usual sittings of the commission until June 30th.

To be eligible, it will be necessary for the association to hold four competitions during the season in which at least forty per cent. of the members must take part.

Shoots His Wife.

New York, June 18.—"I have just killed my wife; God help me!" was the cry with which William Westervelt, a prosperous mason and builder of Teaneck, near Hackensack, N.J., rushed into the home of a neighbor yesterday. Mrs. Westervelt was found dead at the foot of the bed in her room with a gunshot wound in her neck. Westervelt declares he was showing his wife how to handle the double-barrelled shotgun when the weapon was accidentally discharged.

DOMINION STEEL MEN IN SESSION

Montreal, June 18.—The Dominion Iron & Steel Co.'s shareholders had a love-feast at the Windsor Hotel yesterday. Reports were satisfactory and everybody went away happy.

There was considerable applause when President Plummer referred to the outcome of the lawsuit and paid tribute to the Dominion Coal Co. for the fair spirit in which it had acted since the judgment.

H. Gordon Strathy asked about the value of the Wabana ore fields, and likened them in a way to the C.P.R.'s land holdings. Mr. Plummer said that ore could no doubt be sold at a profit of $1 a ton.

The shareholders authorized the new issue of $20,000,000 consolidated mortgage bonds and re-elected the old board.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Two London seedmen are being prosecuted under the pure seeds act for keeping unclean seeds for sale.

Queen Elena of Italy has declined to wear the great hats which French milliners are seeking to impose on Italian women of fashion.

Fourteen hundred boys took part in the annual review of school cadets at Winnipeg, and thirty thousand people witnessed the spectacle.

PULP SUPPLY OF THE DOMINION

Apparently Unexhaustible, Says United States Senator Brown

Washington, June 18.—After disposing with little difficulty of a number of disputed paragraphs in the tariff bill, the Senate yesterday began the consideration of the print paper and wood pulp provisions.

"Canada is our only competitor in this market," said Senator Brown. "The seas and the inferior product of other countries than Canada protect the mills of the United States against all competition worth mentioning. Many of the workmen in the Canadian mills are American citizens and receive higher wages than when in the United States."

Senator Brown drew the following conclusions: Our pulp wood supply is nearly exhausted; the pulp wood supply of Canada is apparently inexhaustible; free pulp would tend to conserve our pulp wood; the production cost of print paper is less in the United States than it is in Canada; a ton of news print paper costs in Canada $29.54 to manufacture, and in the United States $27.24 per ton; the print paper market is controlled in the United States by combination, and whatever duty the law may fix it will assist the combination in that control, in violation of the law of competition, to the injury and outrage of the public.

Has a Rattle Snake

Mr. S. Wright, of town, is the proud possessor of a live rattlesnake which is about three and a half feet in length The snake was sent to Mr. Wright by a friend of his in Muskoka.—Havelock Standard.

THE FUTURE OF McKENZIE KING

Ottawa, June 18.—Hon. W. L. M. King, the new Minister of Labor, is the subject of much discussion in political circles here as a result of an interview given out by Liberal Organizer Alex. Smith. Mr. Smith is one of the best informed men in the Liberal party, and he is enthusiastic on the subject of the newest member of the Cabinet.

"There is no doubt," said Mr. Smith, "that in making his choice of Minister of Labor, Sir Wilfrid had in view his own career, and particularly that portion of it at the time Alexander Mackenzie invited him to a seat in his Cabinet at the age of thirty-five. By choosing young Laurier, Alexander Mackenzie enhanced and enriched the Liberal party, and with similar hopes Sir Wilfrid has now chosen Mr. Mackenzie King.

The import of which seems to be that Mr. King is destined soon to go high in the ranks of the Government.

May Put Lock-Masters In Charge.

Ottawa, June 18.—The disabling of the Soo Canal in a few minutes by an engineer's mistake has caused the Department of Canals to consider precautions that will make such an accident impossible again. It is proposed not to allow vessels to pass in or out of the locks under their own steam, but to place them absolutely in control of the lockmasters.

Railroad Accident

A steam pipe on engine No. 1107, blew out at Tweed on Friday last, burning engineer Ed. Williams and fireman M. Riley, slightly. This is the same engine that met with the accident at Smith's Falls recently, when Mr. Thomas Bennett was scalded so severely. Fireman Riley, who was also on the locomotive at that time, is beginning to think that it is a Jonah.—Havelock Standard.

The system of annuities was inaugurated only in September last, and the first few months were necessarily devoted largely to matters of organization. A number of agents and lecturers have been engaged, three in Ontario, two in Quebec and one each in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, while the west has not yet been provided for.

The Department is about to enter upon negotiations with the large manufacturers of the country, suggesting that the purchase of annuities for their employes, or co-operating with the latter in doing so.

THE LOGICAL RESULT

The conditions of corruption into which Montreal civic government has fallen as proved by a multitude of witnesses under oath before the Commission shows what the buying and selling of humanity is bound to come to in the end. It is true that people are met with who laugh at or excuse it. But just here, as the Yankee says, is where the truth comes out. They laugh at or excuse because they are ready to share in it. No one who laughs at or excuses would fail to accept when the opportunity offers. Why should he? Money is money, and his scruples are nil. Whenever a man is found revelling in or excusing the buying and selling of others we may be sure he is only too ready to sell himself. Montreal is so bad that she is a positive laughing stock. The babyishness of it all strikes people even more forcibly than the criminality of it. It is so disgustingly small and mean that the right-minded man can only turn his lip in contempt. It is a "business" reserved for the underworld of prostitution for it is only there that it could be recognised as a desirable occupation. It leads to the taking of a false oath with the assuredness of a true one and the adoption of every other corrupt, rotten and crooked way of attaining an end by other than fair means.

AN INIFICIENT TEACHER

"An inefficient teacher is a curse to the child, a fraud on the public, and a whole 'peck' of trouble to and for himself."—Principal Walker in Peterborough Normal School Review.

Mr. Walker's language does not in any sense overstate the case. Everybody who ever went to school long enough to learn anything of importance, knows how ruinous it is to run up against a poor teacher. It is doubtful, however, if he is any worse than the teacher who has invented some new process of his own. We remember one teacher who had enthusiasm, if not much learning, who "boiled down" the histories of literature, if you please, and read it to the pupils for taking down. It was a horrible waste of time. Hours upon hours of valuable time wasted in writing down what could have been read out of a book to far greater advantage. It is this sort of madness that tells heavily against the thinking pupil, whose horizon becomes limited, and a thing of "shreds and patches." Mr. Walker evidently realizes that "bad" teachers are worse than none, and so they are. The discriminating teacher who guides the young mind and helps it over difficulties and round terrifying obstacles is he who realizes what education really means. The good, old sound teaching of principles with a steady process of drilling or "grinding" back of it all is worth all the fads ever invented, many times over. A few years ago it was related as truly wonderful the number of pupils who "passed" high. It was soon ascertained that they were hollow shams. The bubble burst and then, of course, along came something new.

A NATIONAL DISASTER

It is impossible to suppose that the Montreal Star would publish such a double-headlined article as the following; unless the statements made were warranted yet it cannot but be deplored that the fine reputation of a great Canadian university should be held up to such contempt. According to the statements here made McGill is not only decadent, it is positively on the down-grade. It will probably be found as in the case of Toronto University a few years ago, only there was not so much fuss made about it, that it is merely a question of financial management and that the 'Varsity itself is all right, in which event why publish to the world that which will affect the standing of McGill and of its graduates for years and years to come? It will certainly be a matter of surprise that McGill is so far below Toronto in point of attendance. Toronto is one of the largest universities in the whole world but it is the professors not the students who make a University's reputation and while Toronto is doing well in this respect she has no outstanding man like Dr. Watson of Queen's who alone would give a college a high reputation. It would begin to look as if universities are a very costly means of diffusing knowledge or else that state management with state backing is the only solution. And yet Laval seems to be a success. Why not McGill which with her multitude of wealthy friends has been the champion cried and held up by those opposed to state universities for so long and with such eclat? McGill must not be allowed to impair its usefulness to Canada. Some national effort, if her graduates are not equal to it, should be made before it is too late, before further articles like the following are written which may serve to head off YMCA. subscriptions but will do little else. The question again arises "Has not Canada too many universities?" The answer is, we believe, "Not so that they can be reached by students handily." But naming a governing body and its equipment a university does not make it really one and that is why McGill should not be allowed to pass because of the rising up of new-born rivals.

"Is McGill University being starved by Montreal business men?"

This question was discussed at an informal meeting today of graduates of the university who are now prominent in business circles.

It was claimed that the progress of the university in several important respects was unsatisfactory. It was also said that Toronto University has far surpassed McGill in number of students and other respects. Having now between 3000 and 3500 undergraduates while the little University of Queen's has also gone forward with leaps and bounds and has, it was claimed 1350 or not far from the same as McGill, which not only does not grow appreciably but has a large annual deficit and is losing its staff.

It was stated that a large number of business men had absolutely refused to join the McGill University Club, on the ground that what the old graduates held sacred was not held sacred at McGill. It was said that the starving of McGill was the subject of discussion at a recent gathering of the Canadian Club when an appeal was made for funds, but those present refused to contribute one cent until the university was established upon its proper footing of harmony with the powerful and well disposed community from which it should draw all the strength and resources which are necessary for its life.

On the other side it was argued that the unpopularity of McGill is largely based on superficial causes.

It was said that if the university could be made popular with the business men there would be no lack of financial support. It was possible to raise thousands of dollars in Montreal in a few days for YMCA. extension purposes and there was no good reason if the university was managed as it should be why it should not receive the financial as well as the moral support of not only its old graduates but of the business community generally. Some of those present were in favor of the appointment of a general manager for the institution but the discussion of this matter had to be deferred until a future meeting."—Montreal Star.

Some of our leading Catholic women have come out openly in opposition to the Holy Father's views on the woman question. As might be expected they will have the last word. The Holy Father, however, is not alone in his preference for the old-fashioned woman. Those gabby, would-be politicians have given rise to a tired feeling which is not confined entirely to the spiritual head of Christendom.—The Catholic Register.

A New York scientist has stirred Broadway with the announcement that he has compounded a "jagless whiskey." The prediction is fully made that it will never become a popular beverage. The old-timers and the rounders do not indulge because of the effect of whiskey upon the palate. They are aiming at that won't-go-home-till morning effect and no beverage will attain any degree of popularity which fails to produce that effect. — The Catholic Register.

The religious world—and the world at its best is universally religious—has been reading with much interest Mr. Dawson Burn's paper in the London 'Guardian,' which points out that no attempt has been made to remove the one verbal blot from Bishop Heber's great missionary hymn. The first four lines now read:

From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand,
Where Afric's sunny fountains
Roll down their golden sand.

Gramatically the 'where' of the third lines, Dr. Burns says, connects 'India's coral strand' locally with Afric's sunny fountains.' To avoid this absurd construction, 'from,' he suggests, should precede 'where,' but the metre forbids an additional syllable. The difficulty would, he concludes, be met by a slight change, as under:

From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand,
From Afric's sunny fountains,
That bathe their golden sand.

A 'Westminster' reviewer suggests that a semicolon after 'strand' might get over the difficulty, and certainly 'bath' seem banal after 'roll down.'—The Witness.

We always used to think in the sunny days of our youth not that Afric's fountains were connected with India's coral strand, but that the first three lines were wholy separate and distinct, the fourth line being an amplification of the third. To change is wholly unnecessary if, as in the view of many, it means what it says (poetically) and not what the Witness et al have tortured it into meaning.

A Good Financier

It is often only by death that the world is made aware of some of its most interesting characters. This commonplace applies very remarkably to Charles Morrison, the eccentric multi-millionaire, who recently died, near Reading, England, aged 92.

Mr. Morrison was a man of so strictly retiring and austere a disposition that few outside his business intimates were aware of his enormous wealth, now variously estimated at from ten to fifteen millions—a fortune which will yield the Exchequer in death and succession duties a windfall of something like two and a half million pounds.

In these days of exacting publicity it seems an even more extraordinary feat to have concealed from notoriety a fortune of this vastness than it does to have accumulated it.

The secret of the millionaire's well-preserved obscurity was his consistency in avoiding anything remotely approaching sensationalism in the conduct of his huge finances. Although largely and continuously engaged in the city, he was never tempted into association with those grandiose speculations which have made household words of the names of other great financiers. Adventures in company promoting and market-rigging were never in his line.

His simple method was to buy largely of sound securities when panic or other causes had depressed the market, and to sell when the subsequent reaction showed a respectable profit on the purchase.

In times of panic these large purchases by Mr. Morrison were of enormous service to the Stock Exchange in "stopping the rot." The Times mentions that he is believed to have kept habitually a large sum in gold as a reserve against a time of serious finance at trouble.

Apart from Mr. Morrison's market operations he had important interests in city lands. He owned Basildon House, Finsbury House, and other large blocks of offices, comprising some of the most remunerative properties in the city of London. These alone would provide him with an enormous income. He was also one of the largest landowners in Berkshire, and had big estates in Scotland.

STORY OF A FORTUNE

The fortunes of the house of Morrison were romantically laid by their founder, James Morrison, father of the late multi-millionaire.

The son of a poor Hampshire yeoman, James trudged to London in the early eighteen-hundreds, and seeing a notice in the window of a Cheapside drapery warehouse, applied for and obtained the situation. Mr. James Todd, his employer, liked the lad's industry and perseverance well, and gave him rapid promotion, so that at 25 he was manager.

By this time he had followed the example of many a hero of commercial romances before him and fallen in love with his master's daughter. Mr. Todd favored the suit, and in order to facilitate the marriage, took the young man into partnership.

It was a wise move from every point of view. The marriage was a happy one, and the business developed rapidly into the great firm now known as the Fort Street Warehouse Company.

Mr. Morrison, the elder, entered Parliament as Liberal member for St. Ives, and helped to pass the great Reform Bill. In 1828 he bought the present family seat, Basildon House, near Reading, and there established the famous art collection which his son, with inherited taste and enthusiasm, greatly extended. He died in 1857, worth over four millions sterling, leaving three sons, of whom Charles was the eldest.

Charles never married, and it is understood that the great fortune is divided by the will of the late millionaire among the brother and sister, who are both over 70 and unmarried.

AN ECCENTRIC HOUSEHOLD.

Mr. Charles Morrison, it is not surprising to learn, had his personal eccentricities. It was part of the austere system of his life to avoid publicity in any shape, and notwithstanding that in Basildon Park—which was the seat of the Fane family in the 18th century—he owned a large and beautiful domain, he mixed in society practically not at all. He had no taste for display, and the curious household at Basildon lived with the utmost plainness.

It was one of his peculiarities that he wore clothes, which, if not absolutely shabby, were obviously ready-made, and he kept no carriages of his own, riding—when he did ride—in hired cabs.

For all this, he was not mean. He gave generously in private to charities, and was exceedingly kind to his employees in the city and the country, who are believed to be liberally remembered in his will.

Interesting details of the secluded life led by Mr. Morrison are told by a correspondent. Few people knew him, and none intimately. A great reader, he kept largely to his beautiful house, and would often read until three and four in the morning.

He was, however, widely respected as a splendid landlord. With the exception of four acres, he owned the whole of the parish, and many are the stories that are told of his generosity in dealing with his tenants. On tenant, for instance, who could over seem to do well, never paid rent for 20 years. One who knew Mr. Morrison well said that the old gentleman lost at least £4,000 a year in keeping up the estate.

GAVE AWAY A POUND A DAY.

"All the Morrisons," said the informant, "were quietly generous and they gave at least £1 away a day in the parish in small things. Of Mr. Morrison himself I can safely say that he never refused anything in the way of charity when he was assured of the genuineness of the appeal. Again and again he has handed out £1,000 when asked for something."

And yet, with all his great wealth, his kindly heart, and his store of learning, he neither mixed with any people at Basildon nor any of the county people.

One night, a year or two back, Mr. Morrison got out at Tilehurst, the station before Pangbourne, by mistake. It was rather late, and he walked to an inn a little out, and asked for a trap to drive him to Basildon. The landlord appeared to eye him with great disfavor, and curtly told him that he couldn't have a trap. Mr. Morrison had, of course, only to be identified to have the finest equippage in the place pressed upon him. But his accustomed reserve made him say nothing, and he steadily tramped the whole of the way home in the dark.

A day or two later some on in Basildon heard the story, and, being in Tilehurst, called on the landlord, and asked him if an old man had asked him for a trap a few nights previously. "Yes," said the landlord, "but I wasn't going to let the likes of him have one." "Well," said the other, "it was Mr. Morrison, that was all!" "Lord," said the astounded and disgusted landlord, "I wish I'd known." And he never ceased to regret what he called "his lost opportunity."

New Disease Resembling Chicken pox, Hives and Itch Mistaken For Smallpox

Philadelphia, June 16— Dr. Joseph Goldberger of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital service at Washington is in the city assisting the local health authorities to classify a new disease resembling hives which has broken out here. At first anxiety was caused on account of its similarity to smallpox.

In a statement issued by the Health Department here today it is announced that about one hundred cases have so far been discovered and all of which have been contracted by persons sleeping on new straw mattresses. Only those who slept on the mattresses or handled them freely have been affected. According to the official circular "it is a hive like inflammation of the skin resembling chickenpox ordinary hives and itch." This eruption affects the body and upper parts of the arms and legs and to a slight extent the face.

THE PATROL BOAT WAS AT LINDSAY

Lindsay, June 17.—The new Government steamer "Naiad," which has been launched by the Provincial Government to look after the fisheries on the Kawartha Lakes, was in town today for a short time. The new boat is a trim little steamer, capable of going at a good fast rate. The steamer is making a tour of the lakes at the present time, and was inspected by a large number this morning.

A WAIL FROM LINDSAY

There has not been a leaf stirring in the Midland League this year—not a zephyr to awaken old remembrances. In Peterborough they're striving to operate a city league; in Port Hope they've plowed up the diamond, while in Cobourg and Lindsay the crepe is out and the blinds drawn.—Lindsay Warder.

The above sounds like the growl of a pessimist. Peterborough's city league is booming. Port Hope has a good town league, and amateur baseball is receiving good support at Cobourg. Lindsay alone has been hit with something with a nail on it. Professionalism does not pay in the Midland League. There are not enough fans of the married-variety to make it pay. Amateur baseball, however, gets along nicely if the leagues are manned by good officers.

THIS MAN WAS WELL PAID FOR READING THE BIBLE

Jersey Resident Sorry He Did Not Open the Good Book Thirty-five Years Ago.

New York, June 18—"It pays to read the Bible," solemnly said Steve Marsh yesterday, as he gazed at a pile of green paper representing $1,867.30 in his home in Fairfield, near Caldwell, N.J. "I wish I'd started reading that Bible thirty-five years ago. What wouldn't I've done with all that money in those days!"

And if Auntie Sarah Marsh, who "went beyond" thirty-five years ago, was looking down at Nephew Steve just then he might have heard a spirit voice whisper. "That'll teach you to read the good book always."

Almost 3,000 bills were found, ranging in denomination from 10 cents to $20. The small ones were "shinplasters," which were withdrawn from circulation in the early '70's. The total value of the Bible's treasure may be even larger, as it is possible some of the issues of the 10, 25 or 50 cent currency now command premiums from collectors.

Marsh made his discovery when packing his trunk preparatory to starting to join his son, Steve Marsh, jr., near Denver, Col. He was undecided whether to take the old Bible with him or to leave it with his cousin, Abram Marsh, of Fairfield, with whom he has lived recently. While debating that question, Steve opened the brass clasp of the book for the first time since it has been in his possession. He did not do it to seek spiritual guidance; in fact, his action was merely mechanical.

Then he gasped and the Bible almost fell from his fingers. Reposing on the page given over to births, marriages and deaths lay a one-dollar bill and one of two dollars. Steven's whistle echoed through the house; then he hastily thrust one hand over his puckered lips, and with the other he feverishly fumbled the pages of Scripture.

Bill after bill he uncovered, until the climax came with a twenty-spot resting upon the text, "Cast thy bread upon the waters and it shall return after many days."

The leather-covered, brass-clasped book had belonged to Sarah Marsh, spinster, who died in Newark on April 12, 1874. She willed it to her nephew with about $100 of other property. He had no idea the old Bible was valuable except for its reading matter. Steve is religious, yes, indeed, but this particular Bible was big and cumbersome to handle, and he did not try to study it.

Marsh is about seventy years old. He served as a private in the Thirteenth New Jersey Volunteers in the civil war and for years has had no other support than a pension of $12 a month. His son has often urged him to join him in Colorado, where he owns a farm, and a few days ago the father decided to go. The finding of the monetary manna in his financial wilderness did not interfere with that plan, and Marsh started for Denver yesterday morning.

He took his new-found wealth with him, of course.

Also, he took the Bible, and as he said good-bye to an old chum from the car platform he said solemnly: "Jim, I advise ye to read your Bible. It pays, Jim; it pays."

HEROES OF THE DEEP

Brave Captains Who Have Perished With Their Ships.

A STERN RULE OF THE SEA.

"The Captain of the Vessel Shall Be the Last to Leave," and From This Mandate No Captain Is Exempt. Heroism In Face of Certain Death.

"The captain of the vessel shall be the last to leave."

This heroic sentiment has been exemplified time and again by the brave men who go down to the sea in ships, and to their everlasting honor there is no attempt or desire to shirk the fearful duty and responsibility. So it was that Captain Sealby of the ill fated Republic refused to leave his ship till every man, woman, child and member of his crew had been saved.

"The last to leave!" It is the law, universally asknowledged at sea by officers and men alike as the basis of self respect and honor. From it no captain is exempt.

One of the bravest of these heroes was Chief Officer Paterson of the British King. One day some winters ago he sailed from New York under Captain O'Hagan. Great storms impeded the passage of the ship, and so stupendous was the violence of the waves that they stove in the bow plates, and before the leakage was discovered tons of water rushed into the hold.

Captain O'Hagan told his men to shift the cargo, but barrels and cases were hurtling this way and that, and one of them, driving the captain back against the wall, crushed his leg so severely that he had to be carried to the lifeboat.

For a brief space there was no captain. Then Paterson took command. At a critical moment his strong personality and calm assurance saved the crew from panic. Three boats filled with sailors from the British King were launched in safety, while the new commander stood in silence on the bridge. Lower and lower sank the ill starred ship, and as she heaved and took her final plunge Paterson blew a farewell blast upon his whistle to the fast departing crew.

Quite different, but no less heroic, was the manner in which Captain Griffith of the Atlantic Transport line steamship Mohegan faced death. Though it was scarcely darker than twilight, he had run his vessel on the rocks near the Needles in October, 1898, and it was rapidly sinking. The last glimpse of Captain Griffith showed him standing on the bridge ordering the boats to be lowered in order to save his crew.

Heroic in death, too, was the captain of the oil ship Loodiana, which several years ago was burned at sea. Before thinking of his own safety he saw every man of his crew clear of the doomed vessel, and then it was too late. Foot by foot he was driven forward by the flames till at last he hung over the bow. A tramp steamship came up, but the waters were too rough for the lowering of the boats. Finally the flames compelled him to loosen his hold, and while his ship burned fiercely on he was dashed into the angry seas beneath.

But still more dramatic was the death of Captain Deloncle of the French liner La Bourgogne, sunk in the summer of 1898. As he stood one night upon the bridge a tall bark suddenly loomed out of the darkness and, dealing La Bourgogne a fatal blow, steamed hurriedly away. The men on board went frantic. In a scramble for safety firemen and crew lost their wits, and people ran up and down the deck in wild despair.

Deloncle stood calm amid the tumult. Suddenly he abandoned himself to the dramatic horror of the scene and, seizing the whistle rope, sent into the skies one long, wild, wailing groan. It was Deloncle's last salute.

Perhaps the noblest death of all was that of Captain Craven of the monitor Tecumseh at the attack in August, 1864, on Mobile. The ship was fast sinking. There was not a moment to be lost. At the foot of the ladder leading to the manhole above, the turret of safety, two men met, Captain Craven and his pilot. There would be time for but one to mount. The captain knew it; the pilot knew it. But there was no hesitation. With a smile Captain Craven stepped to one side.

"After you, pilot," he said.

The man sprang up the ladder, and his life was saved, but the brave captain was swept under and carried to destruction by the cruel sea.—London Answers.

Buying Fodder For the Newlyweds.

The newly married couple had just moved into their new home. On the morning after their arrival a baker called to solicit their trade. He found the young wife in the kitchen. After explaining that his wagon delivered once a day the baker asked, "And may we have your trade, madam?"

"Yes," she replied timidly; "we will give you a trial."

"And about how much bread will you want each day?"

"Well, I don't know exactly. You see, there are only two of us." Then doubtfully, "Would five loaves a day be enough, do you think?"—Judge.

WEDGWOOD MARKS.

Ways of Distinguishing Old Specimens of This Beautiful Ware.

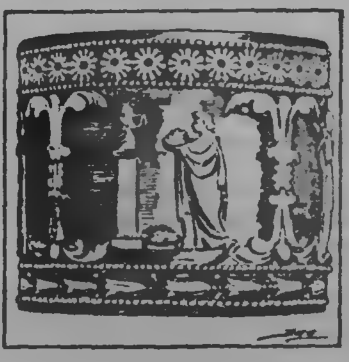
Though Wedgwood is a ware and not a china—if judged by the technical tests that determine the difference between pottery and porcelain—its unique beauty, both in design and coloring, entitles it to a very liberal share of admiration.

And in point of age its precedence is scarcely less than that of Worcester. Dr. Wall opened his potteries in that city in 1751. Eight years later Josiah Wedgwood, a member of a Staffordshire family of potters who were already producing excellent specimens of pottery at Laugton Hall, organized a factory at Newcastle-under-Lyme, afterward endowed with the classical name Etruria, given when the famous representations of ancient ceramics seemed to demand a more appropriate appellation for the place from which they came.

Wedgwood marked his ware with his own name, written in printer's ordinary type and impressed sharply in the clay, and this is the mark to be looked for on the majority of his "jasper" pottery, though an exception to this rule is neither uncommon nor in any way damaging, for, like so many other chinas, there are a great number of first class specimens that bear no mark at all. Other marks to be remembered are a "Wedgwood" printed in transfer red, "Wedgwood and Bentley," three human legs conjoined, and occasionally a "3" or a "%" or a single initial, among which a "K," chiefly found on busts, denotes good pieces of workmanship. Three capital letters, like those which constitute some of the hall marks upon plate, are modern marks entirely.

Wedgwood has not escaped the clutches of the ingenious forger, and collectors must beware of all pieces where Wedgwood is spelled with an "e" between the "g" and "w" and where the words "& Co." are added.

Among the first specimens of work that came from Wedgwood's potteries are pieces of agateware. These are clever imitations of the stone they represent and were no doubt very serviceable additions to the household ware of our ancestors, but their decorative qualities were so extremely meager that the collectors who possess them class them as curiosities rather than ornaments.



A WEDGWOOD STAND.

The cream colored ware with a very soft glaze, known as "queen's ware," deserves more critical attention. It was with this that Wedgwood won himself a prominent position among the fashionable potters of his day and gained permission to style himself "potter to the queen." His presentation breakfast set, offered to Queen Charlotte as a memento to celebrate the birth of one of the royal babies, brought him an order for a dinner set to match it, and when some years afterward he was commissioned to execute an order for the Russian court at the cost of £3,000 he must have felt that his fame was well established.

GELATIN CUSTARDS.

A Simple but Delicious Dessert For the Home Dinner.

Gelatin custards are boiled custards chilled and stiffened with gelatin. When delicately flavored and served with rich cream they are delicious and wholesome. For a coffee jelly prepare a boiled custard with two cups of milk, two egg yolks and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. While it is hot add two tablespoonfuls of gelatin that have been dissolving in a little cold water. Stir into the custard also two or three teaspoonfuls of coffee extract or enough to suit the taste. Set the custards away to cool until ready to serve. Just as they are becoming hard the whipped whites of the eggs may be stirred through them and well beaten in. They are an improvement, but not essential. To prepare coffee extract pour about a tablespoonful of boiling water over one or two teaspoonfuls of powdered coffee and squeeze it through muslin, repeating, if necessary, two or three times. It should be very strong to make a good dessert.

Flavorings of wine, vanilla, orange, lemon, almond, etc., may be used instead of coffee. Preserved ginger cut in tiny strips and boiled with the custard is sometimes used as a flavoring. Only enough should be used to give a delicate flavor.

These gelatin custards are like blancmange, the only difference being the egg yolks, which turn them from white to yellow.

A Housekeeping Hint.

The housekeeper who cannot afford a covered garbage pail of zinc can hide the unsightliness of her leftovers by an improvised cover. This can be made of a big bushel or half bushel fruit basket turned upside down and neatly pasted with oilcloth, which can easily be kept clean. The largest size of screw hook is fastened in the bottom—rather, the inverted top—for a handle.

MEMBERS OF THE COUNTY COUNCIL ON INSPECTION TRIP

Pleasant All-Day Trip to Buckhorn and Other Points—Bridges and Dam Were Inspected.

The County Council went on a trip of inspection yesterday and had a long day which was intermingled with business and pleasure. The object of the trip was to see the bridge and dam at Buckhorn which the Dominion Government has just completed, the Gannon Narrow bridge and Ball Lake, where it is proposed to build the new float bridge.

The party was composed of Warden R. M Scott and his council, and Aldermen Phelan and Buller of the City Council, Mr E A Peck, and E. M Elliott and Wm. Galken of Apsley.

They left the city at 7.30 in the morning in two busses and drove to Chemong park where they took the Otonabee Navigation Company's steamer Manita, at 9.30. It was raining quite heavily when the boat arrived at the wharf but the party of 20 got down in the cabin and were quite comfortable.

The Manita is in charge of Capt. Johnston and Mr S R. Pearson as mate and Mr. Pearson is one of the best boatmen on the Kawartha lakes. He thoroughly understands a crowd that is out for business and pleasure and he made himself very popular with all on board. The Manita is a very trim little boat and should be in great demand this season.

The trip from Chemong to Buckhorn was made in good time and no stops were made between the two points. Upon arrival at Buckhorn, the party went ashore and had dinner at Eastwood's hotel.

Then the trip was continued to Gannon's Narrows and on to Bobcaygeon where a stop of three quarters of an hour was made, which allowed the passengers to go ahead and see the village. Shortly after 4 o'clock the trip to Chemong was commenced, and upon arrival at the park Warden Scott and his followers had tea at the hotel where Host Brown furnished an excellent menu which was greatly enjoyed.

From Chemong the party returned to the city by bus, arriving here about 8.50 o'clock.

Although the day was wet and a raw wind was blowing, the trip was nevertheless one of the most successful and enjoyable that has ever gone around the lakes. It was a business trip pure and simple but Warden Scott and the County Councillors are a lot of fellows who can take a great deal of pleasure even out of business and the few guests along with them were delighted. Everyone was in the best of spirits and the disagreeable weather had little effect on them.

Warden Scott looked after his guests in splendid style and left nothing undone which would add to the pleasure of the outing. He was ably assisted by the County Clerk, E M Elliott, who is always on hand when needed. All the councillors joined in having a good time and they had it.

CITY TO HAVE LOWEST FIRE RATE OF ANY IN THE PROVINCE

Chief Howard Spent Yesterday in Toronto Conferring With Underwriters—Inspectors Were Well Pleased With Courteous Treatment Received Here During Their Visit.

On Wednesday, Chief Howard received a communication from the secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters Association requesting him to go to Toronto to confer with that body in reference to the new rating for the city of Peterborough.

The Chief went up yesterday and met the Board and with them discussed the general situation. It is learned that the Underwriters were well pleased with the efficiency of the fire fighting appliances as they are at the present time with one exception. They are of the opinion that the permanent staff of firemen should be increased to sixteen men. They also stated that several of the larger buildings did not altogether meet with their approval. There are small defects, that will effect other buildings in the same block but they were sure that the citizens would co-operate with the Chief and have the defects remedied.

It is understood that Peterborough is to get the best rating of any city in the province and this news should be heard with pleasure by the citizens. It speaks well for the up to date fire department which has made a very creditable showing since its inauguration.

The inspectors who recently visited Peterborough in connection with the re-rating were well pleased with the courteous treatment they received at the hands of the city officials and last night Chief Howard was entertained to dinner at the King Edward Hotel and they expressed to him their appreciation.

NORMAL SCHOOL CLOSED AND THE STUDENTS AND TEACHERS TAKE AN OUTING

The Peterborough Normal School closed for the season yesterday and not till September rolls around will the teachers and students assemble again at the stately institution of learning on Benson street. And with possibly one or two exceptions the students who will gather in the autumn will be an entirely new lot. Those who are successful in their examinations will not return and it is expected that a large percentage will pass. The examinations were completed yesterday but it will be several weeks before the results are known.

To-day the students and teachers are enjoying a trip to Stony Lake and tomorrow the majority of the students will leave for their homes.

COUNTY COUNCIL MOVING TO GET LARGER GRANT FROM GOV'T

The Council Will Communicate With Other Councils for Purpose of Securing Co-operation in Getting Larger Grant From Ontario Government for County Roads—A Wise Move That is Deserving of General Support.

The County Council of Peterborough in its session this morning made an important move in the direction of securing increased aid from the Ontario Government for county roads. It is felt that the proportion of the present government grant, which is one dollar for every two of the county's is not enough to secure the best and promptest results, especially in view of the large amount of provincial money that is being spent in new undertakings in Northern Ontario and elsewhere, in some cases of a more or less speculative character. While there is no objection to New Ontario development, more attention ought to be paid to development here at home, where the ultimate burden of government chiefly falls. It is felt here and in other parts of the province that the grant should be at least dollar for dollar, and with this end in view correspondence will be opened with other counties and a general deputation organized to wait upon the government. The Review heartily endorses the plan. It is too much to expect of extensive counties like Peterborough, Victoria or Hastings that they shall be called upon to develop their own sparsely-settled districts, while so much government money is being spent on roads to Gowganda, etc. A general revision of government grants would add greatly to the welfare of the counties and relieve the hard-working settler of a burden that is disproportionately large. It is thought that the government will be pleased to hear representations on the subject with a view to larger grants.

This afternoon the committees are at work.

WHY HE COMPARED NEW YORK TO SODOM

Dr. McNicholl Gives Figures Showing Alcoholic Habit Among Children in the Schools

The following signed statement was given out last night by Dr. T. Alexander MacNicholl—

"In view of the publicity that has attended the reading of my paper on 'The Relation of Alcohol to Child Life,' and the varied accounts of what that paper contained, it seems proper to me to make the following statement:

"The paper was presented to the American Medical Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics—a society composed of medical educators and investigators from every section of the United States, and reported my studies of 30,000 children of all ages from infancy to nineteen years. A few of the facts embodied in the paper are as follows:

These studies reveal conditions existing in some sections of our great American metropolis that parallel the historic depravity of ancient Sodom; conditions with a growing disregard for legal restraint that are capable of an extension that would endanger the integrity of our municipal life.

"58 per cent. drink some form of alcoholic beverage occasionally or at regular intervals; 37 per cent. drink one glass of beer a week to five glasses of beer a day; 21 per cent. drink wine or spirits. In some groups the percentage of occasional and regular drinkers runs as high as 79 per cent. Of these attending schools 46 per cent. are backward in their studies.

"The following conclusions may be drawn from my studies of children:

"First—Alcohol in the form of beer and spirits does not overcome the disturbances of nutrition due to a bad hygenic environment.

"Second—Alcohol tends to lessen all the bodily forces, mental, moral and physical.

"Third—The heaviest burden entailed by indulgence in alcoholic beverages is not borne by the drinker, but by his innocent and debilitated children

"My report was inted solely for scientific investigators, whose co-operation I requested in a more exhaustive and comprehensive study.

"T. MAX MacNICHOLL.

"No. 101 West Sixty-sixth street, New York City."

"Where did you conduct your investigation of the 30,000 children—in New York?" Dr. MacNicholl was asked.

"Principally in New York," answered Dr. MacNicholl.

"How? Through the Board of Education or the Health Department?"

"No. I conducted a house to house investigation in person, going from house to house and examining children. You see, the Board of Education cannot inquire into the family life and habits of the school children."

"City Superintendent of the Public Schools Maxwell said he did not know you, yet you have been conducting an examination of a large number of the school children?"

"Dr. Maxwell knows me, all right. There is a reason why all these persons say they do not know me. It will come out later. If I were to tell all I have found out in my investigations, which I have been conducting for fifteen years, the people of New York would receive a terrible shock. The time will come."

LINDSAY PAPER DENIES STORY

The Post has been informed that there is no truth whatever in the statement published in Wednesday's issue to the effect that Mr. John McLennan had tendered his resignation as Sheriff of the county.

The information was received at a late hour on Wednesday—too late, in fact, to permit of enquiries being made and from a source which was considered reliable and trustworthy. The Peterborough Examiner published practically the same despatch as that which appeared in this papper, but Sheriff McLennan informed the Post this morning that there was no truth whatever in the despatch received.—Lindsay Post.

DECORATION DAY ON JULY 8th

Oddfellows Will Decorate Graves on the Second Thursday in July

The Otonabee and Peterborough Lodges of the I.O.O.F. have decided to hold decoration day on Thursday, July 8th. This date is later than last year and is on account of the cool state of the weather which has affected the growth of flowers. ## TWO GOOD CITY LEAGUE GAMES ON SATURDAY

Strathconas and T. A. S. at 2 o'Clock—West Ends and Park Street at 3:30—All Teams Will be Strong.

There will be something doing every minute at the city league games at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon. The Strathconas and T.A.S. come together in the first game at two o'clock and the dope calls for the Straths to win. The players are aware that they have a strong team to overcome, but nevertheless are confident that they can put the T.A.S. team away. But Ab. Quinlan's bunch are not saying much about their chances, although they expect to win handily. Both teams will have practically the same lineups as in the previous games.

The second contest between the West Ends and Park street should result in some classy ball being played. Notwithstanding their defeat at the hands of the T.A.S. last Saturday, the West Ends will go on to the field with the idea that they can and will take the measure of the South Enders. They have been hard at practice this week and are eager for the game. The Park street team, however, can't see it that way, but will be right in it from the start to the finish and expect to come out with the big end of the score.

The popular prices should induce a big crowd of fans to be on hand to make a big noise and encourage the players. There are no other attractions on and an enjoyable afternoon may be spent by taking in the games.

The teams will be;—

T.A.S.—Battery, Quinlan and McFadden, infielders, O'Brien, Flaherty, O'Brien, Doherty; outfielders, Callaghan, Derocher, O'Brien.

Strathconas—Battery, Hickey, Ferguson, Ryan and Wilson, infielders, Healip, Weatherstone, Kendrey, Craig; outfielders, Shaw, Wettlaufer, Guerin, Curtis.

Park street—Battery, Dusty and McDonald; infielders, Coughlin, Wareham Davidson, Guerin; outfielders, J. Pilling, O'Brien, T. Pilling.

West End—Battery, Kirn and Carton; infielders, Rose, Halpin, Minorgan, Dobson; outfielders, Gibson, Craig Fallon.

OUTSIDE BALL TEAM MAY BE HERE FOR DOMINION DAY

In all probability there will be an outside ball team here on Dominion day to clash with a picked nine from the four city league teams. A strong team can be selected from the city leaguers, and if a fast nine is brought here the fans will see some lively ball. It is proposed to bring a team from Toronto, Cobourg or Port Hope, and if suitable arrangements can be made a double header will likely be played at Riverside Park.

A meeting of the executive of the city league is called for Monday night to consider the matter.

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

STOLEN BASES.

A stolen base shall be credited to the baserunner whenever he advances a base awarded by a base hit, a put out, a fielding or battery error, subject to the following exceptions;

In event of a double steal being attempted from bases one and two, to bases two and three, whether either is thrown out shall not be credited with a stolen base.

In event of a base runner being touched out after sliding over a base, he shall not be regarded as having stolen the base in question.

In event of a base runner making his start to steal a base, prior to a battery error he shall be credited with a stolen base.

In event of a palpable muff of a ball thrown by the catcher, when the base runner is clearly blocked, the infielder making the muff shall be charged with an error and the base runner shall not be credited with a stolen base.

Below is the estimated salary of some of the stars of the baseball game;—

| | |
|---|---|
| Crawford | $4000 |
| Wagner | 5000 |
| Matthewson, p | 6000 |
| Walsh, p, | 5000 |
| Donovan, p | 4800 |
| Bradley, 3b | 3500 |
| Lajoie, 2b | 7000 |
| Sullivan, c | 4500 |
| Criger, c | 4500 |
| Chase, 1b | 4500 |
| Stone, lf | 4000 |
| Cobb, rf | 5000 |

Jerry Edmunds is always in the game for Winnipeg. When not catching he plays centre field as his batting helps the team considerable.

The spitball is fast dying out in the Southern league and players in that organization think it will be a matter of only a couple of years until the big league flingers drop it from their repertoire.

Cleveland pitchers have made a new record.

Addie Joss, pitching against his old hoodoo the Philadelphia Athletics, held them down to one hit.

"Cy" Young, pitching against his old comrades, the Boston Red Sox, held them to two hits.

"Heinie" Berger, twirling against the same team, allowed the Bostonians three hits.

Six hits in three games and the record was made—one, two, three, just like that.

Pitcher Barry who officiates on the mound for Providence is the aspiring young man who on a never to be forgotten occasion essayed to pitch for Cobourg against Peterborough, Ont, in the championship game of the Midland League. Barry had about as much support as a one-legged horse and had an off day to boot, and Peterborough won the game. Ever since they have talked of nothing else but that game in the cross-roads store in Peterborough—Lindsay Warder.

"Bull" Durham lost the game yesterday by his errors. Rudolph replaced him in the seventh. The score was 4—3.

The leafs are down again in fourth place.

Winnipeg leads in the Western Canada Baseball league with a percentage of .621. Edmonton, for whom Murphy and Burridge are playing, stand second last.

RUNNING

KERR SHOULD WIN

Two weeks from Saturday, Bobby Kerr and Reg Walker will meet in the English championships and athletic critics are beginning to dope out the race already. Of course, every Canadian and many Englishmen think that Kerr will trim the South African in both the 100 and 220 yards events. The Hamilton sprinter has the furlong event at his mercy if past performances count for anything, and the real race will likely be in the 100 yards event. Walker's defeat since his arrival in England makes it look as though he was not at his best form while Kerr was never better. There is little to choose between the two men but one thing in Kerr's favor is the fact that he will meet Walker under much better conditions than he did in the Olympic games. At that time he was running a heat in the 100 metres and a heat in the 200 metres each day and had a couple of hard handicap races before the games opened. He will be at his best this time and it looks as though the South African was in for a trimming.

GOT PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE ECLIPSE

Rev. Dr. Marsh Got Two Pictures Last Evening—An Interesting Sight

Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville, of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society gave the Review some interesting details of last evening's partial eclipse of the sun, which was watched with interest by Peterborough people. The exact moment for the eclipse in Springville was 6.51.31. The first visible contact was observed at 6.51.28. The sky being cloudy at noon Dr Marsh had not the opportunity of correcting his watch hence the time may have been two seconds astray.

While the sun was too low for good photography Rev Dr Marsh succeeded in getting two fairly good photographs of the eclipse with the assistance of his five-inch telescope, exposing one plate at 7.10 and the second at 7.20. The image on the plate is 5 1-2 inches in diameter.

Dr Marsh's son, James while fishing on the river succeeded in obtaining three photographs of the eclipse, with a 5 by 7 camera, demonstrating what can be done even with a small camera.

The eclipse was of little scientific value in this latitude being only partial while the sun being so low, the observer was not able to note the lunar hills owing to a refraction interfering with the keenness of definition while the sun was obscured before · · shadows had reached the spot. Hence no comparison could be made between the density of the shadow of the moon and sun spots

COURT CASES AT LAKEFIELD

Magistrate Edmison Disposed of Several Cases on Tuesday

Eddie McKay, a boy who said he was 11 years old last birthday in November, was charged with stealing $39.00 from W. J. Little. The boy, whose parents are both dead, lives with Mr. Little in the village. Last Monday Mr. Little found that his desk had been opened and the money taken. At first the boy denied having done it, but afterwards admitted that he had taken the money and had spent it with other young boys. He pleaded guilty before the Magistrate and a conviction was made against him. The Magistrate told him that he could have him brought before him at any time and pass sentence, and advised him to change his conduct.

A complaint against another boy, Charlie Shannon, for having bird's eggs in his possession was then taken up. Young Shannon was defended by Mr. Langley, and there were many sharp passages at arms between the counsel and the Magistrate. Shannon was fined $1.90, but without costs.

Mr. Langley was present also to defend W. Webster, but it appeared that there was no information against him.

Mr. J. F. Lillicrap, who has been appointed a Justice of the Peace, sat on the bench with the Magistrate and assisted him in dealing with the cases.

Halley's Comet

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I noticed a short letter in the Review of yesterday, signed by "Star Gazer," who has evidently been looking to the local Royal Astronomical Society to publish some information about Halley's comet. It does seem the duty and privilege of that body to give the public reliable data in advance of such occurrences as the return of this remarkable comet, which is looked for in the spring of 1910.

This most celebrated, although not the largest, comet, is named after Edmund Halley, second Astronomer Royal of England, who calculated its elements from its perihelion passage in 1682, when it appeared in great splendor with a tail 30 degrees in length. He was led to conclude its identity with the great comets of 1531 and 1607, whose elements he had also ascertained. The intervals of these successive apparitions being 75 and 76 years, he was led to predict its reappearance in 1759. Several astronomers calculated the amount of influence exerted upon its body by other planets, retarding its motion and delaying its approach to the sun, which actually occurred on March 12th of that year.

Its next return was predicted to within a few days, by four of the greatest geometers of the time—Within 1 degree of the place assigned it for the 5th of August, 1835, by M. Rosenburg. At this time, however, it had decreased to 20 degrees in length, and finally shrunk to 3 degrees and disappeared on May 5th, 1836.

It will be seen as an evening star, until lost in the sun's rays, about the first week in May of next year. On the 14th of May it will rise one hour before the sun and become a conspicuous object in the morning twilight. It will be at its descending node on the ecliptic, on the morning of May 16th. These dates are the time when the comet will be visible to the naked eye, but it will be visible through telescopes much earlier in the year.

From what has been said it does not seem reasonable to expect that Halley's comet will be so large or splendid in appearance as when it last came into the neighborhood of our earth. And this suggests some questions. Are those bodies thrown off from the sun in the first place?

Do they become divided and form smaller comets when near the sun?

Or, is a certain amount of their substance absorbed by the sun, thus disappearing from view?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,
Yours truly,
S. W. LOWRY.

While despondent, a young married woman named Leask, attempted suicide in the Red River near Winnipeg.

Mrs. Stevens, of Rosebank, Man., was fatally burned while lighting a coal oil stove.

Book Shower For Bride.

A book shower for the literary bride is a delight, for, as a writer says, such exquisite and appropriate little volumes can be bought that a book shower can be made one of the most enjoyable functions in honor of the prospective bride.

A literary luncheon can be served as a part of the affair. For the place cards have a card on which is pasted the portrait of a well known author, each girl's favorite, if possible, with a quotation from his works bearing upon the all important wedding ceremony soon to be celebrated. These pictures can be found in magazines or book catalogues. On the menu could figure "Lays of Ancient Rome" (eggs in some form), "The Redskins" (lobsters), "Lamb's Works" (chops, of course), "Coffee and Repartee," "The Fruit of the Tree" and other dishes with a literary flavor to their names. The bride's preference in the choice of books would, of course, be deferred to. The books may be given after the luncheon in an artistic book holder or piled upon the table. Lucky the bride who is fortunate enough to have such a shower.

Playhouse For a Child.

The small wooden fences used by many mothers to keep the kiddies in bounds are well known. Not so familiar is a miniature play room invented by one young mother who objected to having her child's toys scattered all over the room.

She bought a large box and had the sides cut down to allow it to go under the bed. The box was put on rollers so it could be easily moved.

The inside was lined with chintz that could be readily taken out when soiled. On the upright sides of the box was white muslin, to which were pasted all sorts of gay pictures and animals that children love. When finished this miniature picture gallery was given a thin coat of varnish so it could be wiped off when soiled. The baby's toys were inside.

When baby was deposited in his playhouse he was out of harm's way and could amuse himself for hours. When he was through playing all that was necessary was to push the box under the bed, where it was hidden by the valance.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

"Had he hired him without a recommendation? He would not be likely to, yet the page was clear of all reference; only the name and the date. But the date! You have already noted its significance, and later he did too. The day of the Ramsdell ball! The day of the great murder! As he recalled the incidents of that day he understood why the record of Wellgood's name was unaccompanied by the usual reference. It had been a difficult day all round. The function was an important one and the weather bad. There was, besides, an unusual shortage in his number of assistants. Two men had that very morning been laid up with sickness, and when this able looking, self confident Wellgood presented himself for immediate employment he took him out of hand with the merest glance at what looked like a very satisfactory reference.

"Later, he had intended to look up this reference, which he had been careful to preserve by sticking it, along with other papers, on his spike file. But in the distractions following the untoward events of the evening he had neglected to do so, feeling perfectly satisfied with the man's work and general behavior. Now it was a different thing. The man had left him summarily, and he felt impelled to hunt up the person who had recommended him and see whether this was the first time that Wellgood had repaid good treatment with bad. Running through the papers with which his file was now full he found that the one he sought was not there. This roused him in good earnest, for he was certain that he had not removed it himself and there was no one else who had the right to do so. He suspected the culprit, a young lad who occasionally had access to his desk. But this boy was no longer in the office. He had dismissed him for some petty fault the previous week, and it took him several days to find him again. Meantime his anger grew and when he finally came face to face with the lad he accused him of the suspected trick with so much vehemence that the inevitable happened, and the boy confessed. This is what he acknowledged. He had taken the reference off the file, but only to give it to Wellgood himself, who had offered him money for it. When asked how much money, the boy admitted that the sum was ten dollars—an extraordinary amount from a poor man for so simple a service, if the man merely wished to secure his reference for future use; so extraordinary that Mr. Jones grew more and more pertinent in his inquiries, eliciting finally what he surely could not have hoped for in the beginning—the exact address of the party referred to in the paper he had stolen, and which, for some reason, the boy remembered. It was an uptown address, and, as soon as the caterer could leave his business, he took the elevated and proceeded to the specified street and number.

"Miss Van Arsdale, a surprise awaited him, and awaited us when he told the result of his search. The name attached to the recommendation had been 'Hiram Sears, Steward.' He did not know of any such man—perhaps you do. But when he reached the house from which the recommendation was dated, he saw that it was one of the great houses of New York, though he could not at the instant remember who lived there. But he soon found out. The first passerby told him. Miss Van Arsdale, perhaps you can do the same. The number was — Eighty-sixth street."

"—!" I repeated, quite aghast. "Why, Mr. Fairbrother himself! The husband of"—

"Exactly so, and Hiram Sears, whose name you may have heard mentioned at the inquest, though for a very good reason he was not there in person, is his steward and general factotum."

"Oh! And it was he who recommended Wellgood?"

"Yes."

"And did Mr. Jones see him?"

"No. The house, you remember, is closed. Mr. Fairbrother on leaving town gave his servants a vacation. His steward he took with him—that is, they started together. But we hear no mention made of him in our telegrams from Santa Fe. He does not seem to have followed Mr. Fairbrother into the mountains."

"You say that in a peculiar way," I remarked.

"Because it has struck us peculiarly. Where is Sears now? And why did he not go on with Mr. Fairbrother when he left home with every apparent intention of accompanying him to the Placide mine? Miss Van Arsdale, we were impressed with this fact when we heard of Mr. Fairbrother's lonely trip from where he was taken ill to his mine outside of Santa Fe, but we have only given it its due importance since hearing what has come to us today.

The boy confessed.

"Miss Van Arsdale," continue the inspector as I looked up quickly, "I am going to tell you what our men have learned about this Sears. As I have said before, it is but forestalling the reporters by a day, and it may help you to understand why I sent you such peremptory orders to stop when your whole heart was fixed on an attempt by which you hoped to right Mr. Durand. We cannot afford to disturb so distinguished a person as the one you have under your eye, while the least hope remains of fixing this crime elsewhere. And we have such hope. This man, this Sears, is by no means the simple character one would expect from his position.

"Considering the short time we have had (it was only yesterday that Jones found his way into this office), we have unearthed some very interesting facts in his regard. His devotion to Mr. Fairbrother was never any secret, and we knew as much about that the day after the murder as we do now. But the feelings with which he regarded Mrs. Fairbrother—well, that is another thing—and it was not till last night we heard that the attachment which bound him to her was of the sort which takes no account of youth or age, fitness or unfitness. He was no Adonis, and old enough, we are told, to be her father; but for all that we have found several persons who can tell strange stories of the persistence with which his eager old eyes would follow her whenever chance threw them together during the time she remained under her husband's roof, and others who relate, with even more avidity, how, after her removal to apartments of her own, he used to spend hours in the adjoining park just to catch a glimpse of her figure as she crossed the sidewalk on her way to and from her carriage. Indeed, his senseless, almost senile passion for this magnificent beauty became a byword in some mouths, and it only escaped being mentioned at the inquest from respect to Mr. Fairbrother, who had never recognized this weakness in his steward, and from its lack of visible connection with her horrible death and the stealing of her great jewel. Nevertheless, we have a witness now—it is astonishing how many witnesses we can scare up by a little effort, who never thought of coming forward themselves—who can swear to having seen him one night shaking his fist at her retreating figure as she stepped haughtily by him into her apartment house. This witness is sure that the man he saw thus gesticulating was Sears, and he is sure the woman was Mrs. Fairbrother. The only thing he is not sure of is how his own wife will feel when she hears that he was in that particular neighborhood on that particular evening, when he was evidently supposed to be somewhere else." And the inspector laughed.

"Is the steward's disposition a bad one," I asked, "that this display of feeling should impress you so much?"

"I don't know what to say about that yet. Opinions differ on this point. His friends speak of him as the mildest kind of a man, who without native executive skill could not manage the great household he has in charge. His enemies—and we have unearthed a few—say, on the contrary, that they have never had any confidence in his quiet ways; that these were not in keeping with the fact of his having been a California miner in the early fifties.

"You can see I am putting you very nearly where we are ourselves. Nor do I see why I should not add that this passion of the seemingly subdued but really hotheaded steward for a woman, who never showed him anything but what he might call an insulting indifference, struck us as a clew to be worked up, especially after we received this answer to a telegram we sent late last night to the nurse who is caring for Mr. Fairbrother in New Mexico."

He handed me a small yellow slip, and I read:

The steward left Mr. Fairbrother at El Moro. He has not heard from him since.
ANNETTA LA SERRA.
For Abner Fairbrother.

"At El Moro?" I cried. "Why, that was long enough ago"—

"For him to have reached New York before the murder. Exactly so, if he took advantage of every close connection."

CHAPTER XIV.

I CAUGHT my breath sharply. I did not say anything. I felt that I did not understand the inspector sufficiently yet to speak. He seemed to be pleased with my reticence. At all events, his manner grew even kinder as he said:

"This Sears is a witness we must have. He is being looked for now, high and low, and we hope to get some clew to his whereabouts before night—that is, if he is in this city. Meanwhile we are all glad—I am sure you are also—to spare so distinguished a gentleman as Mr. Grey the slightest annoyance."

"And Mr. Durand? What of him in this interim?"

"We will have to await developments. I see no other way, my dear."

It was kindly said, but my head drooped. This waiting was what was killing him and killing me. The inspector saw and gently patted my hand.

"Come," said he, "you have head enough to see that it is never wise to force matters." Then, possibly with an intention of rousing me, he remarked: "There is another small fact which may interest you. It concerns the waiter, Wellgood, recommended, as you will remember, by this Sears. In my talk with Jones it leaked out as a matter of small moment, and so it was to him, that this Wellgood was the waiter who ran and picked up the diamond after it fell from Mr. Grey's hand."

"Ah!"

"This may mean nothing—it meant nothing to Jones—but I inform you of it because there is a question I want to put to you in this connection. You smile."

"Did I?" I meekly answered. "I do not know why."

This was not true. I had been waiting to see why the inspector had so honored me with all these disclosures, almost with his thoughts. Now I saw. He desired something in return.

"You were on the scene at this very moment," he proceeded, after a brief contemplation of my face, "and you must have seen this man when he lifted the jewel and handed it back to Mr. Grey. Did you remark his features?"

"No, sir; I was too far off. Besides, my eyes were on Mr. Grey."

"That is a pity. I was in hopes you could satisfy me on a very important point."

"What point is that, Inspector Dalzell?"

"Whether he answered the following description." And, taking up another paper, he was about to read it aloud to me, when an interruption occurred. A man showed himself at the door whom the inspector no sooner recognized than he seemed to forget me in his eagerness to interrogate him. Perhaps the appearance of the latter had something to do with it. He looked as if he had been running or had been the victim of some extraordinary adventure. At all events, the inspector arose as he entered and was about to question him when he remembered me, and, casting about for some means of ridding himself of my presence without injury to my feelings, he suddenly pushed open the door of an adjoining room and requested me to step inside while he talked a moment with this man.

Of course I went, but I cast him an appealing look as I did so. It evidently had its effect, for his expression changed as his hand fell on the doorknob. Would he snap the lock tight, and so shut me out from what concerned me as much as it did any one in the whole world, or would he recognise my anxiety—the necessity I was under of knowing just the ground I was standing on—and let me hear what this man had to report?

I watched the door. It closed slowly, too slowly to latch. Would he catch it anew by the knob? No; he left it thus, and, while the crack was hardly perceptible, I felt confident that the least shake of the floor would widen it and give me the opportunity I sought. But I did not have to wait for this. The two men in the office I had just left began to speak and, to my unbounded relief, were sufficiently intelligible even now to warrant me in giving them my fullest attention.

After some expressions of astonishment on the part of the inspector as to the plight in which the other presented himself, the latter broke out:

"I've just escaped death! I'll tell you about that later. What I want to tell you now is that the man we want is in town. I saw him last night or his shadow, which is the same thing. It was in the house in Eighty-sixth street, the house they all think closed. He came in with a key and"—

"Wait! You have him?"

"No, it's a long story, sir"—

"Tell it!"

The tone was dry. The inspector was evidently disappointed.

"Don't blame me till you hear," said the other. "He is no common crook. This is how it was: You wanted the suspect's photograph and a specimen of his writing. I knew no better place to look for them than in his own room in Mr. Fairbrother's house. I accordingly got the necessary warrant and late last evening undertook the job. I went alone—I was always an egotistical chap, more's the pity—and with no further precaution than a passing explanation to the officer I met at the corner I hastened up the block to the rear entrance on Eighty-seventh street. There are three doors to the Fairbrother house, as you probably know, two on Eighty-sixth street (the large front one and a small one connecting directly with the turret stairs) and one on Eighty-seventh street. It was to the latter I had a key. I do not think any one saw me go in. It was raining, and such people as went by were more concerned in keeping their umbrellas properly over their heads than in watching men skulking about in doorways.

"I got in, then, all right, and, being careful to close the door behind me, went up the first short flight of steps to what I knew must be the main hall. I had been given a plan of the interior, and I had studied it more or less before starting out, but I knew that I should get lost if I did not keep to the rear staircase, at the top of which I expected to find the steward's room. There was a faint light in the house, in spite of its closed shutters and tightly drawn shades, and having a certain dread of using my torch, knowing my weakness for pretty things and how hard it would be for me to pass so many fine rooms without looking in, I made my way up stairs, with no other guide than the handrail. When I had reached what I took to be the third floor, I stopped. Finding it very dark, I first listened—a natural instinct with us—then I lit up and looked about me.

"I was in a large hall, empty as a vault and almost as desolate. Blank doors met my eyes in all directions, with here and there an open passageway. I felt myself in a maze. I had no idea which was the door I sought, and it is not pleasant to turn unaccustomed knobs in a shut up house at midnight, with the rain pouring in torrents and the wind making pandemonium in a half dozen great chimneys.

"But it had to be done, and I went at it in regular order till I came to a little narrow one opening on the turret stair. This gave me my bearings. Sears' room adjoined the staircase. There was no difficulty in spotting the exact door now and, merely stopping to close the opening I had made to this little staircase, I crossed to this door and flung it open. I had been right in my calculations. It was the steward's room, and I made at once for the desk."

"And you found?"—

"Mostly locked drawers. But a key on my bunch opened some of these and my knife the rest. Here are the specimens of his handwriting which I collected. I doubt if you will get much out of them. I saw nothing compromising in the whole room, but then I hadn't time to go through his trunks, and one of them looked very interesting—old as the hills and"—

"You hadn't time? Why hadn't you time? What happened to cut it short?"

"Well, sir, I'll tell you." The tone in which this was said roused me if it did not the inspector. "I had just come from the desk which had disappointed me, and was casting a look about the room, which was as bare as my hand of everything like ornament—I might almost say comfort—when I heard a noise which was not that of swishing rain or even gusty wind—these had not been absent from my ears for a moment. I didn't like that noise; it had a sneakish sound, and I shut my light off in a hurry. After that I crept hastily out of the room, for I don't like a setup in a trap.

"It was darker than ever now in the hall, or so it seemed, and as I backed away I came upon a jog in the wall behind which I crept. For the sound I had heard was no fancy. Some one else besides myself was in the house, and that some one was coming up the little turret stair, striking matches as he approached. Who could it be? A detective from the district attorney's office? I hardly thought so. He would have been provided with something better than matches to light his way. A burglar? No, not on the third floor of a house as rich as this. Some fellow on the force, then, who had seen me come in and, by some trick of his own, had managed to follow me? I would see. Meantime I kept my place behind the jog and watched, not knowing which way the intruder would go.

"Whoever he was, he was evidently astonished to see the turret door ajar, for he lit another match as he threw it open and, though I failed to get a glimpse of his figure, I succeeded in getting a very good one of his shadow. It was one to arouse a detective's instinct at once. I did not say to myself, this is the man I want, but I did say, this is nobody from headquarters, and I steadied myself for whatever might turn up.

"The first thing that happened was the sudden going out of the match which had made this shadow visible. The intruder did not light another. I heard him move across the floor with the rapid step of one who knows his way well, and the next minute a gas jet flared up in the steward's room, and I knew that the man the whole force was looking for had trapped himself.

"You will agree that it was not my duty to take him then and there without seeing what he was after. He was thought to be in the eastern states or south or west, and he was here. But why here? That is what I knew you would want to know, and it was just what I wanted to know myself. So I kept my place, which was good enough, and just listened, for I could not see.

"What was his errand? What did he want in this empty house at midnight? Papers first and then clothes. I heard him at his desk, I heard him in the closet and afterward pottering in the old trunk I had been so anxious to look into myself. He must have brought the key with him, for it was no time before I heard him throwing out the contents in a wild search for something he wanted in a great hurry. He found it sooner than you would believe and began throwing the things back, when something happened. Expectedly or unexpectedly, his eye fell on some object which roused all his passions, and he broke into loud exclamations ending in groans. Finally he fell to kissing this object with a fervor suggesting rage and a rage suggesting tenderness carried to the point of agony. I have never heard the like. My curiosity was so aroused that I was on the point of risking everything for a look, when he gave a sudden snarl and cried out loud enough for me to hear: 'Kiss what I've hated? That is as bad as to kill what I've loved.' Those were the words. I am sure he said kiss, and I am sure he said kill."

"This is very interesting. Go on with your story. Why didn't you collar him while he was in this mood? You would have won by the surprise."

"I had no pistol, sir, and he had. I heard him cock it. I thought he was going to take his own life and held my breath for the report, but nothing like that was in his mind. Instead he laid the pistol down and deliberately tore in two the object of his anger. Then with a smothered curse he made for the door and turret staircase.

"I was for following, but not till I had seen what he had destroyed in such an excess of feeling. I thought I knew, but I wanted to feel sure. So before risking myself in the turret I crept to the room he had left and felt about on the floor till I came upon these."

"A torn photograph! Mrs. Fairbrother's!"

"Yes. Have you not heard how he loved her? A foolish passion, but evidently sincere and"—

"Never mind comments, Sweetwater. Stick to facts."

"I will, sir. They are interesting enough. After I had picked up these scraps I stole back to the turret staircase. And here I made my first break. I stumbled in the darkness, and the man below heard me, for the pistol clicked again. I did not like this, and had some thoughts of backing out of my job. But I didn't. I merely waited till I heard his step again. Then I followed.

"But very warily this time. It was not an agreeable venture. It was like descending into a well with possible death at the bottom. I could see nothing and presently could hear nothing but the almost imperceptible sliding of my own fingers down the curve of the wall, which was all I had to guide me. Had he stopped midway and would my first intimation of his presence be the touch of cold steel or the flinging around me of two murderous arms? I had met with no break in the smooth surface of the wall, so could not have reached the second story. When I should get there the question would be whether to leave the staircase and seek him in the mazes of its great rooms or to keep on down to the parlor floor and so to the street, whither he was possibly bound. I own that I was almost tempted to turn on my light and have done with it, but I remembered of how little use I should be to you lying in this well of a stairway with a bullet in me, and so I managed to compose myself and go on as I had begun. Next instant my fingers slipped round the edge of an opening, and I knew that the moment of decision had come. Realizing that no one can move so softly that he will not give away his presence in some way, I paused for the sound which I knew must come, and when a click rose from the depths of the hall before me I plunged into that hall and thus into the house proper.

NAVAL RED TAPE.

The Result of Having Neither Coffin Nor Graves in Stock.

A case once occurred which is vouchsafed for by naval officers who were present and who tell of it as a joke, showing the absurdities to which red tape can go. About twenty years ago a certain ship was in a foreign port. One of the men was taken sick and on the recommendation of the surgeon was sent to a hospital on shore. The man finally died and it became necessary to bury him.

The simple and straightforward method would have been to call in an undertaker and have him arrange for a decent casket and a lot in the cemetery. This would be the usual procedure with a business man or ordinary citizen. The regime of economy and reform, however, would not permit of so simple a course. What actually occurred was this:

The surgeon made a requisition on the paymaster for one coffin. Naturally he did not have one in stock and therefore it was forwarded to the fleet paymaster, who also, not being in the undertaking business, had no coffins on hand. Then the admiral directed the fleet paymaster to purchase one coffin after obtaining prices from six reputable dealers. The same course had to be followed in securing the grave. The surgeon made requisition on the paymaster for one grave. Strange as it may seem, the paymaster had no graves in stock. Neither had the fleet paymaster. Consequently the commander in chief directed the fleet paymaster to procure bids from six reliable dealers in graves and purchase one from the lowest responsible bidder.

All this, of course, is a screaming farce, but it is the horrible example to show what comes when common sense and experience are set aside to give room for the play of amateur and academic fancy.—Engineering.

KIDNAPING VOTERS.

Once a Regular Feature of Political Warfare in England.

In England a generation or two ago kidnaping was a regularly recognized feature of political warfare. On the eve of an election especially men of influence on either side would mysteriously vanish to reappear later with strange tales of forcible seizures, mad races across country in post chaises driven by yelling postilions, followed by longer or shorter terms of gilded imprisonment in great mansions, where they were wined and dined in sumptuous style and treated right royally in every way, only their liberty being denied them.

Quite humble voters, too, were forcibly abducted, but these did not always fare quite so well. Thus one victim made complaint before a magistrate that he had been decoyed from his house by a ruse and kept shut up in a coal hole for three days.

Wholesale kidnaping of voters in batches, too, was not unknown, the process being rendered easier by the custom of candidates paying the traveling expenses of their electors to and from the polling places.

For instance, at a certain Newcastle election a whole shipload of freemen of the borough, dispatched from London by sea, were taken by the captain—who had been heavily bribed—to Ostend and there left stranded.

During the same contest, too, and under similar circumstances a number of Berwick electors who happened to reside in London were dumped down in Norway, and a group of thirty Ipswich voters found themselves on the day of the poll cooling their heels upon quay at Rotterdam.

His Qualifications.

He was pleading his cause earnestly.

"I am wealthy," he said, "and could make ample provision for you."

She nodded and checked one point off on her fingers.

"I have had experience with the world," he continued.

She checked off another point.

"I have passed the frivolous point," he went on, "and I have the steadfastness, the age and the wisdom to guard and guide you well."

He paused for an answer.

"The points you make are strong ones," she said, "but they lead undeviatingly to the conclusion that you would make an excellent father for me. You have all the necessary qualifications, but just now I am looking for a husband."

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE SILE; WREATH UPON HIS GRAVE

There is no better sporting writer to-day than Hugh E. Keough, of Chicago. There are few writers of today as brilliant as this same Keough.

Until recently Keough had a friend. That friend died. It was just a year ago the other day that he quit the game we all quit sooner or later.

This friend was one of the biggest and squarest men the sporting world has known. His name was Siler—George E. Siler—referee at fights and newspaper writer. Nearly everybody who pays any attention to sports has heard of Siler, read of him or read what he wrote. Many men who read this have heard of Keough, so it may be worth while to print here what Keough published, for it is one of those rare bits of "copy" that can be read and re-read, and the world will be better for the publicity given it:

"George Siler died a year ago today, full of years and all the honors that can come to a fair man and fill the life of a sportsman. To call a man a sportsman a year after he is dead amounts to canonization. The world has been given a year's chance to fill his place and the world has not made good. The further we get away from it, the bigger the void will seem.

"A man whom I knew, and a clergyman too, who guarded his flock without thanks,
Once took up his pencil a tribute to pay to a pal that he knew in the ranks,
And here's what he said, if my memory serves (and I'm not banking much on the same).
The words may take wings, but the thought that remains, is ninety per cent of the game:

"'I have listened to all of the speeches they speak, and all of the sermons they preach;
They are building up monuments as high as the sky to lift a few souls out of reach.
But I, I will pass from this age of renown, this anthill commotion and strife,
From the place where the bronzes and marbles look down with their fast-frozen gestures of life,
Out, out to the place where he lies 'neath the shade of the pitying cypress and pine,
Your man is the man of the sword and the plume, but the man with the musket is mine.'

"It may be a queer little trick of the mind that calls back this schoolboy refrain
And makes it apply to a pal that I knew that lived and went out without stain.
This man was all man, and he acted his part and he lived for all time, not a day;
He would not have us say what he meant to us all, but we're lonesome since he went away."

ACCIDENT TO DUMMER FARMER

Horse Became Frightened by Automobile and ran Away

On Wednesday afternoon, Mr H. A. Moore, of Dummer had a narrow escape from serious injury. He was driving up from Peterborough and when near the "goose neck" on the Smith road met an automobile going to Peterborough. The car scared the horse and caused it to run away, the animal being stopped by running into some bushes at the side of the road. Mr. Moore was thrown out and, besides being badly shaken up and bruised had one of the fingers of his left hand broken. The harness was also considerably damaged. The car belonged to Peterborough — Lakefield News.

BISHOP CONSTRUCTION CO. OF MONTREAL GETS CONTRACT FOR NEW WATERWORKS DAM.

Tender Was Accepted by Water Commissioners This Morning on Recommendation of Engineer—Wm. Hamilton Company of Peterborough Gets Contract for Supplying Part of Pumping Equipment—Other Portion Goes to Montreal Firm.

The Bishop Construction Company, of Montreal, has been awarded the contract for the construction of the new waterworks dam to be built at Peterborough and the contract for supplying the pumps and waterwheels is divided between the Wm Hamilton Co., of Peterborough and the John McDougall Caledonia Iron Works Company, Limited, of Montreal. The Peterborough firm's part of the contract is worth $12,900 and that of the Caledonia Iron Works Company, $9,306. It is impossible to give even an approximate idea of the amount of the contract for the construction of the dam as there are twelve separate divisions in the estimates and in only one of these is a bulk sum quoted. The contract is awarded at so much per cubic yard, square yard or per pound. It will therefore be seen that the total amount of earth excavated, concrete put in, iron work used, etc.

There were twelve tenders for the dam and five for the pumps and waterwheels. Seven Peterborough firms tendered for the dam construction and one for the pumps and wheels. The contracts were awarded by the Water Commissioners this morning. A great amount of work was entailed in letting the contracts, the commissioners going into the matter in the most thorough manner. It was only after the most careful deliberation on the part of the commissioners, the engineer employed, Mr. Wm. Kennedy, jr., of Montreal, and Mr. Henderson, the superintendent of the Waterworks department, that the contracts were awarded.

Below will be found the twelve divisions into which the specifications for the contract for the dam were divided. Each division is numbered, the numbers being used to designate the figures submitted by the tenders for each division. When figures appear after the word "concrete" in the "key" they refer to the quality of the concrete, being the ratio in mixing. The "key" is as follows;

Ball tossers

1—Earth excavation, cubic yard.
2—Rock excavation, cubic yard.
3—Concrete, 1, 2, 4, cubic yard.
4—Concrete, 1, 3, 5, cubic yard.
5—Concrete, 1, 4, 8, cubic yard.
6—Concrete 1, 3, 5, with fillers, cubic yard.
7—Finishing floors, square yard.
8—Beams, channel etc. pounds.
9—Steel structural work and rack bars, pounds.
10—Plain, reinforced bars, pounds.
11—Water, tight embankments, cubic yards.
12—Coffer dams, and unwatering, bulk sum.

Below will be found the names of the tenderers and the tenders;

The engineer, Mr. Kennedy, recommended the acceptance of the tender of the Bishop Construction Company as being the lowest, and the Commissioners let the contract accordingly.

There was another item in the specifications for a rectangular tunnel for the diversion of a creek, but this was eliminated by the commissioners, they arranging with the Wm. Taylor Co. to furnish a concrete pipe at a lower figure than that of any of the contractors.

PUMPS AND WHEELS.

The tenders for the pumps and wheels were referred to the engineer and superintendent of the waterworks department to report upon, and they recommended that the William Hamilton Company, Peterborough, be given the contract for one unit of triplex pumps similar in design and construction to those in use here for fifteen years, at $12,900. This was done by the commissioners.

Mr Kennedy and Mr. Henderson also recommended that the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Co., Limited, of Montreal, be given the contract for one unit of turbine pump and water-wheel at $9,306, subject to the engineer's approval as to design and details of construction, with details to be approved before contract is awarded, and also upon condition that no payment be made to contractors until the pump is fully tested for sixty days and going from one year from date of acceptance.

Mr. A. P. Speaking of the advanced condition of the crops in the lower latitudes he remarked that in lower Illinois rye had been already cut, corn was nearly full height and wheat was heading out. He looks for immense grain crops this year. He will go up to Mr. Lebrun's cottage for a few days.

REPAIRS TO 24TH FIELD BATTERY GUNS COMPLETED

Satisfactory Work Done by Sergeant Tom Worth—Guns Are Now in Excellent Condition.

Armament Quartermaster Sergt. T. Worth, of the R.C.H.A., of Kingston, and his gunner, J. Catchell, who for the past week has been engaged in overhauling and repairing the guns of the 24th Field Battery, has completed his work and the guns are now in first-class condition. The repairs, which have previously been made, were not done properly, and as a result had to be done over again, but now the officer commanding the 24th Field Battery is pleased with the efficient manner in which the repairs have been accomplished.

Sergeant Tom Worth, as he is better known by a large number of friends, has had a long experience in the service of the empire. He has served in India and other places at different periods of his life. He came to Canada in 1882, and has been in the Canadian Militia ever since. As an expert mechanic his services have always been in demand, and on gun work he is always at home. At the Chicago World's Fair he won first prize in a competition for making horseshoes, of which he made twenty kinds, from a slipper to a heavy horseshoe. During his stay here Sergeant Worth has made many new friends by his amiable disposition, and may be sure of a cordial welcome should he visit the city again.

FARMER HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Fell From his Waggon Down Between the Horses and the Tongue—Could not Extricate Himself

A farmer had a narrow escape from serious injury last evening about five o'clock near the post office corner. He had just driven out of an hotel yard, and in some manner the seat of his waggon dropped back into the box and he fell head first down between the tongue and the horses. His feet became caught in some way and he was unable to extricate himself from his dangerous position. The horses, fortunately, were quiet animals, and did not become frightened. A citizen, who was standing nearby at the time, hurried to the farmer's assistance, who, after fixing the seat, drove off, congratulating himself on his lucky escape.

WOMAN'S CONGRESS APPOINTS COMMITTEE ON HEALTH

Lady Aberdeen is Made Convenor of New Department—Combined Action by Nations is Necessary to Fight Inroads of Disease.

Toronto, June 19.—Last night's meeting of the International Congress of Women in Convocation Hall to discuss questions of public health was an awakening to many who heretofore have given the matter only cursory thought.

In moving a resolution that a standing committee on public health be formed as part of the international council and that national councils be urged to take a similar course, Her Excellency, the Countess of Aberdeen, said:

"My friends of the international council, may it be given to us to pledge the women of the world to this crusade for health, so full of hope, so full of certainty of victory, so blessed in the relief it will bring to suffering humanity."

Her Excellency introduced the subject of the evening by referring to the volume of reports, "The Health of All Nations," which had been edited by Mrs. Ogilvie Gordon, honorary secretary, and commended it to the attention of the delegates.

During the past years, said her excellency, they had been consolidating their energies in the various countries where they had councils, they had been forming councils, collecting information and giving adherence to various principles of progress in which they urged the councils to promote individually and collectively.

It was a question of international concern and which combined action by the nations was of the highest value.

Wherever there is the best undertaking and co-operation between official and voluntary workers, there will be the best work and the most faithful results. Neither can do what is necessary without the other. The official work by itself tends to become red tape and devoid of elasticity, the voluntary by itself generally lacks system and restraint. It must be our earnest endeavor to use our influence to combine both and to help our women workers to train themselves to do their share in both capacities. There is scope enough and to spare for all. This is work in which all societies and all individuals can and must take part for the common zeal, and we need no further stimulus than the thought that no more beneficial contribution can be given to the world's happiness and the world's progress than to increase its power of bringing up its children in possession of that perfect health of body and mind which constitutes the truest riches of the nations."

Mrs. Edwin Gray nominated Lady Aberdeen to the convenorship of the new committee, and she was elected. Dr. Blum of Germany, Miss Gough of Australia, Mme. Bernocco of Italy and Dr. Eleanor Brown of Toronto also spoke.

After a round of social gaieties, hours of inspection and committee meetings, the delegates to the fourth quinquennial congress of the National Council of Women, got down to the real business of the congress yesterday morning.

In respect to the suffrage question, Mrs. Gordon said, that when Prime Minister Asquith asked for the opinion of the women recently, he was doing the wisest thing that had ever been done by any member of the Cabinet in England. The suffragettes were also urged to prepare a statement of their rights and go out and teach the women of the world.

France will likely be the next place of meeting for the quinquennial.

At the first meeting of the council, which was held yesterday morning, the delegates from Holland showed their appreciation of the good work done by their president during the last five years by presenting her with a beautifully silver-finished mahogany gavel. The presentation was made by the president from the Netherlands. Miss Baelde, who in a neat and humorous speech, paid great tribute to Lady Aberdeen, both as their leader and as a woman who had the courage of her convictions.

A great deal of controversy was caused when the meeting was asked to pass the minutes of the special meeting held last year in Geneva. This meeting was called to revise the constitution. It was supported by all the delegates, but the American, and was adopted.

Important recommendations were made regarding the law reform by the committee on laws in their report. Their recommendations are:

"That the law permit the fathers of illegitimate children be found if possible."

"That women be allowed to be guardians of children."

"Reform and simplification of marriage laws."

"Independence of married women and their property."

"That women be allowed to serve on juries in criminal cases."

"Wider powers of women in administration of state, civil and reform tribunals, as justices of the peace and boards of commerce."

"Votes for women and rights of women to sit as members of Parliament."

"That the nationality of married women be decided."

"The age of consent in seduction cases be raised."

Another important affair that was brought before the board was in connection with the Rhodes' scholarship for men, permitting study in England and the continent for the colonial male students. The council recommend that this should also apply to women students as well, though on a different basis, and that is that they should have a chance with their continental sister students, who were successful in winning the contest.

YOUNG BOY WILL BE SENT TO THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

The eleven-year-old boy who, with five other children was taken to the Children's Shelter from the Edinburgh street residence, will be sent to the Mimico Industrial School, where an endeavor will be made to teach the young lad something that will be of benefit to him in the future, and also to inspire him with the necessary qualities which go to make a good citizen—of which he is sadly in need. This was the judgment of the magistrate at the police court this morning, when the case came up for another hearing.

Inspector Cochrane stated that he had visited the home and found that conditions were satisfactory, although the initial cause of the trouble still remained—that of the children not getting the proper care, owing to the absence of the mother during the day. Both Inspector Crane and Mr. Henry were not in favor of allowing the boy to go back to his former habits, as his record was not very formable.

The mother was in court and said she intended leaving her present place of employment and would, in the future, be able to give more attention to the children, and they will be given back to her again.

MONEY LENDER IN CHATHAM COURT

Chatham, June 19—John W. White, a money-lender, charged with levying a charge over the amount allowed by law on a $250 loan made to Timothy McQueen, came yesterday morning before Judge Dowling, who reserved judgment. White admits loaning McQueen $250 from which he deducted $12 for his fees as solicitor. He also admits that within a year he accepted from McQueen the sum of $250 in full payment of the $250 loan, from which the $12 was deducted as fees.

Ottawa, June 19.—The Government has received word from Paris that the bill ratifying the Franco-Canadian trade convention, as negotiated by Hon. Messrs. The treaty, however, cannot come into effect until formally ratified by the Canadian Parliament, which will be done early next session.

MUST NOT CELEBRATE AMERICAN HOLIDAY

Ottawa, June 19.—The Militia Council has refused permission to the Princess of Wales Rifles of Kingston, Ont., to take part in the 4th of July celebration at Elmira, N.Y., and accordingly that regiment has had to cancel its trip.

"I don't know what sort of people these Kingston militia can be," said one of the officials of the Department last night. "But to go to a 4th of July celebration in His Majesty's uniform is really too much."

The Governor-General's Foot Guard have, however, arranged for an excursion to Burlington, Vt., on July 4, during the Champlain tercentenary celebration, but they are not going as a regiment, but merely in a civilian capacity.

SUNDAY TRAINS ON THE INTERCOLONIAL

Ottawa, June 19.—The recent announcement that there will be no Sunday trains upon the Intercolonial Railway with the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island does not, according to the Railway Department, involve any important departure as far as the western end of the Government Railway is concerned.

The trains will continue to leave Montreal as usual on Sundays, but as they will not cross the boundary of Quebec until after midnight on Sunday they will not offend Maritime Province sentiment. On the other hand the trains will leave Halifax on Saturday, but will not leave on Sundays, and as they also will be clear of the Maritime Provinces before Sunday, once more the sentiment of the "Bluenoses" will be respected.

In reply Emperor William said: "I am rejoiced to see, in this hearty reception, a new and valuable confirmation of our sincere personal friendship. I see in it also fresh confirmation of the traditional relationship of cordial friendship and confidence, which, corresponding to the manifold interests and thoroughly peaceful sentiments of our two countries, exists between our Governments."

CHILD WAS TORTURED BY AN AYLMER, QUE., WOMAN

Mrs. Eugene Lajoie is Charged With Starving Ten-Year-Old Lena and Otherwise Abusing Her Because She Looked Like a Hated Sister-in-Law.

Ottawa, June 19.—Because she resembled a disliked sister-in-law, Mrs. Eugene Lajoie of Aylmer, with nine children, is alleged to have tortured her daughter until she almost died. The child is now in the hospital, her body a mass of bruises, the head being disfigured by five cuts. The neighbors say that Mrs. Lajoie made the child run backwards and forwards in front of her while she struck her with a stick, also that she tied her hands while hungry and placed her where she could watch others eat. The child willingly ate potato peelings.

Evidence showed that the child was treated more like an ill-favored dog than like a human being. She was not allowed to eat at the table with the rest of the family, and the neighbors said the unfortunate little outcast searched in the yard for peelings and scraps of raw meat with which to appease her hunger.

When remonstrated with Mrs. Lajoie replied that the family doctor would not allow her to feed the child.

At times the fiendish mother had her twelve-year-old son drag his younger sister along the floor, bumping her head until the child became unconscious. Another kind of torture was to keep the little girl on bended knees for hours at a time. Ofter the mother threatened to poison her.

The woman's husband admits that he knew of the cruel treatment of the child by the mother, but claims he was powerless to stop it. The case was adjourned, pending the calling of more witnesses.

Sir Hugh's Gifts to Charity.

London, June 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In acknowledgment of the pleasure given the Imperial Press delegates by the manoeuvring at Aldershot, Sir Hugh Graham has forwarded $500 to the funds of the Soldiers' Orphans' Home and a similar amount to the Admiralty for the Sailors' Orphans' Home. Gen. Smith-Dorrien, expressing thanks for the former gift, said it would be mentioned in orders that the rank and file might know of this kindly thought for the welfare and happiness of their kith and kin.

Former Chief Involved.

Montreal, June 19.—Before the royal commission yesterday it was said that ex-Fire Chief Benoit had been transmitted money for the placing of firemen on the department. It was also declared that ex-Ald. Marsolais, now dead, had been given $500 for the same purpose. This was brought out during the vague and reluctant evidence of O. J. Munday, who is said to have been a go-between in transaction for securing places on the department.

Coast to Coast 'Phone.

Port Arthur, June 19.—A. Allan, superintendent of telegraph construction on the Lake Superior division of the C.P.R., is here to-day from North Bay. He has a gang of men engaged in stringing a telephone line between Fort William and White River.

British Skipper Didn't Know.

Stockholm, June 19.—Further details show that the British steamer Woodburn steamed during the night within the prohibited zone of navigation in the vicinity of Pitikapas Bay. Her captain evidently was unfamiliar with the published regulations. The Russian torpedo boat fired first three blank shots, which were followed up by four projectiles.

To Spend Million for Irrigation.

London, June 19.—At the meeting of the Southern Alberta Land Co. the report recommending that $2,000,000 be spent on irrigation was carried. The Countess of Antrim yesterday launched on behalf of the Canadian Government an ice-breaking and passenger steamer at Arrow. The vessel was christened the "Earl Grey."

New Farm House Burned.

Lindsay, June 19.—The commodious home of Jack Hartnett, a farmer, just east of Lindsay, was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon. The origin is yet unknown, as Mr. and Mrs. Hartnett were in town at the time. The house was a new one and the brickwork and painting of the interior just completed this week.

Retail Merchants' Officers.

Brockville, June 19.—The Ontario retail merchants elected the following officers: President, B. W. Zieman, Preston; first vice-president, C. W. Kelly, Guelph; second vice-president, A. M. Patterson, Brockville; treasurer, M. Mayer, Toronto; secretary, E. M. Trowern, Toronto; auditor, D. W. Dockeray, Toronto.

Fined for Abusing Boy.

Kingston, June 19.—In the Police Court Mrs. Frances Hunter of Pittsburg Township was found guilty of unlawfully assaulting a ten-year-old boy, given in her charge by the Orphans' Home here and fined $10 and costs or fifteen days by Magistrate Farrell. The lad said that he was beaten with a mop stick.

A June Snow Flurry.

Malone, N.J., June 19.—A snow flurry in mid-June was the novel experience of the residents of Duane and other sections of Franklin County early yesterday. The snow continued to fall only for a short time.

A LANDSLIDE NEAR KENORA

Kenora, June 19.—One hundred and fifty yards of C. P. R. track over a fill at Hawk Lake, 25 miles east of here, slid into the lake, leaving only a few timbers. Had train 97 been on time it is probable that it would have gone with it, but being about half an hour late a disaster was averted.

The bridge at Hawk Lake on the Canadian Pacific near Kenora was destroyed Thursday night, and arrangements have been made with the Canadian Northern to handle three C.P.R. passenger trains each way daily between here and Winnipeg for two or three days.

LAWYERS AND THE SWEAT BOX

Chief Grasett of Toronto Says They are Worse Than the Police

Buffalo, N.Y., June 19.—At yesterday's session of the International Association of Chiefs of Police Mayor Richard Sylvester of Washington and Harvey C. Carr of Grand Rapids, Mich., were re-elected president and secretary-treasurer, respectively. Michael Regan, chief of police of this city, was elected first vice-president, and James McSweeney of South Bend second vice-president.

Among the papers read at yesterday's session was one by Col. N. J. Grasett of Toronto, in which he characterized as unjustified allusions to the use of "sweating" by the police.

"Most persons don't know the difference between a sweat box and a soap box," said he. "Sweating of prisoners does not compare with the brutal treatment of witnesses by lawyers on cross-examination. The sweat box is not as bad as the witness box is for witnesses of the prosecution. These lawyers, who are most vociferous in complaints against the sweat box, are usually the most savage in their treatment of citizens in the witness box."

Col. Grasett was unable to be present yesterday, and his paper was read by Deputy Chief William Stark of Toronto.

Chicago was selected as the next meeting place of the association.

Bricklayers' Strike Settled.

Galt, June 19.—At a meeting last night, the striking masons and bricklayers and the contractors reached an amicable agreement. Both sides made concessions and the increase to 40 cents per hour will date from July 1st. J. Webster, vice-president of the building association, remarked that both parties were well satisfied with the settlement.

Degrees for Two Canadians.

London, June 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Glasgow University will confer the honorary LL.D. degree next week upon Sir Hugh Graham, proprietor of The Montreal Star, and Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Toronto Globe. Both are at present in England with the Imperial Press Conference delegates.

PAPER DUTY IS DOUBLED BY UNITED STATES SENATE

After Hard Struggle, Senator Brown's Amendment Providing for Free Import of Paper is Defeated in Favor of Committee's Recommendation.

Washington, June 19.—The Senate yesterday defeated Senator Brown's amendment providing for the free importation of print paper by a vote of 29 to 52, only four Republicans, Messrs. Bevedidge, Bristow, Brown and Burkett voting for it, thus adopting the finance committee's amendment fixing a duty of $4 a ton on print paper.

Senator Gallinger occupied the earlier hours with a speech in support of the finance committee rates on paper and wood pulp, declaring that Canada had a vast advantage in the cost of labor over the United States to the production of paper, and urged sharp competition in the United States as the reason why the price of paper had been kept down.

Gallinger referred at length to precautions that had been taken by New England States to preserve their forests, especially in view of the activity of the wood pulp industry. A reduction of the duty on paper would not only bring Canadian paper here but Norway, Sweden and Finland, with cheap labor and abundant forests of spruce, would enter the United States market.

"If Canada," he said, "gets control of the wood pulp and print paper in the United States," the newspapers will be at their mercy in the matter of price."

He believed the rate of duty recommended by the committee on finance to be too small, and predicted that it would be regarded as a monumental blunder. He preferred to continue the duty of the Dingley law.

Senator Brown again took the floor and undertook to withdraw his amendment for free paper so as to place himself in position so as to support the provision of the House bill, which levied a duty of $2 instead of $4 a ton on print paper as proposed by the finance committee, but Senator Aldrich objected.

Explaining that there was a great international question pending before the Senate, which did not exist when the House passed the tariff bill, Mr. Aldrich said Canada had adopted a policy announced by the Premier by which it was intended to effectually prevent the export of logs or wood pulp. This was that of taking possession of the American market for print paper.

"We ought to make the duty so high," he said, "as not to permit the carrying out of such a plan."

The duty of $4 a ton was not, in his opinion, sufficient to cover the difference in the cost of production between the two countries.

Referring to the report that the International Paper Co. had purchased 12,000 square miles of wood land in Canada, Mr. Aldrich suggested that that company might be caught in the Canadian trap preventing them from bringing that wood across the line.

Following closely upon the defeat of Mr. Brown's amendment Mr. Stone offered an amendment placing "wood pulp print paper, suitable for books and newspapers" on the free list.

It was opposed by Senator Bailey on the ground that it would remit $700,000 in revenue, which, he said, the Government now collects and especially "as the only people who would receive any benefit from that remission is a single, small particular class.

BATTERY WILL LEAVE ON MARCH SHARP AT SIX O'CLOCK MONDAY MORNING

Sharp at six o'clock on Monday morning the 24th Field Battery Canadian Artillery will leave Peterborough on its thirty mile march to Cobourg, where they will go into camp for twelve days. In former years the battery has used the railway for transportation purposes but this year a change has been made. The corps will march to the camping grounds, giving the members much valuable experience.

The battery will go into camp full strength under the command of Major T. W. H. Young, OC. The establishment all told will consist of 86 officers and men. Forty horses will be taken along also the four big guns, and two transport waggons.

The route taken will be George St., to Charlotte, Charlotte street to the Gravel road. A halt will be made at Bailieboro for dinner and Cobourg will be reached about six o'clock

The corps goes into camp in better condition than ever before and the boys should give a good account of themselves at Cobourg.

PETERBORO MAN ELECTED TO COMMITTEE

Special to the Review.

Quebec, June 17.—Tomorrow will close the nineteenth annual convention of the Canadian Electrical Association. It has been most successful. Over two hundred delegates are in attendance. At this afternoon's session, G Percy Cole, of Allis-Chalmers Bullock Co., Montreal, read a paper and J W Purcell, Walkerville, Ont.; P S Coate, Chatham, Ont.; L H Wright, North Bay, participated.

The officers for the year 1909-10, were then elected as follows;

President—W M Ryerson, Duluth, Minn

First vice-president — P S. Coate, Chatham.

Second vice-president —E A Evans, Quebec.

Secretary-treasurer—T. S Young.

Managing committee A A Dion, Ottawa; R S Kelsch, Montreal; J K. Wright, Toronto; R D Black, Toronto; H O Fisk, Peterborough; E L Mudge, Toronto; R J Smith, Perth; F A Chisholm, St Johns, Que.; W. I. Adams, Niagara Falls; W L MacFarlane, Cornwall.

The annual banquet took place tonight at the Lake House, Montmorency Falls. It was presided over by Mr W. M Ryerson.

Blind Peddler Burned.

London, June 19.—James Carroll, a blind peddler, claiming Winnipeg as his home, was brought to the hospital suffering from fearful burns about the neck and head. Carroll on Thursday was lighting his pipe, when the match ignited his celluloid collar. He claims to have roamed about all night. His wounds are in a terrible state.

Hooted and Cheered Ward.

London, June 19.—A Wellington, N.Z., despatch yesterday says that when Premier Ward sailed for England a huge crowd assembled. There was some cheering and some hooting as the steamer left. The hooting was due to the prorogation of Parliament.

Serious Fire In Quebec.

Ottawa, June 19.—Fire at Chapreau, Que., discovered at 3.30 yesterday did damage to the extent of $8,000. Two brick stores of Poupore & McDonald, residence owned and occupied by Mrs. Archambault and five outbuildings were burned.

Fatal Wreck.

Fond du Lac, Fla., June 19.—An engineer was killed, his fireman fatally hurt and a mother and her babe badly injured when a passenger train ran into a wreck in the yards and was derailed.

LONDON CAMP IS EXEMPLARY

London, June 19.—Gen. Lake completed his inspection of the London camp yesterday, and the camp broke up last evening.

Not a single man of the 1,621 in camp has appeared in the Police Court or before officers for drunkenness or disorderly conduct. This record has never before been equalled.

Thity per cent. of the men, or nearly double the usual number, qualified for first-class efficiency pay and good scores were made.

The soldiers in camp had sweet revenge Thursday night on members of the Dundas Centre Church, however, who were active in abolishing canteens this year. Rev. E. B. Lancely invited all men in camp to a sacred concert, and the men accepted. For two hours the choir sat waiting, and not a single soldier appeared. Finally it dawned upon them that they had been fooled.

Anxious to Get C.N.R.

Ottawa, June 19.—Hon. George P. Graham heard yesterday an application from the County Council of Lanark to have the projected Canadian Northern line from Toronto to Ottawa pass through Lanark County. A large deputation attended and pressed their views. Another deputation from Smith's Falls, through which it is proposed the line shall run, opposed this. Mr. Graham reserved judgment.

Six Months for Seager.

Toronto, June 19.—George Seager, chauffeur for D. D. Mann, who ran his car into a street car on College street while "joy riding," after taking Mr. Mann to the station a month ago, was sent to the Central Prison for six months in the Police Court yesterday morning for injuring Miss Fanny White, who was in the car at the time of the accident.

TORONTO BUSINESS MEN ARE COMING

Will Hold Outing to Peterborough on July 21st

Toronto, June 19.—There was a very poor turnout of business men at the meeting called for last night to decide and to make arrangements for the annual picnic of the association. Mr. Tom Padget occupied the chair, and Mr. F. B. Hartney acted as secretary. It was decided to hold the picnic on July 21st, to Peterborough. This decision was arrived at by ballot of the business men of the ward, the majority of the votes polled being for that place. The election of committees will be concluded [illegible] evening.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR

From Ottawa correspondence of the Montreal Star it is learned that those protests have been "arranged" where the deposit was put up by the central party bureau. It is safe to say that this will be one of the issues of the next campaign. Any leader who leads with a committee of "compromisers" or "arrangers" in his following, will find that all his grand professions will fall dead flat on the ears of the electors, and indeed they do now. To proclaim on every platform that he is aghast at the corruption in the country at large while his own party is with his knowledge condoning it, only in another form, is too thick by a good deal. What would be thought of a preacher who preached honesty, sobriety and the other elementary virtues, if he got drunk with regularity and ignored the crooked proclivities of his own family? It can't be done. The people are grumbling from one end of Canada to the other. "Corruption" they well know is the base principle of all forms of thieving, from high finance to bank-breaking. For a leader, whether he be Sir Wilfrid Laurier or Mr. Borden, to calmly ignore the thimble-rigging in his own party, while posing to the public as an exemplar of the proprieties, is not a striking illustration of sincerity. What holds leaders back no doubt is a delicate desire not to disrupt their following. But when it comes to the failings of the other party, of course, there are no such scruples, since their leadership runs no risk. It is a beautiful picture of human nature in its most charmingly innocent mood. It is a pity that it is left to a few plain, unsophisticated pioneers to clear the way, but they will be found. The people, like a mighty giant, may be trusted to wake up some day and then "look out!" Meanwhile in getting ready to write epitaphs, do not forget, ye scribes, to say that with regard to "Corruption" the deceased patriot, leader, or whatever it is, had an eye like a hawk for the failings of the other party, but for his own he had all the lenience of weakness, or as he called it, of "Statesmanship." The greatest obstacle in the path of the spirit of Conservative reform is the distrust on the part of the people occasioned by "central committees," who are entrusted, it would seem, with the morals of the party, while the leaders do the talking. It is a highly unsatisfactory arrangement. Numbers of leading men of Conservative leanings, in this district, decline, they say, to be bamboozled longer. What a burlesque of greatness it is to affirm that So-and-So was a pure patriot, a scrupulously honest man, a high-minded gentleman, and so forth, when a large share of his time was taken up in dodging charges levelled at his party. As an altar upon which birthday honours can be laid he is, however, unexceptionable. But can a man himself be acquitted who knowingly profits by all these things? Implied knowledge is presumed upon evidence of it even in courts of law. It is true that sometimes the explanation is offered. "Yes! But what can one do! It seems to be the condition of the people."

Then why denounce it in others? How long do the party "managers" suppose the public will continue to be made the tools of the saw-off?

WHY SO CAUSTIC?

"Any writer attacking the Georgian Bay Canal scheme should apologise. It seems foolish to be attacking such a doubtful proposition. Yet it must be remembered that politics, and that political constituencies would sooner see government money spent on useless public works in their midst than not see it spent at all. Any district, in which there is no government work going on, feels that it is being slighted. The people living along the proposed route of the Georgian Bay Canal, and along the Ottawa River where locks would be built are hungering for their chance. Yet they are no worse than the people along the Trent Valley Canal or along that portion of the system known as the Newmarket Canal!"—Canadian Courier.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Once again we make reference to our weekly request on behalf of the rural population of this county for rural mail and parcel delivery. The Examiner laughed the idea to scorn, on the ground of its impracticable expense—compare Newmarket Canals—but when the P.M.G. discovered suddenly how it was taking with the people he changed his tune and so did the Examiner. From whistling the "Dead March" it changed to "That's What I Said" with variations. It then became convinced that we should have it in the county of Peterborough. Mr. Stratton would bring it about in a week, of course. But, bless you, "there's nothing to it" here. No less than ninety-seven other routes have been established in Canada since the idea was given to the Canadian public by the Conservatives at the last election, but not Peterborough. It still awaits the coming. We have now called for it these many months, and shall continue to do so until we get it. How absurd that every form of speculation and alleged enterprise should be fed to repletion by the Ottawa Government, while the rural population of Peterborough asks for a merely modern postal service, in vain. Why are we left out in the cold?

THE GEORGIAN BAY CANAL

(The Canadian Courier)

Opening of navigation and agitation by Sir Robert Perks have combined to start afresh the talk about a new Welland Canal and the more distant Georgian Bay Canal. It is quite understandable that Sir Robert representing a group of British capitalists, should be willing to lend us a few hundred millions on a guarantee that Canada will pay four per cent forever. Four per cent. is a high rate of interest for the British investor who desires a Government guarantee. Consuls pay much less. That is the simple explanation of this burst of generosity.

As for a new Welland Canal with larger and deeper locks, that is a prime necessity. When steamers were one hundred to two hundred feet long, the Welland locks were long enough, wide enough and deep enough to accommodate any vessel in sight. The Sault locks are twice as long, twice as wide and nearly twice as deep. This new size was necessitated by the growth of the average steamer on the Great Lakes. Last Saturday the largest passenger vessel ever built in Canada sailed out of Collingwood harbor to take up regular work between Sarnia and Lake Superior ports. The Hamonic which is the name of the new Queen of the Lakes is 365 feet long and she could not pass through the Welland Canal. Many of the larger boats in the upper lake trade cannot get into the Welland. Therefore a new Welland is absolutely necessary if the best use is to be made of Lake Ontario and the Upper St Lawrence.

Will a new Welland Canal be costly? is the preliminary question. More than one expert has expressed the opinion that it can be built for ten million dollars. As it will be built by the Government we may increase the price to fifteen millions. The larger Upper Lake boats will then go to Kingston and Prescott, instead of stopping at Buffalo. The St. Lawrence canals would not need enlargement because large boats will not use long canal systems and therefore the grain must be transhipped to smaller vessels and barges to complete the journey to Montreal. With a deepened Welland Canal, grain can be carried to Prescott from Port Arthur in about one half the time it would require to take it over the proposed Georgian Bay Canal route. The Welland Canal would cause the great lake boats to decrease their speed from ten to three miles per hour, for only a comparatively short distance. The proposed Georgian Bay Canal would require the boats to lower their speed for ten times as great a distance. Hence it is doubtful if large vessels would use the Georgian Bay Canal even if it were feasible.

Moreover, the Georgian Bay Canal seems impossible. There is not sufficient water at the high point between Lake Nipissing and the Ottawa River. At this point, it would resemble other canals now famous in political discussions. Besides this physical difficulty there is the financial difficulty. The canal would likely cost two hundred million dollars, perhaps three hundred millions. It might be as expensive as the Panama. The interest on two hundred millions, at four per cent is eight millions a year, a sum large enough to pay the freight on approximately two hundred million bushels of wheat from Fort William to Montreal every season. The cost of operation, maintenance and repairs would carry another fifty million bushels.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Nowadays discreet politicians are writing articles upon Canada or its provinces in 1920 or 1950. Any old date will do to take the palm over the present.

In the United States an improper system of justice and administration of it led, not to reprieves, but to short cuts. We in Canada are working that way rapidly.

It is not to be expected that crookedness will be abolished in this odd old world, but there is nothing to prevent our doing what we can to make the law for the poor and the rich the same, both in the book and in fact. Our police magistrates are prompt, and as the Scotchman says, "efficacious," but the big offenders are treated with most respect. Why?

Father Phelan has a poor enough opinion of the suffragettes and their ability to make good against the tremendous opposition they have aroused. The Pope has recently declared to a delegation of Catholic women that they can never hope to become the equals of men, because Nature never intended that they should. The Suffragettes don't like this sort of talk and are openly resenting it, declaring that the "Lord of Creation" has no advantages whatever over them. "What do they know about men?" asks the St. Louis Philosopher; "the few of them that have husbands are married to mannikins."—The Catholic Register.

The Montreal Witness says;—"It will stand as an eternal disgrace to Montreal that honest men seeking to work for the city have had to mortgage a salary of little more than dollars a week to borrow the money they were compelled to pay to some vampire, whose greed for money had to be satisfied before he would stand out of the way of honest labor. Two phases of yesterday's evidence are especially noteworthy. In the morning a fireman's widow appeared and gave pathetic proof that she had paid back from the life insurance grant, the money her husband borrowed to pay for his promotion two months before his death.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

FIFTY CITIES UNDER LOCAL OPTION

We are told sometimes that local option may be all right for some country districts, but that it is not practical in cities and towns the size of Peterborough. People that talk that way cannot be aware that there are in the United States fifty cities of over 20,000 population in which prohibition is in force. Some of them are in states that have passed general prohibitory laws, and some of them are under prohibition by the direct local vote of the citizens. Here is a list of cities and their population, as published in The American Issue. In Tennessee the law will not go into operation until July 1:

WHAT LIQUOR DOES IN PETERBOROUGH

Did you say that you are in favor of the open bar being continued in Peterborough, and that you do not intend to vote for local option? Why! Every week you see in the Peterborough papers items of police court and other news that show what liquor is doing in Peterborough.

You know the liquor traffic breeds criminals.

You know the liquor traffic makes drunkards.

You know the liquor traffic causes murders.

You know the liquor traffic makes truthful men liars.

You know the liquor traffic corrupts the Legislature.

You know the liquor traffic makes deadbeats out of honest men.

You know the liquor traffic makes people too poor to pay taxes.

You know the liquor traffic fills our insane asylums.

You know the liquor traffic is the main entrance to the penitentiary.

You know the liquor traffic furnishes the club-room for crooks and thugs.

You know the liquor traffic breeds poverty and causes premature death.

You know the liquor traffic is the greatest cause of the ballot box stuffing.

You know the liquor traffic causes criminal registration.

You know the liquor traffic protects the criminal.

You know the criminal protects the liquor traffic.

You know the liquor traffic lessens the earnings of men.

You know the liquor traffic makes good workmen poor wrokmen.

You know the liquor traffic is the perpetual law-breaker.

You know the liquor traffic causes divorces.

You know the liquor traffic makes no man a better man.

You know the liquor traffic ruins the family.

You know the liquor traffic fills our poor-houses.

You know the liquor traffic crushes out the lives of innocent women and children.

You know the liquor traffic causes suicide.

You know the liquor traffic makes brutes of husbands and fathers.

You know the liquor traffic breaks the hearts of thousands of mothers.

You know the liquor traffic is against the church.

You know the liquor traffic corrupts the police. See what it is doing in Montreal.

You know the liquor traffic hates the Sabbath.

You know the liquor traffic is the clearing house of our money for criminals, drunken sots, ruined men, blasted homes, miserable lives, suicides and, in fact, all manner of vice.

You know the liquor traffic depletes the community of money.

You know the liquor traffic kills men's ambition for a better life.

You know the liquor traffic depreciates adjoining property.

You know the liquor traffic costs many times more than the revenue derived from it.

You know the liquor traffic is in Canada because it pays the millionaire brewer.

For these, and for many other reasons, we must drive it out of Peterborough.

WORK AVAILABLE

A Peterborough hotel keeper asked one of our merchants recently if he intended to vote for local option and thereby take the bread and butter out of the mouth of the hotelkeepers. This is a common argument used against the agitation for local option. An effective reply to it is furnished by the following instance:

When it was announced during the April elections, that a certain county in Michigan had "gone dry," the wife of a prosperous saloon keeper visited her nearest neighbor and sought consolation over the prospect of poverty for herself and her children. Another woman, who was scrubbing the neighbor's kitchen floor, looked up and said, "Madam, my husband has spent half his earnings in your husband's saloon. Now that the saloon is to be closed, he should be able to support the family without my help, and you can have my job!"

The attractions of a wet town

The Attractions of a Wet Town

Last fall Allen county, Ohio, voted wet by 67 majority. The usual argument was used by the liquor men in that campaign—taxes would be increased, business would be ruined and personal liberty would be jeopardized if the county voted dry. If it remained wet, it was argued, trade would increase and many persons would come to Lima from dry territory to make their purchases.

A few days ago two men did come to Lima from dry Logan county to make purchases. Neither of them returned. One is dead; the victim of a drunken brawl: the other is in the Allen county jail awaiting trial for murder.

What caused the men to go to Lima? It may have been the page advertisement in certain Lima newspapers that on the day of the journey a new liquor house was to have a "grand opening." At any rate, the men went to Lima; both of them became drunk and quarrelsome; both purchased beer and whiskey to take back to their homes, and on one of the principal streets one of the men cut the throat of the other, death resulting almost instantly.

The wets of Allen county argued last fall that if the saloons were closed the city and county could not exist, because it would be deprived of saloon revenue. Within a few months an awful crime is committed; a man unprepared to die is sent into eternity, and another must face trial for taking life. The cost of this expensive trial will be borne, not by Lima, but by Allen county. One or two death have taken place in Peterborough this year directly on account of the liquor traffic. Do we want these things to continue? If not, vote for local option.

Making Good

MAKING GOOD

Springfield, Ohio, is a city with a population of 60,000. It has come under prohibition through the recently passed county local option. One of the exchanges tell us that "the city of Springfield is making good dry history these days. The saloons closed April 28. From April 29th to May 18, without saloons, there were 28 arrests. For the corresponding days last year, with saloons, the number of arrests was 89. Notice that drop? Less than one-third as many."

LOGICAL ECZEMA CURE ENDORSED BY PHYSICIANS

After treating eczema for years as a practically incurable blood disease, the medical world is greatly interested in the discovery that it is not a blood disease at all, but is due to a parasite in the skin itself. This parasite is easily destroyed by the external application of oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc. This will quickly kill all eczema germs, while soothing and refreshing the skin.

Mrs Henry Harvey, of Black Lake, Que., tells how she was cured after ten years of suffering:

"I had been a sufferer from facial eczema for about ten years. I was treated unavailingly by several doctors and remedies. About two years ago I saw D.D.D. advertised. I at once decided to give it a trial and sent for a sample bottle, which cured me in a couple of weeks, and I have not had it since. D.D.D. has been a god-send to me as well as many others."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm, etc., you will feel instantly soothed and the itch allayed at once, when a few drops of this oil of wintergreen compound is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent.

For free sample bottle write to The D.D.D. Laboratory, Department P.R., 23 Jordan St., Toronto.

For sale by all druggists.

About Burleigh Power

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—It has been published in the press of your city that the Central Ontario Power Company, Limited, have offered to contract to deliver power to the city of Peterborough at $7.60 per horse power. The company have not done so. Engineer estimates have been furnished which show that the city can purchase Burleigh Falls water power, develop, transmit and transform and have the same ready for distribution for that marvellously low figure of $7.60 for 24 horse power per annum.

No private company could do this. No private company can operate on any other basis than that of making reasonable profits for its shareholders; and a private company operating Burleigh Falls power at the cost estimated to Peterborough even with guaranteed bonds would have to provide for 7 per cent. dividend on capital stock and at least 4 1-2 per cent. on bonds, which would mean $5,000 per annum in interest charges over 4 per cent., which the city would have to pay. A private company would also also have to pay taxes and the city would not. The tax item alone costs the Fenelon Falls and Lindsay plant $2 per horse power per annum. A private company would also have to provide for president's and directors' remuneration,m office expenses, etc.

The city can purchase, develop and operate Burleigh Falls power at an annual saving of about $14,000 as compared with a private company, a saving of about $4 per horse power per annum.

What this would amount to in advantage to the city is not to be measured by these figures of $14,000 per annum, considerable as they may be.

In fact the advantage to the city of being able to offer to industries the cheapest power in Canada cannot be estimated.

Yours truly,
R. McLAUGHLIN.

LACK OF BLOOD

Is What Causes Headaches, Dizziness and Heart Palpitation

On the blood depends the welfare of the whole body. Where good blood exists, disease is unknown, but where the blood is poor and watery disease quickly seizes hold of the body. It is then headaches, backaches, dizziness, heart palpitation and other serious ailments make themselves felt. Good blood can always be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They actually make good, rich blood and thus restore lost strength and banish disease. Mr Herman Hanson, Brewers Mills, N.B., says:—"I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. I was troubled with headaches, dizziness and loss of strength and had a hacking cough which I feared would lead to consumption. I tried a number of medicines without benefit, but was finally persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and used these Pills for several months with remarkable results. They helped me so much that I now strongly recommend them to all other sufferers."

The experience of Mr. Hanson is that of thousands of others who have found health and strength through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after other medicines had failed. It is through their power in making good blood that these Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, heart palpitation, neuralgia, nervous troubles and the distressing ills of girlhood and womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers in medicine or direct by mail from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

ANGLICAN SYNOD CONDEMNS CLUB DRINKING HABIT

"The Anglican Synod of Toronto is meeting this week, and among the business to go before it will be a special report from a committee on Temperance, Moral and Social Reform. This report deals with the growing evils of liquor distribution by clubs, which has been increasing rapidly since provision was made for its legalization. It says:—"The feeling that no club should be licensed to sell intoxicants is growing stronger. They are practically under no control, and many of them are active defenders of the treating system. The already existing law against the sale of intoxicants in military camps has never been enforced, but it really looks as though something were going to be done. We heartily endorse any effectual action to this end."—Exchange.

"THE TRAGEDY OF QUEBEC"

"A cheap edition of this book being called for, the opportunity was taken to add proof where its statements had been challenged. This has been done to an extent that readers of the book on its first appearance will find it come to them with the freshness of novelty. The immediate subject of the book is the disappearance of the Protestant farming population from the Province of Quebec. Acknowledging this, to a considerable extent, as due legitimate causes, Sellar demonstrates the existence of an expulsive force—the determined plan of the hierarchy to supplant them by their own people. The evolution of the Church of Rome as it is found to-day in Quebec—its rise from a position where it was merely tolerated to one of supremacy—necessitated a sketch of the history of that province. Those who associate New France with Romance, who think of the French period as one of chivalrous warriors, dauntless explorers, explorers, apostolic missionaries, will find themselves confronted with facts copied from official records, proving it to have been a period of pride and poverty, squalor and stagnation, persecution and priestcraft. The final chapter deals with the situation of the present day. An established church has been built up in Quebec, rich in resources, powerful in numbers, strong in discipline and organization. This hierarchy, not content with ruling a province, aspires to dictate to the Dominion. The evidence on this point is startling, the danger shown to be immediate. The conclusion drawn is, that if Canada is to remain a free and self-governing country there must be a severance of church and state, absolute and complete, and the adoption of the French laws regarding monastic institutions."—Publisher's Review

Improving Canal Banks

A few years ago Lockmaster Junkin planted a number of young maples and a few other trees along the edge of the locks and has otherwise improved the landscape in the vicinity by setting out plants and sowing flower seeds each spring and keeping everything neat and tidy, very much to his credit. The trees are nearly all alive and thrifty. They are now quite a noticeable size, and cast a shade that is very agreeable on hot days. This week the bank near the McArthur House is being sodded, having been previously prepared. The work of improvement is going steadily along, something being done each season toward beautifying the lock premises.—Fenelon Falls Gazette.

Great damage is being done in Quebec by forest fires.

WEST PETERBORO' FARMERS' INSTITUTE IN GOOD SHAPE

Annual Meeting Held To-day — Satisfactory Reports Presented—Farmers Should Attend Meetings Better

The annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute was held this afternoon in the City Council Chamber. President J. N. Telford was in the chair and the report of the secretary-treasurer, Mr. William Collins, of Peterborough, and the financial statements were very atisfactory. Mr. Collins in his report regretted that the farmers did not turn out in larger numbers to attend the meetings, the information disseminated at which is of a most helpful nature to the agriculturist.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

To the members of West Peterborough Farmers' Institute—

Gentlemen.—I hereby beg leave to submit to you for approval the annual report of the Executive for the past year ending May 31st, 1909.

Since our last annual meeting we have had a very good time for the agriculturist, although crops were in some cases below the average, the prices have been higher than usual, and while we have this year had a late, backward spring, we have hope that we may have a bountiful harvest, on which depends the prosperity of our country.

Since our last annual meeting we have to lament the departure, through death, of two of our Board of Directors, namely, R. Q. Dench, of Lakefield, and A. A. Stewart, of Otonabee.

On June 12th, 1908, we had our usual excursion to Guelph, but it was not, owing to several causes, as well attended as in previous years.

On December 9th our first regular meeting was held at Ennismore, with an attendance of 45 in the afternoon and 350 in the evening. Nine addresses were delivered. Next day at Lakefield the afternoon attendance was 55, and the evening 350. The delegates sent by the department were Mr. W. F. Kydd, Simcoe, and Mrs. Colin Campbell, Windsor. The latter addressed the meetings of the Women's Institutes at those places in the afternoons, and helped at the union meetings in the evenings.

Supplementary meetings were held at Stewart's on January 5th, attendance, 26 in the afternoon and 104 in the evening; January 6th, 4th line, Smith, attendance, afternoon 22, evening 58. At a meeting held in the city of Peterborough the afternoon attendance was 34, and in the evening North Monaghan was visited, when 66 were present. The delegates for those meetings were C. F. Alward, of New Brunswick, and E. W. Kitchen, of North Simcoe.

Now, while we have had good meetings and splendid practical speakers sent to us, we have to deplore the lack of interest taken by our farmers in those things which are of such vital interest to their success. Only a small proportion of them attend the meetings, and of those only a small number will become members, and thereby they are not receiving the valuable reports and bulletins published and sent out by the department, and we often think that our directors are not giving the help they should to us to increase the membership. Now, it is their duty to help the Executive in that line, and help to make a success of the meetings in their own locality.

Another matter we wish to draw your attention to is the formation of Farmers' clubs in the districts where Institute meetings are held. The superintendent wishes all institutions to take this up so as to enlist the younger members of the farming community in the work.

I have received a letter from Mr. Putnam, superintendent, stating that any place holding meetings where the attendance was under 15, that no speakers will be sent to them unless they ask for it by petition signed by at least 25 as guarantee of good faith that they will try to secure an audience.

We cannot close without extending to the City Council our hearty thanks for the use of the council chamber to hold our meetings and also to the press for the splendid reports published by them of our work.

Signed on behalf of the Executive Committee.

WM. COLLINS,
Treasurer.

INTERESTING HISTORY OF THE 3RD PRINCE OF WALES DRAGOONS

Some information About the Corps That Will Go into Camp at Nassau on Monday—Squadron From Northumberland Was Organized in 1855.

The 3rd Prince of Wales's Dragoons consists of four Squadrons of Cavalry, drawing their strength from four counties of Central Ontario, Northumberland, Durham, Peterborough and Prince Edward, and lettered respectively A., B., C., D.

"A" Squadron, from Northumberland County, is the old Cobourg troop, organized in 1855, by Lieut.-Col. D'Arcy Boulton, with G. A. Boswell as Lieutenant. This troop now increased to the strength of a squadron, is stationed at Cobourg, under Major A. E. McLaughlin; Capt. H. W. Dudley, 2nd in command, and Lieuts. E. Campbell, W. C. Edmison and G. W. James. "A" Squadron had the honor of escorting H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on his visit to Cobourg in 1860; they also formed the escort for Lord Dufferin on his visit to Kingston in 1872.

"B" Squadron was raised at about the same time at Port Hope, by Lt.-Col. Smart, with the late Col. Williams as Lieutenant. When the Prince of Wales in 1860 went to Ottawa to lay the foundation stone of the new Parliament Buildings "B" Squadron enjoyed the distinction of acting as his escort. These two troops were united in 1870 to form the Northumberland and Durham Squadron of Cavalry, under command of Lieut.-Col. Boulton. In 1884 "B" troop was transferred from Port Hope to Millbrook under the late Captain Harry Weller, son of His Honor the late Judge Weller. This Squadron is now commanded by Major Davie; Capt. S. T. Medd, 2nd in command; Lieutenants R. J. McElmoyle and A. A. Medd. In 1872 Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, then a Major in the Infantry, undertook to raise a troop in the County of Peterborough. His efforts were successful and "C" Squadron, stationed at Peterborough, with R. A. Morrow Lieutenant, and W. H. Hackham, cornet, was the result. Major T. Johnston is at present in command of this Squadron, with Capt. W. C. Campbell second in command, and Lieutenants S. W. Anderson, R. Cleghorn, and J. Duffus, Subalterns. "C" Squadron also had the honor of escorting Royalty, upon the visit of the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise to the Cobourg Brigade Camp in 1881, when the party included Prince George, Duke of York.

"D" Squadron, stationed at Wellington, Prince Edward County, was raised by Major White at Picton in 1872. It is now commanded by Major McCullough, Capt. F. J. McDonald, 2nd in command, and Lieuts. W. H. Terrill, R. Zerfest and W. E. Woodward as subalterns. "D" Squadron has also had the honor of escorting a Governor-General, on the occasion of Lord Aberdeen's visit to Belleville, 1895.

Such, in briefest outline, is the account of the origin and organization of the Prince of Wales's Canadian Dragoons.

Lieut.-Col. Boulton, who on his retirement was the senior officer in the Dominion, had a long and highly honorable career in connection with the Militia of Canada, and especially with the cavalry arm of that service. So long ago as 1837 he raised a company of Infantry Volunteers, and as captain enlisted with his men with the incorporated regiment which was known as the Queen's Own, serving in Toronto and on the Niagara frontier, till the troubles of that stormy period were over. When the active militia was reorganized in 1855 Captain Boulton raised a volunteer cavalry troop known as the Prince of Wales's Dragoon Guards, wearing the scarlet uniform of the English Regiment of that name. The troop was increased to a squadron in 1870, under his command, and in 1875 the corps was increased to a regiment, with headquarters at Cobourg, and has always been efficient for duty.

As has been above stated, the troop was designated, although without formal authority, "The Prince of Wales's Dragoon Guards" in 1855 on its reorganization. But on the occasion of H.R.H.'s visit to Canada it occurred to Col. Boulton to make application through Major-General, the Honourable Robert Bruce, Governor to H.R.H., for the adoption of the regiment by the prince. His Royal Highness graciously assented, and from England the application being renewed through the Horse Guards, authority was communicated to the general officer commanding in Canada assenting to the application, but omitting the term "Guards." At the same time the regiment was authorized to use the crest of the Prince of Wales, and to wear the uniform of the 3rd Prince of Wales's Dragoon Guards, i.e., scarlet. From that time on the Prince of Wales called the regiment his own "Canadian Dragoons." More than one communication was received by the officer commanding expressive of the interest which His Royal Highness took in the regiment. Thus on November 10th, 1891, the following telegram was received from Sandringham—

"To Col. Boulton, Cobourg:—

"The Prince of Wales thanks his Canadian Dragoons for kind congratulations."

Again in 1893, on December 2, Col. Boulton received the following from Major Gen. Herbert—

"My Dear Col. Boulton,—I send you the following extract from a letter I have received to-day in reply to one which I sent to H.R.H., the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness would thank you to say to Col. Boulton and the officers of his Canadian Dragoons how much he appreciated the good wishes they have asked you to communicate to him. He shares with Col. Boulton the pleasant memory of his visit to Cobourg some years ago. And he is pleased to hear from you the very favorable report of the condition of the regiment, which, he understands, owes this mainly to Col. Boulton's long command, and careful administration.' I feel that his gracious message will be appreciated by all ranks of the P.W. Dragoons."

Upon Col. Boulton's retirement he was highly complimented by the officer commanding the Canadian forces on his long and honorable career, and the efficient service which he had given the country, and if patriotism consists of willing service to one's country Col. Boulton, in the highest sense of the word is a patriot.

Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers succeeded in maintaining the high state of efficiency of the regiment under his predecessor, and at the expiration of his tenure of command was succeeded by Col. Sutton, of Millbrook, and Col. Brown, of Colbourne. The present commanding officer of the regiment, Lieut.-Col. G. H. Syer, comes from a well-known and highly respected family in the township of Cavan, and has long been connected with the regiment in the various ranks, being some years ago sent to England as a member of the Jubilee Contingent from this regiment and has always been known and recognized as a capable and efficient officer.

The second in command of the regiment is Major H. C. Rogers, a nephew of Col. Rogers.

Captain Medd of Peterborough, is acting Adjutant of the regiment and has received commendation from the Inspector of cavalry as an efficient officer.

The 3rd Dragoons was the first cavalry regiment in Canada to appoint a Chaplain. Rev. Herbert Symonds, formerly professor in theology in Trinity university, then rector of Ashburnham, now the rector of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, was gazetted chaplain in November 1896. He attended the camps at Kingston and Belleville in 1897 and 1898, respectively. He was succeeded by Rev A. E. Langfeldt, MA, now rector of Ashburnham, and who attended the camp at Kingston in 1908 and is detailed for duty with his corp at the Peterborough camp now commencing.

The first Medical Officer of the regiment was Captain Turner, appointed on the formation of the Corps, retired through age limit in 1897, with rank of Surgeon Lieut-Col. He was succeeded by Surgeon-Major T. W. H. Young who resigned that appointment recently to take over the command of the newly formed 24th Battery Canadian Field Artillery. The present regimental surgeon is Captain T. Douglas.

Major J. G. Hagerman of Cobourg was the first paymaster of the regiment and held that appointment for a good many years when that office was cancelled; subsequently the Militia Department has added a paymaster on the strength and Mr. E. S. Clarry of this city received the appointment with rank of Hon. Capt.

Captain Stapleton who retired with the rank of Major held the position of Quartermaster for 23 years. The present Quartermaster is Capt. W. H. Smith of Cobourg.

Captain B. R. [illegible], has been the Veterinary Officer of the regiment for some years.

The 3rd Dragoons have always come forward with their quota of men when there were troublesome times in this country. Officers and men of the regiment served at the front in 1837; in the North West rebellion and the South African war. Col. W. W. Brown, OC, resigned his rank of Major and enlisted in the ranks; the commissioned vacancies having been filled.

Other officers and ex-officers who served in the South African War, were: Major, now Lieut.-Col. H. S. Greenwood; Major C. H. Rogers, Capt. Shaw and Lieut. Price.

The 3rd Dragoons has furnished several officers to the Royal North-West Mounted Police, namely; Capt. Casey; Capt. Strickland, and Captain Shaw.

The establishment of the regiment is as follows;

32 officers.
290 rank and file.
265 horses.

It is recruited well up to its complement of both men and horses.

STRAWBERRIES ARE PLENTIFUL

Will be Shipped Freely From the Niagara District

Special to the Review.

St. Catharines, June 17—Strawberries will be plentiful this year, and the indications are that they will also be cheap. Berries from the United States have been coming in quite freely and consequently the home grown product is entering a market which is already liberally supplied. Fruit-growers are not looking forward to obtaining high prices but are rather manifesting a certain amount of uneasiness as to whether they will be able to dispose of all they grow.

What contracts have been made with canning factories have been at from 72 cents to 90 cents per crate of two dozen boxes, or from 3c to 4c per box. Some factories have refused to make contracts.

A fruit grower has offered to contract with a canning factory for all the berries they wanted at 5 cents per box and the offer was not accepted.

Mount Everest of the Himalayas is the highest mountain peak in the world, being over 29,000 feet high. The 18,000,000 packets representing one year's output of "Salada" Tea would, if placed end to end, produce a pyramid 5,600,000 feet in height, or 193 times higher than the highest mountain in the world. Can you grasp the magnitude of the demand for "Salada" Tea!

THE LATE A. L. DAVIS

At a special meeting of the Directors of the Imperial Guarantee and Accident Company of Canada, held at the offices in Toronto on Thursday, the following resolution was passed and inscribed on the minutes of the proceedings;—

It was moved by Mr. Noel Marshall, seconded by Mr. S. Burrows:

That, in view of the lamented death of the President and General Manager, Mr. A. L. Davis, the following resolution be inscribed in the minutes:

Resolved,—that the Directors of the Company at their first meeting subsequent to the death of their late President and General Manager, desire to place on record their deep sense of the loss sustained by the that Company.

They cannot forget that to Mr. Davis' initiative the establishment of the Company is due—and its present influential and successful position is the result of his unfailing effort and wise control.

The Directors also desire to place on record their appreciation of the cheerful and genial courtesy that always characterized their relations with Mr. Davis, and their sincere regret that his untimely death has deprived them of his wise counsel.

It is further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Mrs. A. L. Davis, with the assurance of the deep and heartfelt sympathy for her felt by the Directors and Officials of the Company in her irreparable loss.

We might add that the late Mr. Davis' funeral on Wednesday, although private, was largely attended by the prominent financial and business men of Toronto. Peterborough was represented by Mayor Rush, Alderman Morrow, Robert Neill, W. J. Thompson, George K. Martin, A. H. Stratton, Dr. Morrison, R. Fortye and others.

The body, in a very handsome casket, was deposited in the Hon. Senator Cox's Mausoleum at Mount Pleasant cemetery.

SPORTING NOTES

Alfred James Wilson expects to outdo Edward Payson Weston by walking around the world. He left Toronto yesterday and it is expected that his trip will last for three years and nine months.

Dr. Emanuel Lasker, the worlds' champion chess player played against 25 men at the same time yesterday in New York and lost but two of the 25 games.

Bill Sherring has been signed to race against Shrubb in Rochester, N. Y. on July 4th.

Jack Johnston refuses to accept Jim Jeffries as referee for his coming fight against Stanley Ketchel.

Gunner Moir and Young Johnston have been matched to fight 20 rounds before the National Sporting Club of London.

Dorando is said to have made $27,000 in America and that without beating any real ones.

Longboat and Shrubb may run in their twenty-mile race at Toronto on the night of June 26, Shrubb postponing his trip to the West.

At Boston, Mass, the police who in enforcing the street traffic regulations have made some 1300 arrests, in the past four months obtained a summons for Jack Johnston, the colored fighter whom they accuse of having left his automobile unattended yesterday.

Few know that a prize fighter is buried in Westminster Abbey. In the west cloister, imbedded in the pavement is a slab of marble marking the grave of John Broughton, who was a verger in the abbey for more than thirty years, and before he obtained the situation was the champion of Great Britain, holding the belt for more than 21 years. He engaged in 22 contests and was the victor on each occasion except the last.

Battling Nelson says he will retire from the ring in September—and then have a few more.

Constant Reader—
Did Jack Johnston ever fight in Lindsay.
Answer—No, nothing but cat fights are allowed in that hamlet.

The Tecumsehs of Toronto will go to Westminster after the Minto Cup. It is only with the idea of having a look at it.

Tommy Burns wants to hurry up if he wants another fight with Jack Johnston as it will be an impossibility after Jeffries gets through with the negro.

Where is Fritz Mohl. He may be laying low endeavoring to invent some new tricks of the mat. "Touching on the back" has gone out of date.

RUGBY

Jack Corkery the sensational half-back of the Ottawa university football team, graduated this week and will take a course in medicine at Toronto university. Corkery whose home is in Peterborough intends trying for a place on the Varsity back division. He was the best of the Ottawa backs last fall.

The university team loses its entire back division through graduation, viz: Nick Bawlf, Corkery, Whelan, McCarthy and Dean. Richards is also through likewise Higgerty, the fast middle wing.

Bawlf and Richards may play with the Ottawa team in the Inter-Provincial, the Ottawas having lost all their backs but Williams, viz. Murray Kennedy, Hal Kennedy, Powell and Davie McCann.

CRICKET

Lindsay, June 19.—Chief Vincent went to Cobourg to-day to bring to Lindsay a young man called D. McNair, who was arrested yesterday in that town. He will face a charge of getting money under false pretences from some Emily township school trustees. The amount he is said to have secured is twenty-five dollars.

McNair went through the country last fall, it is said, selling maps and other school supplies. He gave out that he was travelling for E. N. Moyer & Co., Canadian school supplies, Toronto, and sold $25 worth of supplies to two of the trustees of the Emily school, Frederick A. Mace, T. A. Faulkner. The two men gave a promissory note attached to the order.

The trustees became anxious some time later when the supplies they had ordered failed to come. They wrote to the firm which the traveller said he represented and received an answer that the order had been received, but no accompanying money order. The promissory note, it was afterwards found, had been detached from the order and had been cashed by R. J. Grandy, of the same township.

Many communications were interchanged between the trustees and the firm, but no satisfaction was obtained. The firm refused to go good for the amount and send on the maps claiming that the man was not in their employ, but was merely selling on commission. They advised the trustees to accept their loss philosophically, and let the matter drop. The trustees refused and placed the matter in the hands of the police. The information sworn out was as follows;—

"That D. McNair on September 14, 1908, in the township of Emily, did with intent to defraud F. W. Mager and T. A. Faulkner by false pretences induce them to sign a valuable security, viz., a promissory note forming the part of an order for certain school supplies which D. McNair did afterwards detach from the said order and sell to R. J. Grandy and convert the proceeds thereof without furnishing supplies."

The note had been very cleverly detached from the order, in fact, it would seem that only one accomplished at the business could have done it.

The prisoner will be brought to town to-night and the trial will be held to-morrow before Magistrate Moore.

McNair is the same man who recently was tried before Magistrate Edmison in this city on a similar charge. He promised to make good the amount of about $40.00, and was allowed to go.

BASS DECEPTION FOR SMUGGLER WATCHERS WAS BIG FIDDLE

The Mysterious Box Was Seized—Silks? Ah, No; a Part of a Man's Soul—Such a Blunder Just Because Schwartzes of Little Hungary Were Serenaded.

New York, June 18.—These be the days of nefarious smuggling, when divers ruses are employed to cheat the customs exchequer. So Uncle Sam, who plays no favorites, had his eyes about him when the Schwartzes sailed yesterday on the Kronprinzessen Cecelie. Uncle Sam has never received officially the Schwartzes—they of Little Hungary—although Col. Roosevelt dined there on a much-advertised occasion in Presidential days.

So the customs inspectors did not know yesterday, as did all Houston street, that Proprietor Max Schwartz, wife Ray, daughter Gertrude, and sons Sidney and William were off for Europe. Schundau Sol got to the pier early with his Hungarian gypsy band, and serenaded the Schwartzes on the dock of the Cecelie. The band played for a wind-up the intermezzo from "Cavalleria," and, as everybody knows, the piece concludes with a last profoundo note on the bass fiddle. It's a long-held, sobbing note which requires some time to play.

HIS HEART IN HIS BOW.

Jozs. Bude presides at the bass fiddle. Besides being an artist, Jozs adores Max Schwartz. Jozs wanted that last note of the intermezzo to fulfil all artistic requirements and also partake of a last, lingering farewell to Max Schwartz. Jozs, therefore, held the note with elastic and tremulous cadences of his bow. When he awoke from his rhapsody, the other musicians had disembarked, and the gangplank was being hauled away. He slipped the cover over the huge fiddle and made a dash down the plank. The customs inspectors saw him coming. As he reached the dock Inspectors A. H. Kathey and H. S. Rose halted him.

"What have you got in there? Dresses, silks, jewels? Are the contents of that box invoiced?" they asked of Jozs.

"Box! Invoice!" queried the astonished Jozs. "Ah, I understand. You too, are artists! 'Vox,' you mean. 'Invoice!' That is vox humana, the human voice. Ah, I understand. Yes, that last long-drawn note. Was it not bee-oo-ti-ful? Yes, it came from this box, as you call it, and the voice was indeed human."

"Quit your kiddin' and come along. We'll search that box," said the inspectors, and they escorted Jozs to the detention room. He tried to explain but was rebuffed. Uncle Sam has been bluffed by wily smugglers too often.

THE VOICE FROM WITHIN.

The other musicians missed Jozs, and the first violin was sent to find him. The inspectors questioned the first violin and, being unable to get a satisfactory explanation from him, because of his limited knowledge of English, held him on suspicion of being an accessory to the man with the suspicious box. The absence of the first violin and Jozs spread the alarm to the entire gypsy band, which doubled back to the dock.

Danger of all being detained until they had established proof they were not aliens was held in abeyance when Leader Schundau Soli rapped for attention with his violin bow. The musicians took the covers from their instruments and Sol spoke a choice Magyar phrase. Then he glanced around to see that all were ready, executed a few flourishes, and, bingo—

The band struck up the opening chords of the "Star Spangled Banner." The vaulted pier echoed with the inspiring strains of the national anthem. The inspectors took off their hats, scrutinized the players, and most of all Jozs. He played as never before. His fiddle fairly boomed with sonorous basso rumblings.

Sol gave the parting flourish for a concerted stop. Jozs responded with a magnificent sweep of his bow after his brother artists had finished. Then he looked at the custom inspectors triumphantly and shouted:

"Listen. It is the 'invoice,' as you call it. It is the human voice from my beloved box."

"You'll do; beat it," said the inspectors as they put on their hats.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Pilgrim Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

"Here it was not so dark, yet I could make out none of the objects I now and then ran against. I passed a mirror (I hardly know how I knew it to be such), and in that mirror I seemed to see the ghost of a ghost flit by and vanish. It was too much. I muttered a suppressed oath and plunged forward, when I struck against a closing door. It flew open again, and I rushed in, turning on my light in my extreme desperation, when, instead of hearing the sharp report of a pistol, as I expected, I saw a second door fall to before me, this time with a sound like the snap of a spring lock. Finding that this was so, and that all advance was barred that way, I wheeled hurriedly back toward the door by which I had entered the place, to find that that had fallen to simultaneously with the other, a single spring acting for both. I was trapped—a prisoner in the strangest sort of passageway or closet, and as a speedy look about presently assured me, a prisoner with very little hope of immediate escape, for the doors were not only immovable, without even locks to pick or panels to break in, but the place was bare of windows, and the only communication which it could be said to have with the outside world at all was a shaft rising from the ceiling almost to the top of the house. Whether this served as a ventilator, or a means of lighting up the hole when both doors were shut, it was much too inaccessible to offer any apparent way of escape.

"Never was a man more thoroughly boxed in. As I realized how little chance there was of any outside interference, how my captor, even if he was seen leaving the house by the officer on duty, would be taken for myself and so allowed to escape, I own that I felt my position a hopeless one. But anger is a powerful stimulant, and I was mortally angry, not only with Sears, but with myself. So when I was done swearing I took another look around, and, finding that there was no getting through the walls, turned my attention wholly to the shaft, which would certainly lead me out of the place if I could only find means to mount it.

"And how do you think I managed to do this at last? A look at my bedraggled, lime covered clothes may give you some idea. I cut a passage for myself up those perpendicular walls as the boy did up the face of the natural bridge in Virginia. Do you remember that old story in the reader? It came to me like an inspiration as I stood looking up from below, and, though I knew that I should have to work most of the way in perfect darkness, I decided that a man's life was worth some risk and that I had rather fall and break my neck while doing something than to spend hours in maddening inactivity, only to face death at last from slow starvation.

"I had a knife, an exceedingly good knife, in my pocket, and for the first few steps I should have the light of my electric torch. The difficulty—that is, the first difficulty—was to reach the shaft from the floor where I stood. There was but one article of furniture in the room, and that was something between a table and a desk. No chairs, and the desk was not high enough to enable me to reach the mouth of the shaft. If I could turn it on end, there might be some hope. But this did not look feasible. However, I threw off my coat and went at the thing with a vengeance, and, whether I was given superhuman power or whether the clumsy thing was not as heavy as it looked, I did finally succeed in turning it on its end close under the opening from which the shaft rose. The next thing was to get on its top. That seemed about as impossible as climbing the bare wall itself, but presently I bethought me of the drawers, and, though they were locked, I did succeed by the aid of my keys to get enough of them open to make for myself a very good pair of stairs.

"I could now see my way to the mouth of the shaft, but after that! Taking out my knife, I felt the edge. It was a good one. So was the point, but was it good enough to work holes in plaster? It depended somewhat upon the plaster. Had the masons in finishing that shaft any thought of the poor wretch who one day would have to pit his life against the hardness of the final covering? My first dig at it would tell. I own I trembled violently at the prospect of what that first test would mean to me and wondered if the perspiration which I felt starting at every pore was the result of the effort I had been engaged in or just plain fear.

"Inspector, I do not intend to have you live with me through the five mortal hours which followed. I was enabled to pierce that plaster with my knife and even to penetrate deep enough to afford a place for the tips of my fingers and afterward for the point of my toes, digging, prying, sweating, panting, listening, first for a sudden opening of the doors beneath, then for some shout or wicked interference from above as I worked my way up inch by inch, foot by foot, to what might not be safety after it was attained.

"Five hours—six. Then I struck something which proved to be a window, and when I realized this and knew that with but one more effort I should breathe freely again, I came as near falling as I had at any time before I began this terrible climb.

"Happily, I had some premonition of my danger and threw myself into a position which held me till the dizzy minute passed. Then I went calmly on with my work, and in another half hour had reached the window, which, fortunately for me, not only opened inward, but was off the latch. It was with a sense of inexpressible relief that I clambered through this window and for a brief moment breathed in the pungent odor of cedar. But it could have been only for a moment. It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before I found myself again in the outer air

"I worked my way up inch by inch."

The only way I can account for the lapse of time is that the strain to which both body and nerve had been subjected was too much for even my hardy body and that I fell to the floor of the cedar closet and from a faint went into a sleep that lasted until 2. I can easily account for the last hour because it took me that long to cut the thick paneling from the door of the closet. However, I am here now, sir, and in very much the same condition in which I left that house. I thought my first duty was to tell you that I had seen Hiram Sears in that house last night and put you on his track."

I drew a long breath—I think the inspector did. I had been almost rigid from excitement, and I don't believe he was quite free from it either. But his voice was calmer than I expected when he finally said:

"I'll remember this. It was a good night's work." Then the inspector put to him some questions, which seemed to fix the fact that Sears had left the house before Sweetwater did, after which he bade him send certain men to him and then go and fix himself up.

I believe he had forgotten me. I had almost forgotten myself.

CHAPTER XV.

Not until the inspector had given several orders was I again summoned into his presence. He smiled as our eyes met, but did not allude, any more than I did, to what had just passed. Nevertheless we understood each other.

When I was again seated he took up the conversation where we had left it.

"The description I was just about to read to you," he went on; "will you listen to it now?"

"Gladly," said I. "It is Wellgood's, I believe."

He did not answer save by a curious glance from under his brows, but, taking the paper again from his desk, went on reading:

"A man of fifty-five looking like one of sixty. Medium height, insignificant features, head bald save for a ring of scanty dark hair. No beard, a heavy nose, long mouth and sleepy, half shut eyes capable of shooting strange glances. Nothing distinctive in face or figure save the depth of his wrinkles and a scarcely observable stoop in his right shoulder. Do you see Wellgood in that?" he suddenly asked.

"I have only the faintest recollection of his appearance," was my doubtful reply. "But the impression I get from this description is not exactly the one I received of that waiter in the momentary glimpse I got of him."

"So others have told me before," he remarked, looking very disappointed. "The description is of Sears given me by a man who knew him well, and if we could fit the description of the one to that of the other, we should have it easy. But the few persons who have seen Wellgood differ greatly in their remembrance of his features and eyes of his coloring. It is astonishing how superficially most people see a man, even when they are thrown into daily contact with him. Mr. Jones says the man's eyes are gray, his hair a wig and dark, his nose pudgy, and his face without much expression; his landlady, that his eyes are blue, his hair, whether wig or not, a dusty auburn, and his look quick and piercing—a look which always made her afraid. His nose she don't remember. Both agree, or rather, all agree, that he wore no beard. Sears did, but a beard can be easily taken off—and all of them declare that they would know him instantly if they saw him. And so the matter stands. Even you can give me no definite description—one, I mean, as satisfactory or unsatisfactory as this of Sears."

I shook my head. Like the others, I felt that I should know him if I saw him, but I could go no further than that. There seemed to be so little that was distinctive about the man.

The inspector, hoping, perhaps, that all this would serve to rouse my memory, shrugged his shoulders and put the best face he could on the matter.

"Well, well," said he, "we shall have to be patient. A day may make all the difference possible in our outlook, if we can lay hands on either of these men"—

He seemed to realize he had said a word too much, for he instantly changed the subject by asking if I had succeeded in getting a sample of Miss Grey's writing. I was forced to say no; that everything had been carefully put away. "But I do not know what moment I may come upon it," I added. "I do not forget its importance in this investigation."

"Very good. Those lines handed up to Mrs. Fairbrother from the walk outside are the second most valuable clew we possess."

I did not ask him what the first was. I knew. It was the stiletto.

"Strange that no one has testified to that handwriting," I remarked.

He looked at me in surprise.

"Fifty persons have sent in samples of writing which they think like it," he observed; "often of persons who never heard of the Fairbrothers. We have been bothered greatly with the business. You know little of the difficulties the police labor under."

"I know too much," I sighed.

He smiled and patted me on the hand.

"Go back to your patient," he said. "Forget every other duty but that of your calling until you get some definite word from me. I shall not keep you in suspense one minute longer than is absolutely necessary."

He had risen. I rose too. But I was not satisfied. I could not leave the room with my ideas (I might say with my convictions) in such a turmoil.

To be continued.

SEVEN YEARS AN INVALID

Then She Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Is Now Well.

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 27, 1908.

I was an invalid for seven years from fearful Womb Trouble. I had falling womb, with constant pain in the back and front of my body and all down my legs. There was a heavy discharge and this made me weak, sleepless, restless and miserable. Often I was obliged to be in bed for a month at a time. I was treated by several doctors, but their treatment did me no permanent good.

A few months ago, I was persuaded to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes, and from the outset of this treatment I was better, the Constipation was cured, and the discharge lessened. I took, for the paleness, several bottles of the Iron Mixture as recommended in the "Fruit-a-tives" book, but I feel that it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me.

(Mrs.) Eliza Levesque.

Take Mrs. Levesque's advice. Take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50; trial box 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A FIGHTING WHALE.

Made Splinters of the Small Boats and Sank the Ship.

Among the tales of the whale fishery told by John R. Spears in "The Story of the New England Whalers" is that of the loss of the Ann Alexander of New Bedford. This ship was on the "offshore grounds," west of Chile and Peru, when on Aug 20, 1850, a "pod" of whales appeared, and three boats were lowered, Captain John S. Deblois going in one of them. The mate's boat soon struck one of the "pod," but the monster instantly turned with jaws open, and the men fled overboard just in time to save their lives. A moment later the whale bit the boat to pieces.

Captain Deblois at once pulled in, picked up the boat's crew and shifted a part of them to the second mate's boat. Then both the captain and second mate started to attack the whale, which had been busy meantime biting at the pieces of the boat it had destroyed. In the usual course a whale thus engaged would not have noticed the approach of the boats for a second attack, but this one had its eyes open, and it turned to meet the enemy more than halfway.

Rushing forward with a force and speed that no boat could escape, it grasped the second mate's boat, as it had that of the mate, and literally made kindling wood of it.

When Captain Deblois had once more picked his men from the sea he headed for the ship, and when there he sent the mate to gather up the oars and such other debris as might have escaped the fury of the whale. In his view it was his duty to fill his ship with oil and not to "whale for glory," as persistence in fighting a whale of this kind was sometimes called.

The mate, however, was of more reckless disposition. He managed to get within range of the whale and thrust a lance into it. Unfortunately, however, he failed to reach a vital point, and the whale, ignoring the small boat, made a dash at the ship. He struck her abreast of the foremast and crushed in her side. She sank so quickly that the crew was unable to secure anything, and they would have perished speedily in their open boats but for the fact that they were picked up by another whale ship.

Thats What Antoine Cottenoire Says of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

They Cured His Diabetes After the Doctors Had Failed to Give Him Relief—What Dodd's Kidney Pills Do and Why

St Pie De Guire, Yamaska County, Que., June 18—Special—That there is one sure cure for deadly Diabetes, and that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills is proved once more in the case of Mr. Antoine Cottenoire, a well-known resident of this place.

"I am thankful I ever heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mr. Cottenoire states. "They cured me of Diabetes. I suffered with Backache. I always felt drowsy. I had severe headaches and my limbs would cramp. I had a dizzy feeling and felt tired in the region of the kidneys with a dragging heavy sensation across the loins.

"I was treated by the doctors, but got no benefit from them. Then I heard of cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills and made up my mind to try them. I took in all three dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Today I am free from Kidney trouble of all kinds. "Dodd's Kidney Pills also cured me of stomach trouble from which I suffered for twenty-five years."

Diabetes is one of the most deadly forms of Kidney Disease. But Dodd's Kidney Pills cure any form of Kidney Disease. They also by curing the Kidneys cure all those diseases that come from disordered Kidneys, such as Rheumatism, Lumbago and Heart Disease.

RETAIL MERCHANTS HELD A PROFITABLE GATHERING AT TOWN OF BROCKVILLE

Ald. George A. Gillespie and Mr. Robert Fair, who were Peterborough's delegates to the Provincial Convention of the Retail Merchants' Association at Brockville on Wednesday and Thursday of this week have returned and are loud in their praises of the success of the convention and the whole hearted hospitality of the people of Brockville.

The attendance was large and representative and there seemed to be a steadily growing interest in the affairs of the Association. This was indicated by the wide rviews taken by the delegates upon the different subjects that came before them during the convention. The importance of being thoroughly organized was the keynote of the gathering.

On Wednesday the Association was opened the session being taken up with the appointing of committees to take up the proposed amendments to the constitution the required Provincial and Dominion legislation and other subjects pertaining to the welfare of the Association. The committees were composed of strong men who handled their reports with despatch and effect.

In the afternoon the delegates were entertained by the Brockville Association to a drive around the city, the many beauty spots being visited.

The Mayor of Brockville gave an address of welcome at the evening session after which there were addresses from President B. W. Liemann, Dominion President, J C Wetson and Dominion Treasurer, J E Beaudry. The reading of communications and the secretary treasurer's and auditor's annual statements took up the rest of the evening.

On Thursday morning the committees appointed to take up amendments to the constitution, new legislature and other matters, reported.

Mrs. Fulford's magnificent launch was placed at the disposal of the delegates in the afternoon, and they enjoyed a forty-mile trip up the St. Lawrence.

In the evening the election of officers took place as follows:—

President—B. W. Ziemann, Preston.

Vice-President — C. W. Kelly, Guelph.

2nd Vice-President — Mr. Patterson, of Lewis and Patterson, Brockville.

Provincial Treasurer — M. Moyer, Toronto.

Provincial Secretary—E. M. Trowern, Toronto.

A strong delegation from Kingston was present on the first day and urged that the convention meet next year in that city. As soon as the Peterborough delegates arrived, however, they made a determined effort to induce the Retail Merchants to meet here in 1910, and very nearly succeeded despite the start the Limestone City delegates had gained. On a vote being taken there was only a majority of four votes in favor of coming to Kingston. It is likely that Peterborough will be chosen in 1911.

Speaking of the subject taken up by the convention, the Peterborough delegates state, that every question was discussed in a broad sense. No sectional views were taken. The discussion was along the lines of protecting the public from from fakirs and scheming merchants, to make it easier to do right and harder to do wrong. The local representatives took part in the debates and their views were well received. Mr Fair was a member of the committee to take up what the Association considers the unfair cartage charges from the wholesale warehouses and mills to the railroad station.

While in Brockville Messrs. Gillespie and Fair met the new manager of the Peterborough branch of the Bank of Montreal, Mr. R. Travers, who is to succeed Mr. Montizambert. They found Mr. Travers, like all the Brockville people, a capital entertainer and are certain that he will make a favorable impression here.

STUDENTS HAD PLEASANT OUTING

Teachers and Students of the Normal School Had Pleasant Time Together Yesterday

The Normal school students and the teaching staff enjoyed a pleasant trip up to Stoney Lake yesterday. The Stony Lake was enjoyed for the day and the excursionists went up by way of the Lift Lock and canal. The weather, although chilly, did not effect the spirits of the crowd, who all made much of the last time together. Stops were made at different points and dinner was taken at Mount Julian. There are many geological features up the lakes which were intensely interesting to the students yesterday. The boat arrived back at the wharf about 7 o'clock in the evening and the attention and corteous treatment received by the officers and crew of the Stony Lake is much appreciated by all who were on board.

TO SELL THE HOPE DIAMOND

Paris, June 21.—The most important diamond sale this city has seen in many decades will take place next Thursday at the Hotel Drouot, when the famous Habib collection will be offered to amateurs and dealers. The collection was brought together by Selim Habib, a Turkish collector and merchant. The collection consists of only eight stones, but it is anticipated that the sale will realize several million francs, for it is intimated that seven of the stones formerly belonged to various crown collections of jewels, while the eighth is the celebrated Hope diamond, which he bought for $400,000 and values at twice that sum.

SAD DROWNING NEAR HESPELER

Hespeler, June 21.—A drowning occurred at three o'clock yesterday afternoon at Puslinch Lake, two miles from Hespeler.

Nelson Dickie, 18 years of age, who was out in a canoe along with three others boys. While they were making for the island about a quarter of a mile from the mainland, and when within fifty yards of the island, the canoe was upset. The canoe rolled over and over. The three boys managed to hang on, but Dickie went down in twelve feet of water. The body was recovered last night.

A party of Preston boys saved the other lads.

Dickie was the support of his widowed mother. Much sympathy is felt for her.

DOUBLE DUTY ON PULP WOOD

Washington, June 21.—Senator Aldrich, from the committee on finance, on Saturday brought in the committee's amendment to the wood pulp paragraph, which proved to be a provision for doubling the duty on wood pulp coming from countries which undertake to prohibit the exportation of logs to the United States. The amendment was recognized as an effort to retaliate upon Canada because of that country's efforts to prevent the shipment of raw logs to the United States, and Senators generally desired an opportunity to study the subject before voting upon it.

Only Six Tenants Used Baths.

London, June 21.—The contrast between the decency and comfort of American and English artisans' dwellings has often been drawn and the Lambeth Borough Councils in an effort to raise the standard of London workers' homes erected recently forty-two houses for workingmen, each equipped with a bathroom. At the end of six months a report to the council showed that only six tenants were using the baths for proper purposes. The other thirty-six used them for the storage of coal or as receptacles for rubbish.

WATCH FOR THE CUTWORM

This Pest Doing Much Damage in the Vicinity—A sure Preventative

Horticulturists in this vicinity report that the climbing cutworm is doing damage in city gardens. This pest was rampant somet hree years ago and caused terrible destruction to vegetation all through that section. To prevent such a plague as then occurred the wise gardener will "get after" Mr. Cutworm promptly, and feed him plenty of bran soaked in water sweetened with sugar and Paris green. This dainty tid-bit placed around the plants will attract caterpillars which are nocturnal and feed at night and greatly lessen their number.

Bryce Enemy of Typewriter.

Washington, D.C., June 21.—Ambassador Bryce, representative of Great Britain at Washington, probably dislikes dictating to a stenographer more than any other member of the diplomatic corps. Mr. Bryce writes most of his letters by hand, and then summons a typewriter to have them "typed." His habit of using his pen was installed before the day of the typewriter, and Mr. Bryce has held aloof from the enticements of the machine writer.

Honeymoon In Balloon.

Pittsfield, Mass., June 21.—Floating off up through cloudland in the balloon Pittsfield shortly after midnight yesterday morning, Roger Noble Burnham, a sculptor, and Harvard '99 man, of Brookline, and his bride, who was Eleanor Howard Waring, an author, also of Brookline, began an aerial honeymoon, while 5,000 people sent up their shouts of good will and happiness into the dark night.

WOMAN'S HELP NEEDED SAYS DR. ANNA SHAW

Famous Orator Who is Delegate to International Council of Women Delivers Notable Address in Toronto on Fundamentals of Suffragist Movement.

Toronto, June 21.—Dr. Anna Shaw, of the International Council, acclaimed as the world's greatest woman orator, spoke in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon in behalf of women's movements and quite fulfilled her reputation.

Inspector J. L. Hughes presided at the opening and all the local leading lady progressives were on the platform or in the audience.

Miss May Wright Sewell sat beside Dr. Margaret Gordon on one side of the platform and Dr. Stowe Gullen and Mrs. Flora Macdonald Danison were on the other. Dr. Marjorie McMurchy and Mrs. F. H. Torrington were in the front row on the floor. There were about 1,500 women and 15 men present.

Women had been told, especially in sacred and profane writing, she said, what they should do and what they should not do. Men told them what God meant them to do, but the only way to settle that was to leave God and women, as we leave God and men, to work out the problem between them.

The idealistic was the only practical person. No man was broader or larger than the ideals that inspired him. As people approached their ideals those grew and expanded and as they followed them they grew ever nobler.

"What I aspired to be and was not, comforts me," she quoted from Browning, asserting that ideals were the greatest power in the human race.

"It is better to be able to stand for a principle than not to stand, but it is better to go ahead," was one of her well-turned points that drew applause.

A New York paper recently said that the world had got along very well so far without women, and if they went back home the world would continue to get along very well. In a vein of delicate sarcasm she indicated the belief of women that they had had a great deal to do with the getting along of the world, and, indeed, some of them found the world quite a load on their backs.

"The first social unit was not man. The first social unit was the mother —" she declared, and from this were built up the more complex units of the family, the community and so forth.

"Men are never content with the old things, and we are their daughters. But nothing worse can be said of women than that we are discontented. Thank God some of us are discontented. She followed with a noble appeal for help for the cause which would provide that little children should be at least as well born as the beasts of the field; that those who lived should live under conditions which would guarantee their integrity of character and purity of personal ideals. How could women be content with all the conditions that existed, dragging their children down?

"The things that concern us are things about which we have a right to be concerned," she said.

"So long as society comes into the home and lays its hand upon the woman's children so long is government woman's business.

"God never laid on any human being an obligation without giving also the power to carry it out."

Their home occupations have been interfered with and stopped. Women were left without occupation, and had leisure to think and study and plan for the needs of humanity which they saw. They owed it to humanity and to themselves to give out of themselves what they could. Men were praised who gave money for schools and colleges and public libraries, but woman gave her life and her power, and gave more than any man who by the toil of other men rolled up vast millions and then scattered it abroad.

She went on to speak of some of the aims of the women's council.

"We are here to learn that a person may not speak our language and yet be human," was one remark.

"Woman is one-half of the divine heart and one-half of the divine brain," she declared, and as God gave them intellect and character so men and women must work together, brain to brain and heart to heart.

"None of the things there were seeking," she concluded, "would come until women participated in public affairs."

ENGLISH AUTHOR FOUND DROWNED

Llandringdod Wells, Wales, June 21.—The body of St. John Hankin, author and dramatist, was found yesterday in the River Ithon, near here. Mr. Hankin disappeared from a sanitorium at Llandrindod Wells two days ago. He was in ill-health and depressed, and left a letter to his wife ending with these words:

"I have found a lovely pool in a river and at the bottom I hope to find rest."

The writer said also that he was sinking into invalidism that he could not bear.

St. John Hankin, who was born at Southampton, 1869, was educated at Malvern and at Merton College, Oxford. He was engaged in literary work on The Saturday Review in 1890, and afterwards contributed to The Times and to Punch. His publications include "Lost Masterpieces," "Three Plays with Happy Endings," and several plays and translations from the French.

BRITISH CRUISER SAPPHO STRUCK

Dover, June 21.—A serious naval disaster was narrowly averted Saturday night when in a dense fog a Wilson liner collided with the British third-class protected cruiser Sappho off Dungenness. The blow struck by the liner was at an angle, or the cruiser probably would have been cut in two. The liner was practically undamaged and proceeded on her voyage.

The cruiser was seriously damaged, and has been beached here. She had just been commissioned for manoeuvres. She carried a crew of 270 officers and men.

When it was discovered that she was making water rapidly, the bulkheads were closed, signals were sent up and minute guns were fired. Two lifeboats from the Dungeness, aided by the Sappho boats, safely transferred 200 of the crew to the shore. The others, with their officers, remained ashore.

2,500 In Chorus.

New York, June 21.—German-Americans representing 165 singing societies, gathered at Madison Square Garden Saturday night for the opening of the twenty-second song and musical festival of the northeastern saengerbund.

Fifteen hundred men and a thousand women composed the great chorus, while an orchestra of 110 pieces augmented the melody.

Lightning Strikes Sixteen Children.

Sparat, Ga., June 21.—While sixteen children who were attending a Sunday school picnic at Martin Springs, near here, were standing under a tree to escape a shower, a bolt of lightning struck the tree and every child was rendered unconscious.

On the bodies of nine of the children the tree had been perfectly photographed by the electric bolt.

Edmonton Plumbers Strike.

Edmonton, Alta., June 21.—Union plumbers went on strike on Saturday. This is looked upon as a forerunner of a general strike of all building trades in sympathy with the striking carpenters. Painters, plasterers and lathers are ready to go out.

TO ENTERTAIN RUSSIAN DOUMA

Great Britain Will Receive Russians—King to Meet Czar

London, June 21.—The meeting of the Emperor of Russia and the Emperor of Germany in Pitkipas Bay will be counterbalanced by the presence of a party composed of influential members of the Russian Douma in England for the next fortnight, and the visit to King Edward by the Russian Emperor during the Cowes regatta.

This is the second excursion of Russian deputies to England, a party composed of members of the first Douma coming here in 1906, when the Emperor dissolved that body, as the guests of the members of the Parliament.

Whereas the first delegation embraced members with revolutionary tendencies, the coming visitors represent the more conservative factions of the Russian Government, and will practically be the guests of the nation. M. Khomyakoff, president of the Douma, and Prince Peter Troubetskoy, will head the delegation, which consists of five members of the council of the empire and 15 deputies.

An elaborate program has been prepared for their entertainment, which includes a reception by the King.

The fact that the Czar's meeting with the King takes place at Cowes will save unpleasant incidents.

WIFE REFUSED TO BE DEAD

Camden, N.J., June 21.—Charles Bradley was arrested last night on a charge of giving false information to newspapers.

Bradley loved Miss Nellie Simmons of Millville, but he had a wife, from whom he was estranged, though there was no divorce. Notices of his wife's death were inserted in several Philadelphia papers. He showed them to Miss Simmons and the ceremony was to be performed Sunday after his wife's funeral.

Unfortunately for Bradley, Mrs. Bradley saw the notices, declined to be buried and caused his arrest.

A RIOT ON RACE COURSE STRIKERS CAUSE TROUBLE

Stable Boys Ambush Horses and Drive Them Back to Stables—Crowds Become Frenzied at Delay and Pelt an Army Officers' Race.

Paris, June 21.—An occurrence unprecedented in the history of the French turf almost prevented the running of the grand steeplechase of Paris yesterday, at the Anteuil course. The meeting was disorganized and a serious riot took place, in which several persons were injured and many arrests were made.

Inspired and aided, it is stated, by Pataud and other revolutionary labor leaders, 40 militant members of the Stable Boys' Union, which was organized at the time of the postal strike, armed with revolvers, ambushed the vans conveying the horses from Maisons Lafitte, their training quarters, cut the traces and forced them back to the stables.

In the meantime, owing to the delay in calling on the events, the greatest confusion prevailed at the racetrack. It was a long time before the cause of the non-appearance of the horses became known, but finally a magistrate and a force of police set off on automobiles to the scene of the trouble, where they succeeded in putting the stable boys to flight and rescuing the racers.

It seemed at first as though the meeting would have to be abandoned and President Fallieres, who is always present on the occasion of the grand steeplechase, was advised by telephone not to come to the track. Eventually, however, the call was given for the first race. This was more than two hours after the scheduled time, and the crowds, already exasperated from waiting, became violent when a single horse presented itself for a walkover in the first event. Jockey and horse were forced to beat a hasty retreat to the paddock, as the crowd swarmed on the track and refused to permit the jockey to take his mount over the course.

The second event was for army officers, riding their own horses. For some reason or other, the crowds became frenzied when several officers cantered out for the start. The officers were pelted with missiles of various kinds and two were quite severely injured. The barriers guarding the course were broken down and hundreds of men invaded the track, several of them being ridden down and injured by the wildly excited horses.

About the same time the booths and stands were set on fire, but fortunately reinforcements of police, troops and firemen, who had been hastily summoned, arrived in time to clear the track and extinguish the flames. The police made a large number of arrests, and the remainder of the program was carried out in comparative quiet.

Arrested for Contempt.

Winnipeg, June 21.—Louis James, husband of the woman murdered on Arlington street some weeks ago, was arrested Saturday, on a bench warrant, charging him with contempt of court in not answering questions put to him in the witness box last Wednesday during the hearing of the case against the demented young Barnardo lad who, though innocent, had confessed to the murder.

A Monument to Champlain.

Plattsburg, N.Y., June 21.—Miss Sarah Phillips has made a gift to the Lake Champlain commission of an acre of land on Walcour Island, near the spot where the Royal Savage, Benedict Arnold's flagship, was sunk by the British, for the site of a monument to Samuel de Champlain.

New Wireless Superintendent.

Ottawa, June 21.—C. P. Edwards of Montreal has been appointed to the position of superintendent of Government wireless telegraph stations. The appointment was made by the board of Civil Service Commissioners.

Men and Horses Perish.

Duluth, June 21.—Five men, hostlers, and 69 horses, were burned to death late Saturday afternoon in a fire which partly destroyed the Board of Trade livery stable.

TROUBLE WITH THE INDIANS THREATEN TO OUST WHITES

Travellers in Northern British Columbia Bring in Stories of Renewed Friction Between Aborigines in Kispiox Valley and the Settlers.

Prince Rupert, June 21.—Passengers arriving by the Hudson Bay steamer Port Simpson bring startling reports of the condition of affairs at the head waters of the Skeena River, in the country around Hazelton, and also in outlying districts, particularly in Kispiox Valley where Indians are alleged to have threatened to take the law into their own hands if their grievances are not quickly adjusted, and rid the whole country of the hated whites.

For some years there has been more or less friction there between the Indians and new settlers, the Indians resenting their intrusion and claiming the whites are settling on land that belonged to them, and was theirs by right of priority.

"Thirty years ago," said an old-timer just returned from the district, "land was set aside for different tribes, and these reserves given to Indians. At that time there were no whites in the country to speak of, and although the reserves were well defined, there was no particular reason for keeping Indians on the reservations. Agitators have been at work amongst them, and last winter an outbreak was narrowly averted by the Indian agent producing telegrams promising that a commission from Ottawa would arrive by the first steamer in May, and that all their grievances would be amicably settled. No commission has arrived yet.

"At that time 'Big Frank,' of their braves, was arrested for some offence and thrown into jail at Hazelton. Reports of his arrest soon spread amongst the tribes, and they were quickly up in arms. Runners brought in word to Hazelton that Indians were gathering for an attack upon the town, and preparations were at once begun to defend the place and protect the handful of whites residing there during the winter months. Rifle pits were dug, barricades hastily erected and all made ready for a siege. Two days later 'Big Frank' broke jail. While making his way back to the reserve, it is said, he met his people marching on Hazelton, but a council of war was held and he succeeded in persuading them to return to the reserve."

At the ferry on Kispiox River, a few miles above Hazelton, notices written by Indians have been posted on trees near the ferry crossing, forbidding whites from crossing the river, and the Indian ferryman, who has run of the boat for years, has withdrawn. Reports have also reached here that two white settlers near Kitwanea, on the same river, have been driven from their land and forced to quit the country by Indians armed with rifles from the reserve on that point. Men were threatened with shooting, if they returned.

ANNUAL ELECTION OF THE OFFICERS OF THE T.A.S. YESTERDAY

Society Has Had Successful Year—Mr. J. L. Picard New President—Rev. Dr. O'Brien Will Attend International C. T. A. U. of America.

The T.A.S. held a largely-attended meeting yesterday in their rooms for the annual election of officers. Reports were read from the various committees, all showing a condition of marked progress, and being highly satisfactory in every way. Twenty new members were enrolled—a most encouraging increase.

The election of officers resulted as follows—

President—J. L. Picard.
Vice-President—J. J. Duffus.
2nd Vice-President—D. Cushing.
Recording-Sec'y—Jas. Maher.
Financial Sec'y—A. Lehane.
Treasurer—Jas. Primeau.
Marshall—Geo. Ahearn.
Ass't Marshall—Jas. Collins.
Guary—R. Begley.
Trustees—Geo. Ball, Jas. Drain, W. S. Marshall, J. A. Sharp and J. McDonnell.

Delegate to the International C. T. A.U. of America—Rev. Dr. O'Brien.

The Sports Committee, which has in charge the programme for the first of July picnic, report an excellent list of events, and a good list of prizes, all of which have been voluntary contributions. In addition to the prizes already in hand, a number of merchants have signified their approval of the adoption of the plan of obtaining such offerings by voluntary contributions only, and expressed their intention of adding something to the already good lot of prizes. The committee are delighted with the appreciation shown, and are confident that the sporting events will be the best yet held at this popular annual outing. The spirit of the society is not to make a money-making affair of the picnic, but to provide a day's outing for the members and their families at a moderate cost.

Nothing will be spared to make the day eclipse any previous effort of the society in this direction. The picnic being one of those largely patronized by entire families, special care is always taken of the children and ladies. This year a gangway, with railing at both sides, will be provided at the landing place, so that all danger of accident will be done away with.

A strong committee has been appointed to get the grounds in shape during the week, and will leave no stone uncovered that will contribute to the success of the outing.

The Young Ladies' Sodality of St Peter's, to which society the T.A.S. is largely indebted for the success of the former picnics held in the past two years, will again attend to the wants of the inner man, and have charge of the meals at the grounds.

COL. DENISON INTERVIEWED

London, June 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Col. Geo. T. Donisen of Toronto interviewed by The Morning Post respecting preference, said: "If the policy of Britain—the sober second-thought British people—is that they are to slam, bang and bar the door in the face of the outer dominions who in the interests of the whole Empire, bring friendly offers to their fellow-countrymen at home, then of course our Empire will not be able to last. As yet, England has made no move to meet Canada in our efforts. Twelve years have elapsed. The kindliest reception that has been the boast of a Cabinet Minister is that they had slammed, banged and barred the doors in our faces in Canada. We look on that as an absolutely stupid and unnecessary insult, but we see signs of a great change of opinion in England, that she may yet see the folly of her present course, that better counsels may prevail, that we may still have time to consolidate, srengthen and preserve the Empire."

Fire In Windsor Boarding-House.

Windsor, June 21.—Boarders at J. B. Hughes' house on Goyeau street were compelled to flee in scanty attire when a fire broke out early Saturday morning. One man remained so long in his room after the alarm that it was necessary to break in the door to get him to leave. He was intent upon completing an elaborate toilet, and thought he had plenty of time. The house was destroyed.

Weekly Day Off For Police.

London, June 21.—The Government has decided to adopt the recommendation of a select committee and grant the London police a weekly, instead of a fortnightly, day of rest. This means the addition of 1,500 new men and an extra penny in the pound in the police rate.

Girl Asphyxiated In New York.

New York, June 21.—The body of the young woman found in the trunk in the room of Leon Ching, a Chinaman, was identified at the morgue last night by Paul Sigel as that of his daughter Elsie. Her death is still a mystery.

Mrs. Prevost's husband kept the Balmoral Hotel, Ottawa, for a number of years, and died two months ago. Five children survive. The body was taken to Ottawa.

ENGINE PLUNGES INTO THE SEA

Vancouver, B.C., June 21.—The engine and tender of Great Northern train No. 274 left the tracks on the New Westminster side of the Fraser Bridge about three o'clock Saturday afternoon and plunged into the tide. Though the train was traveling slowly the engine failed to take the points at the curve, or the switch had been left open. The locomotive left the tracks and pulled the train along with it for some distance, smashing the wood work and twisting the steel rails. At the junction point of the tracks to New Westminster and Vancouver, the immersion occurred. There the water is deep and no trace of the engine can be seen.

George Zigweid, the engineer, and the fireman, who is an extra man, who just went on the run, and whose same is unknown to the trainmen, were drowned.

The most serious of the northern Ontario forest fires are now under control.

SAVINGS BANK IS A SUCCESS

$7,50000 has Been Deposited by the Members of the T.A.S. Society

At yesterday's meeting of the T.A.S. the banker, Mr. Quinlan gave his half-yearly report of the condition and progress of the savings bank. The report showed that the bank was started in September 1905, at the suggestion of Rev. Dr. O'Brien and that each succeeding half yearly report showed a marked increase in business over the previous six months. This is a most gratifying state of affairs and the records show that since its inception there has been $7500 deposited in the savings department, by the members.

Colombia's President Abdicates.

Colon, June 21.—Advices received here from Cartagena, Colombia, confirm previous reports that Gen. Rafael Reyes, president of Colombia, has abandoned office and sailed for Europe.

The support given by President Reyes to the United States-Panama-Colombia treaty has been partly responsible for the prevailing dissatisfaction.

Young Couple's Queer Death.

Williamsport, Pa., June 21.—Kneeling beside the lifeless body of the bride he married eight days ago, Albert S. Munro was found dead under circumstances that point to a mysterious double poisoning. On a dresser in the bed chamber, where the bodies were found, was a box partly filled with chocolates. This has given rise to the theory that the deaths resulted from poison.

Roosevelt as a Circus Man.

Naples, June 21.—The German steamer Feldmarschal has arrived here with two wolves and one wild boar, alive, which were captured by ex-President Roosevelt.

THE PRESS IS UP IN ARMS

The press throughout Canada is beginning to get wrathful over the sentence to imprisonment for 3 months of Jules Fournier, a young journalist, for saying that the administration of justice in Quebec Province is crooked. The instance cited by him is known as the Atkinson case. Atkinson was a bank forger. He declared that he shared his spoils with prominent persons. This was denied. Fournier took advantage of Atkinson's statement to make circumstances look suspicious. He had old political scores to pay. His offence followed that of Asselin, another journalist who struck Mt. Choyette and went to jail for it. The whole affair is merely impatience on the part of the offenders who made improper comments. The press demand his liberation as they contend the sentence is too severe. It will teach the press a needed lesson and incidentally those who impugn the administration of justice in Canada.

COUNTY ROADS

"That the council urge the Ontario Government to increase the grant for county roads from one-third to one-half."—County Council of Peterborough.

The movement for better roads now being agitated throughout the province means the better management of the whole system of country-road making, and in addition, greater liberality on the part of the Provincial Legislature. It requires no argument to make it plain that the present system of making roads has left the country at large in a condition of road smallpox. There are some good pieces, but a great number of very bad pieces, so that taken altogether the system of colonization and township roadmaking, at present in vogue, has been the subject of irritation and ridicule. The Government, to a certain extent, realized this, but it has not gone far enough. It sent Mr. A. W. Campbell out to preach the new gospel and some took it up. It was backed by Government contributions to the new mission field, but those contributions have proved to be far short of the need. That is where the mission failed.

* * *

Farmers, settlers and the public generally want good roads. They add enormously to the general value of the province. They make rural life livable. We need only to go back to the "days of unleavened bread" when, as it were, corduroys literally jolted the liver out of the settler, and left him and his wife a wreck before their time. Why, then, if good roads are a matter of such vast importance, should the government confine its enterprise and generosity so largely to Gowganda and places like it? It is true it gives one dollar for every two the counties give towards the improvement of the roads, but that is not enough. The work lags. The people are dissatisfied.

* * *

The people of Old Ontario have made the province what it is. Its wealth is theirs. They are now beginning to realize it. Their resources should not be expended on roads elsewhere for the get-rich-quick. It is not permanent. It will be two hundred years before the land there will be farmed. To develop the wilderness may be heroic, but it is not yet good business. The near-to-wilderness of Old Ontario, the highways carved out of the forest and carried over the swamps still demand attention. At one time that attention was local, necessarily. It is not so now. The policy, therefore, should be changed. The oversight, as in all matters of general public weal, should be largely governmental for the Provincial Government is a body especially created for that purpose. It should look after and assist in looking after local wants and local needs.

* * *

The older parts of Ontario are, in most cases, not yet half-developed. To run off with our good money to "pastures new" in order to help the speculator, the mining-broker and the foreign mining investor, and only incidentally ourselves, is bad business. Utilize more of our money where it belongs and where the people need it most in legitimate business. Discontent is increasing, and the idea is now becoming general and pronounced that the "old boys" are not getting their share. Education is being well handled. Money is being spent upon it lavishly. We could even stand more of it in that way for the back townships still have to do too much for rural schools. But when it comes to roads that everybody uses, why should the settler be compelled to pay two-thirds when the roads into Gowganda or into Cobalt or into a hundred other part [illegible] are merely the highways to doubtful riches, and the spread of forest-fires!

* * *

As the County Council of Peterborough strongly recommends, so it ought to be. Dollar for dollar out of the Government funds is still guarantee enough against waste and against asking unnecessary favors. Ninety-eight pathmasters in Smith township! What can that mean in the way of an intelligent, concerted management of public roads? The whole scheme of governmental administration in this particular needs a prompt overhauling, and nothing would be of greater value to the centres of population than a more progressive policy in this particular. The best market is that at our own doors. Distant hills are green, and so, sometimes, are the people looking at them! The ancient policy is out of date. A great forward movement, equitably financed by the government itself, is what is most needed. Who will be its apostle?

WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

Toronto has a Canadian Club "run" and ruled by women. It is a rival of the men's Canadian Club, but only in popular esteem. What the men's club aims to do for men the women's club aims to do for women. It is one very prominent feature of the intellectual life of Toronto. The following report of the secretary, Mrs. Burnett, may induce a like-mindedness in Peterborough. It is well worthy of perusal. The Toronto membership numbers six hundred.

The annual meeting of the Women's Canadian Club, of Toronto, was held in the Conservatory of Music Hall, on April 23rd, 1909, the president, Lady Moss, in the chair.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Madam President and Ladies,—It is with great pleasure that I present the following report of the proceedings of the first year of the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto.

The club was inaugurated at a meeting held in the schoolhouse of the Church of the Redeemer, on April 21st, 1908.

At that time it was known that Mrs. Humphrey Ward was expected to visit Toronto, and the secretary wrote her as directed, asking her to honour the club by being its first speaker. It was explained to Mrs. Ward that the club was organized for the purpose of hearing addresses from distinguished visitors, but that it would give the members great pleasure to entertain her at a luncheon or tea during her visit to Toronto.

Mrs. Ward replied that she was not a speaker, and that she gave her lecture only for the purpose of adding to her fund for the establishment of supervised Play Centres in the crowded cities of England, and that she had entered into an agreement to give her lecture in Toronto, and this would preclude any other public address. However, she would be very pleased to meet some of the members of the club, and that her only free time would be at mid-day of Tuesday, the day following her lecture.

The president called a special meeting of the committee and the matter was very thoroughly discussed with the result that they all agreed though very reluctantly and with great disappointment, that they must forego the possible chance of even a few words from the famous novelist, since it would be very unwise to ask the members of the club to contribute further to what promised to be merely a social function.

The next guest was Lord Roberts. The sympathies of Colonel Septimus Denison was enlisted, and he, knowing the famous Field Marshal, encouraged the secretary to believe that her offer would be kindly received. Chief Justice Sir Charles Moss expressed his readiness to introduce the speaker and the committee had high hopes of being able to make this a great occasion for the club, but again they were disappointed.

Now the attention of the committee was directed towards Lord Milner and a visit to Toronto was expected to be not of the usual two or three days, but a fortnight, and our prospects seemed very fair. However, all our efforts were unavailing, for Lord Milner could not be induced to add to the engagements which had been made for him when he had been expected to visit Canada the year before. The only result we achieved was that the Canadian Club opened its doors to a few women upon the occasion of Lord Milner's address in the Convocation Hall.

Following these, requests were also made to Earl Grey; President Eliot, of Harvard University; President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton; President Schurmann, of Cornell; President Mackenzie, of The Hartford Theological Seminary; Dr. Henry Van Dyke; Jacob Riis; Mrs. Deland; Miss Jane Addams; Sir Robert Hart; The Right Honourable Sir Wilfrid Laurier; Mr. Doughty, Dominion Archivist; Mr. W. M. Chase, N. A.; all of whom replied cordially and regretfully that press of other engagements, made in some instances a year in advance, obliged them to decline the invitation of the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto.

As against this, however, we have been so fortunate as to secure Prof. Chas. W. Colby, of McGill University, subject, "Bribery at Elections"; Prof. Adam Shortt, of the Civil Service Commission, subject, "Women's Relation to Modern Public Life"; Dr. Marie Stopes, of Manchester University, subject, "My Experiences in Japan"; Mr. Harold Gorst, of London, subject, "What the King Can Do"; Prof. John Watson, of Queen's University, subject, "Edward Caird, Man, Teacher and Thinker"; Miss Agnes Deans Cameron, of Chicago, subject, "From Wheat to Whales."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MADELINE BURNETT,
Hon. Secretary.

P.S.—In May, Hamilton Mabie will give us an address on "Literature as a Personal Resource." In June, we shall hear Miss Dendy, of Manchester, on "The Treatment of the Feeble Minded." and Miss Agnes Laut has promised us an address next October. Lady Randolph Churchill said, in reply to a letter from the secretary, that she had given up the idea of travelling in America this year, but if she decided to make a lecturing tour next winter she would write again.

M. B.

It will be noticed that the best part of the report is in the post-script.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The dictograph into which departmental managers speak to their stenographers is a wonder. Its sensitiveness is phenomenal.

---

"What became of Pat?"

"He was drowned."

"And couldn't he swim."

"He did for eight hours, but he was a union man."

---

The forward movement undertaken by the County Council at its recent session looking to a large increase in the grant made by the Ontario Government for county roads ought to be of great benefit. It is necessary to educate the government in this and similar particulars, up to the needs and rights of the counties of older Ontario.

---

In this electrical day, one hears and reads a great deal about "short circuits" without having the slightest idea of what the expression means.

The "short circuit" means simply that wires have become crossed or connected so as to form a by-path or shunt of comparatively low resistance through which so much of the electrical current passes as practically to cut out that part of the circuit through which the current originally flowed. In other words a "short circuit which may be considered as a "long circuit." The cutting out of the resistance of the long line permits the power to rush over this path of low resistance and if the apparatus was not protected by the circuit-breaker, the electrical machinery would do itself serious harm.

To prevent serious effects from accidents short-circuits of electric lighting wires in buildings a "fuse" in inserted in the circuit just inside the building. In case a nail or some other falling object short-circuits the electric wires in the house this "fuse" blows out; i. e., melts out, and throws the circuit open so no electricity can flow through the wires in the house until the "short" is found and corrected.—Popular Electricity.

At the Head.

It is stated in Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's "Life of James MacNeill Whistler" in that part which relates to his brief West Point career that the great American painter was not "soldierly in appearance, bearing or habit." Whistler's horsemanship is said to have been hardly better than his scholarship. According to General Webb, it was not wholly unusual for him at cavalry drill to go sliding over his horse's head. On such occasions Major Sackett, then in command, would call out:

"Mr. Whistler, aren't you a little ahead of the squad?"

According to Whistler's version to the Pennells, Major Sackett's remark was:

"Mr. Whistler, I am pleased to see you for once at the head of your class."

She Almost Remembered.

Little Josephine, aged four, was intently studying the pictures in a book and seemed very much interested in a picture of Charles Dickens.

Taking the book to her mother, she inquired who it was.

"That is Dickens, dear," said her mother.

The picture was wonderfully fascinating to the little girl, and when her big sister came from college in the evening she ran and got the book, turned to the picture and said:

"Sister, see! This is a picture of Mr. Darn."

Her sister replied, "No, dear, that is Mr. Dickens."

"Well," said Josephine, "I knew it was some kind of a swear word."—Delineator.

Farm and Garden

FARMING BY ELECTRICITY.

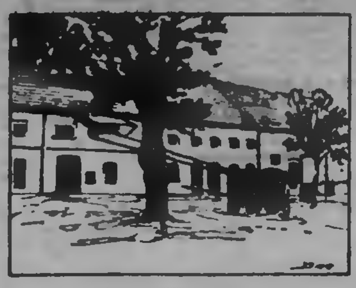
Germany Has Tried It, Will the American Follow?

Electric farming? Why not? The time was when a suggestion that the farmer in this country would have his mail delivered in a box nailed to his front gatepost would have been laughed down. But the time came, and the old style of traveling a long distance in cold and heat over rough roads to the nearest village once a week for letters and newspapers passed out forever in most parts of the country.

Then it was suggested that the farmer might get the news of quotations on products of the soil and live stock and arrange his deals by telephone while he was in his family room and that the wires which would carry the information would be constructed out of the wires of his fence. The farmer and others laughed at this idea. But the thing was done, and now the modern farmhouse has its phone the same as the city office and the city home.

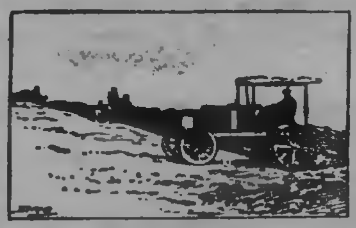


ELECTRIC GRINDING.

Will we come to electric farming? It has come in Germany, and the American farmer is not behind the farmer of Germany or any other country in intelligence and progressiveness. If electricity benefits the German farmer, why shouldn't it benefit the American farmer?

The use of electric power on large farm operations has already been highly developed in some localities in Germany. The plan is to place a central power plant at the points where it will be convenient for the nearby population.

The electricity is collected in storage batteries, which are then mounted on wheels and taken wherever the power is needed. One of these traveling batteries may be connected with a farmer's power wood saw to work up the winter's supply in a few hours. Then the battery is moved to the next farm, where it may connect with the grain mill, as shown in one of the illustrations.



ELECTRIC PLOWING.

Another set of batteries is shown as a truck and dragging a gang plow. Another storage truck at the opposite side of the field draws the plow back again. Besides the portable form of electric power, the establishment supplies light, heat and permanent power wherever required in the neighborhood.

Facts For Farmers.

Two crops of clover will remove eighty-three pounds of nitrogen, fifteen pounds of phosphoric acid and eighty-eight pounds of potash.

A ton of timothy alone removes twenty-five pounds of nitrogen, ten and one-half pounds of phosphoric acid and eighteen pounds of potash.

A twenty-five bushel crop of wheat will take off fifty-three pounds of nitrogen, fifteen pounds of phosphoric acid and twenty-three pounds of potash.

It is said that a fifty bushel crop of corn will rob the soil of thirty-two and one-half pounds of nitrogen, thirty-one pounds of phosphoric acid and sixty-five pounds of potash.

A mixed crop of clover and timothy amounting to one and a half tons per acre takes fifty-nine pounds of nitrogen, fourteen pounds of phosphoric acid and forty-six pounds of potash.

Farmers' bulletin No. 49 of the United States department of agriculture says that a mixture of two parts of cornmeal and one part cottonseed meal fed for ten weeks to lambs with pasturage gave a weekly gain of 2.96 pounds per head. The lambs were fed about eight and one-half pounds each per week of the mixture.

The Louisiana experiment station has been studying blind staggers in horses, its cause and cure, but nothing definite could be found. It is their opinion that the cause of the disease is in some way associated with the conditions of the feeding materials, such as grass or cured products of corn, brought about by the attacks of mold or fungus.

In one year the bees sent to market a crop of honey worth nearly as much as the barley crop, three times as much as the buckwheat crop, $6,000,000 greater than the rye crop and nearly $9,000,000 greater than the rice crop. All of the rice and buckwheat grown on an aggregate area of 2,126 1-3 square miles did not reach to the value of the honey by $151,[illegible].

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Toronto, Canada.—"I shall endeavor to describe to you how I felt before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I scarcely knew what it was to be well. I had awful bearing-down pains and usually before my monthly periods I suffered terribly and had to go to bed. I was not able to walk across the floor the pain was so bad. I doctored for a long time, but the doctor's treatment did not do me any good. I gave up all hopes of ever being well again until one day my husband saw the Compound advertised in the paper. He decided to get me a bottle, and I am thankful he did. I had not taken one bottle before I began to feel better, and I kept on taking it until now I am a different woman. It also helped me during maternity and childbirth. I can thoroughly recommend your Vegetable Compound to any woman who is afflicted with female troubles."—Mrs. J. M. TWEEDALE, 138 Nassau St., Toronto, Canada.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

TO MY PEACH--BASKET

And thou no more can go to church on Sunday,
If those old fogy preachers have their way.
Thou, bought for show, 'tween Saturday and Monday,
And for which I good money had to pay.
No more canst thou in jealous women's eyes
Cause envy, my bird of paradise.

I'm told thy frills and feathers hide the view.
And that because of them I cannot see
The preacher as he thunders at our pew;
What care I if the women look at thee?
Ah, "peachie," mine, I fear this mean attack.
Has emanated from behind your back.
Tell me, for doubtless thou canst recollect,
When didst thou once "absorb" the sermon's sound.
Thou triumph of Parisian architect.
That feat is more than I've done, I'll be bound.
And if thou keep the preacher's eyes from mine.
Methinks my glory should the brighter shine.

Garden of art, thing of the quick, not dead.
Dear importation from a foreign land.
I'll wear thee still with pride upon my head.
If just to show a girl can have some sand;
And if the clergy do not like the sight.
They all can go—but there, that's not polite.

What She Saw

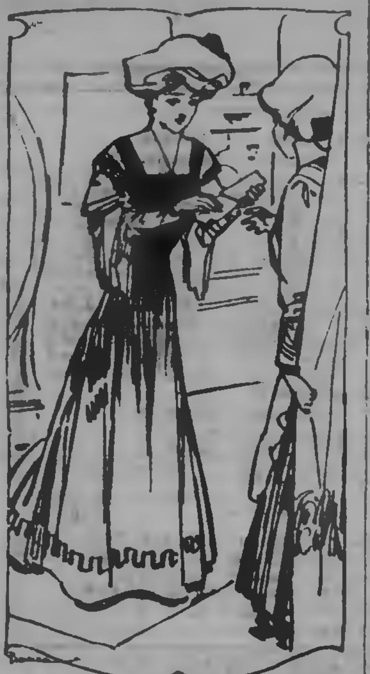
By ADELIA DURAN.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Winona glanced out of the window at the crystal avenue and watched the April dusk descend. The streets began to fill with the usual Saturday night traffic, and the whiz and clatter of flying carriages and motor cars mingled with the strident ringing of car bells and the shouts of importune cabmen.

Abruptly a big black automobile like a giant tarantula slid up to the curbing in front of the hotel opposite and stopped. A man jumped out and extended his hand to the young woman who had risen to follow. There was something instantly familiar about the straight, square shoulders under the cape of the long black coat and the way his gray alpine was drawn down over his eyes.

Winona caught her breath and involuntarily stood up. Yes! It was Richard Grayson, and he had not even glanced in her direction.



ORDERED HER TO TAKE THEM DIRECTLY TO THE POSTOFFICE.

The lights of the street were bright enough for her to see that his companion was a wondrously pretty woman, that they were laughing and talking merrily, apparently oblivious to surroundings, and that she took his arm with a plainly affectionate gesture as they went into the hotel together.

For some minutes afterward Winona stood motionless, a pain at her heart which she dared not define even to herself. There was the brilliant flash of light in the apartment directly opposite. With a little gasp of astonishment she saw young Grayson stoop laughingly and kiss the girl. An older man was standing at a little distance, and she recognized him instantly as Dick's father. He, too, laughed and came up, saluting the girl fondly on either cheek.

It was the bride, she knew, for that was the bridal suit. She had been there herself once to call upon a girl friend who had married and was in Washington on her wedding journey.

With her face on fire Winona turned away and went to her desk in a corner of the room. She took up two letters. The first read:

> Dear Nona—May I come tomorrow evening for a few moments? I have something important that I want to tell you. Say, yes, will you not? Sincerely,
>
> DICK.

This, then, was what he had meant to tell her of—his marriage. Her brief dream of happiness collapsed like a house of cards. She choked back a sudden rise of inward bitterness and unfolded the other letter. It ran:

> Dearest Winnie—Do run down to Palm Beach and stay with us in our dear little bungalow. Jack has invited a friend, somebody from somewhere, and I am depending upon you, dear girl, to help me out. Let me know by return mail. Beseechingly
>
> CLAUDIA.

Without hesitation Winona sat down and took up her pen, jabbing it viciously into the ink.

> My Dear Richard—Sorry, but it will not be possible for me to receive you tomorrow evening, as I am leaving town for some time. Yours in haste,
>
> WINONA PAULDING.

She sealed and directed this and rang for her maid. Then she dashed a hasty acceptance of Claudia Spence's invitation and sat staring through the window at the black vacuum of night.

When the maid came in she thrust the two letters into her hand and ordered her to take them directly to the postoffice. She crossed the room to a cheval glass. The face that looked back at her was youthful and delicately lovely.

She was blond and patrician, with just enough pink in her cheeks to redeem her face from pallor. Her hair was pale gold, but shining. That other girl was pretty, too, but in a rich, dark fashion that belonged to the south.

Dick's mother was from Dixie, and she recalled, with a pang, that he was a worshiper of southern women. A little sob shook her. She turned away, covering her face with her hands. Hot tears sprung through her quivering lashes, but she dashed them away in self contempt and went into the next room to pack her trunk.

She reached Palm Beach eighteen hours later. Her courage had rallied amazingly under the stimulating change of scene, and she felt almost happy again as they drove home through borders of sun kissed palm and palmetto.

An hour afterward Winona emerged on the funny, squat little piazza of the bungalow, radiant in a gauzy gown of pink liberty chiffon. Mrs. Spence caught her by the hand and drew her up to the small coterie already assembled and waiting for her.

"Mr. Grayson, Miss Paulding," she said conventionally.

Winona started, flushed, paled and poised herself admirably. She held out her hand. Dick had risen and was pressing her fingers with elaborate cordiality, but his own were cold with excitement, and he subdued his voice to hide its unsteadiness.

The group fell into conversation. Then, two by two, they drifted away, leaving them together, alone. The moon had come up, flooding everything with its magic white light till it was as clear as day.

Young Grayson looked at Winona, and she met his glance with an indignant flash of her eyes.

"What made you run away from me, Nona?" he asked gravely.

"You! Why, I was not even dreaming of you," she retorted, with pink cheeks.

"Evidently. That is why I asked you the question."

"You have forfeited all right to ask me questions of any sort," she flung back unguardedly and bit her lips when it was too late.

"Winona! What do you mean by that?" His eyes held hers dominantly, and she found her lips framing the words despite herself.

"That other woman—that—that—your wife!" She blurted it out in sheer desperation at last.

"Ah!" And, considering the gravity of the situation, her companion did a most remarkable thing—he laughed uproariously. When his mirth had somewhat subsided he bent over and caught her little hands in his big ones and held them. His words fell rapidly.

"The dear old governor took it into his head to marry a second time when down in Richmond last month. An urgent telegram called him back to Washington on business, and he was forced to leave her behind. As luck would have it, the very day he was scheduled to arrive he was taken with the grip. I had to go to the train to meet the lady, while he remained in the apartment to receive her."

He paused a moment for breath. Then he went on: "I found your note in my box about 10 o'clock. It hurt me, and it made me angry too. I put down everything and took the first train south in response to a pressing invitation from Jack."

A swift little sob of relief escaped Winona's lips. She looked up with luminous eyes. The color surged into her face.

"But—but we were never more than friends. There was nothing—I—you—there never was anything between us." She finished with a flash of the old coquetry. Her lips were still parted—scarlet, humid, tremulous. Young Grayson made no effort to resist temptation.

"But there was going to be—there is, and there always will be?" A step sounded on the gravel walk. "Answer me—quick!"

There was.

Wm. P. Lindsay, ex-manager of the Bank of British North America, at Levis, has been arrested in connection with the recent forgeries.

A Very Secret Drawer.

"A secret drawer is sometimes very hard to locate in a large cabinet," said a dealer in curios. "I had such a piece of furniture in the store one winter and knew the drawer was there from a reference to it in an old inventory, but in spite of all my efforts I couldn't discover just where it was. I concluded that the spring must be concealed somewhere about the very ornate carving which ornamented the sides, but it escaped my scrutiny until one day when I had a bit of inspiration. Such drawers are usually made of sheet steel both for security and on account of its thinness, and I simply passed a small pocket compass up and down before the carving. At one certain point the needle, just as I had anticipated, was deflected, and I knew I had at last hit on the right spot. I located it within a few inches and then pushed and prodded every projection with the point of a darning needle until something gave way and out jumped the drawer. It was very cleverly masked at the edges by the curves of the pattern, and nobody in the world would suspect its existence. I had hoped that I might find something of value in it, but I was disappointed. It was quite empty."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The End of the World.

London suffered from several earthquake shocks in 1761, and prophecies of the total destruction of the city were rife. The London Chronicle says:

"April 5 was the date named for the catastrophe, and for days before the roads from town were thronged with the vehicles of those who were seeking safety in flight in spite of the threat of one of the papers of the day to publish the names of all such cowards. Even the more courageous elected to pass their nights out of doors, Hyde park being the most popular camping ground.

"But nothing ever so got on the nerves of Europe as the coming of the first thousandth year of the Christian era. The churches were thronged, the houses deserted, and all good Christians slept in the open in readiness for that end of the world which was expected to come at the proper date. The end of the world has had many prophecies to its discredit.

"And people who were nervous about Mother Shipton's prophecy—

> "And the world to an end shall come
> In eighteen hundred and eighty-one—

"are still alive and criticising the rhyme and the reason."—Chicago News.

SEASHORE FASHIONS.

Smart Styles Observed at Atlantic City Hotels.

HATS WORN WITH BALL GOWN

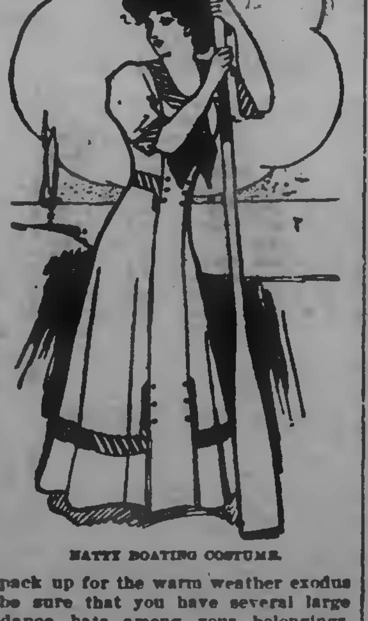
The Fascination of Board Walk Auction Sales—Some Linen Frocks Thought Cheap at the Hundred Dollar Mark. A Hat Trimming Contest.

My Dear Elsa—When I returned from Atlantic City I found your very jolly letter awaiting me. No, I have never been as enthusiastic as you are over the attractions of the Jersey city by the sea. The board walk is just a bit of Broadway with an ocean exposure, sans policemen—that is, visible ones—and wheeled chairs to run one down instead of Gotham automobiles. But I do enjoy stopping at the Duff-Gordon, even if it is the most hideous piece of architecture of its kind. And I really don't see why an American hotel is called upon outwardly to resemble an overgrown eastern mosque trimmed up with bonbon effects in pistachio green, do you? Inside the hotel is really charming. The dining room and ballroom are magnificent, and the shops in the arcade under the building are fascinating with their varied assortment of wares. They remind one pleasantly of shopping excursions in similar inclosed places on the continent. I wouldn't have Dick know it for anything, but the first night we spent at the hotel I lost my way in the corridor, and it was only luck that got me back to the elevator and the escort of the very polite manipulator of the lift that enabled me finally to reach my room. Talk about cats in strange garrets! Why, I felt like a mouse in a maze.

The horse show was on during our stay, and the place was packed with smart visitors. And the gowns worn by the women! Well, I'll tell you about them later. The show this year was held inside the $1,000,000 pier built, I believe, by a Philadelphia man of the name of Young, who seems to have a fad for putting up structures running halfway out into the Atlantic. And on this one he has had built at the extreme end a house, in which he and his family are going to live the year round. It's a rather large cream colored stone affair, whose facade bristles with the statues of "ten thousand saints," doing penance, some one said, for the sinners who walk the board walk. But the boxes of petunias and old fashioned flowers that smile at one from the window ledges are charming.

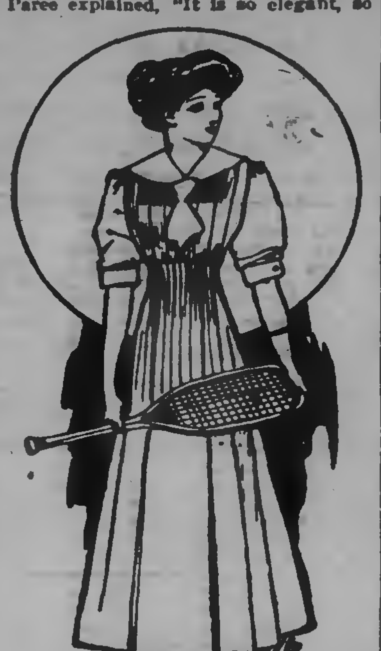
At the big Saturday night Duff-Gordon ball the costumes were gorgeous, and the whole affair to a looker-on took on the character of a costume dance so "period" were the gowns and hats worn. Yes, I did say hats, for, strange as it may seem, the most ballish of ball frocks were topped by chapeaux of charmingly picturesque types. No gloves covered milady's hands, but her handsome rings and bracelets were very much in evidence, and I noticed that the "pinkie" finger carried a diminutive reproduction of the ring worn on the third digit. These two dress features, the hat worn with the dancing frock and the absence of gloves with the same costume, may be taken as an indication of what one will see at smart hotel and casino dances during the coming summer. So when you pack up for the warm weather exodus be sure that you have several large dance hats among your belongings. The scarfs, too, that the pretty girls threw about their shoulders while sitting out dances were perfectly bewitching. And there is a "way" that you must have with you about managing these dainty vanities of vanities if they are to have any coquettish value. The Spanish girl, with her fan antics, cannot get in more effective touches than the American demoiselle who is up in the language of the new scarfs.



NATTY BOATING COSTUME.

A fascinating scarf that is really practical is of white chiffon cloth studded thickly with silver sequins in a geometrical design. This fascinating thing I bought at one of the auction stores that infest the board walk. And it's lots of fun to drop into these sales. The room is a shop without windows or doors, an al fresco sort of go-as-you-please place, and the articles for sale range all the way from tiny silver good luck Billikins to silk rugs, etc. When the auctioneer is witty—and he usually makes pathetic attempts at wit—an amusing half hour is apt to result from a visit. At the best auction sales, where really handsome things are sold, the goods were charged and shipped to one's home free of charge and at the risk of the firm, who makes good breakages or damages of any sort. But one has to be a judge of wares not to be woefully cheated. One afternoon I saw a trustful man buy a dining room electroller of Tiffany glass—so called by the wily auctioneer—for $50, and I know for a certainty that the glass was just the plain everyday colored variety, and the price would have been exorbitant at $25. But at the same sale a woman bought one of those pretty Japanese hanging baskets, the kind that work on a pulley, for a dollar, and the thing would have been sold in New York for $5.

Strolling aimlessly along one afternoon, I saw in a French shop some very smart linen gowns. Entering, I asked madame the price of a white embroidered princess frock that had particularly struck my fancy. One hundred and twenty-five dollars was the modest price, but the lady from Paree explained, "It is so elegant, so simple, so exclusive, and the little linen frock, you know, is going to be chic for morning and afternoon bridge parties this summer." I objected to the width of the front panel and made my exit as decently as I could after purchasing the two outing dresses I have sketched for you. Don't you like the tennis frock? It's of French gray linen, with white collar, cuffs and tie, and the skirt is so nice and full that one can tear across the court without doing a somersault, as I actually accomplished in a narrow skirt last summer. And on a hot day such a costume is just as good on the golf links. You know, at our place on the sound we do a lot of canoeing, so I thought the boating gown would be a fine model for my home seamstress to copy.



FROCK FOR THE TENNIS GIRL.

Talking of clothes reminds me of a hat trimming contest Elizabeth Z. invited a lot of us to last week. You know she always has some sort of philanthropic scheme on hand, and this time her idea was to have the clan gather and set at work upon conjuring spring hats for seventy-five girls of the east side—here in New York. We went early in the afternoon and found in the library a collection of hats, ribbons, flowers and all the usual chapeau trimmings, together with enough sewing apparatus to stock a Fifth avenue dressmaking establishment. We worked like beavers, and at the end of two hours a famous man milliner came in and passed judgment on the creations before him, awarding prizes for the best models—mere trifling remembrances most of them, but the fifth prize was a gorgeous hat trimmed by Marjorie Van X., and it wasn't bad, either. But that atrocious milliner did not hesitate to express his mind about the designs, which he thought were "not much to brag of." We were crestfallen at this criticism, but our spirits were slightly revived at 5 in the afternoon, when lots of men dropped in to see our creations. They quite dispelled monsieur's harsh words with their praises of our efforts, and they even refrained from saying things when they became tangled up in a stray bolt of ribbon or when sitting down upon chairs strewn with pins and needles. Cake and tea, which came in later, soothed all our frazzled sensibilities. This party was a welcome change from incessant puzzle and bridge affairs and, besides, proved a salubrious occasion for the poor girls who received the hats. A small price was attached to each creation, as Elizabeth explained, to make the girls feel independent and to overcome her pet objection about the average charity that pauperizes the poor. So when you feel like doing a good deed in a naughty world invite your friends to a hat trimming contest to aid some "worthy cause." Ever most sincerely yours,

MABEL.

Rhubarb Jelly.

For rhubarb jelly the stalks are cut and stewed gently until tender. To a quart of the rhubarb a pint of sugar and a little more than a half box of gelatin are allowed. Soak the gelatin in a little cold water and add to the rhubarb while the latter is warm, rubbing the mixture through a sieve. Pour into a mold and serve with whipped cream. When the stalks are young and tender, as they are at present, the rhubarb need not be peeled.

"The points you make are strong ones," she said, "but they lead undeviatingly to the conclusion that you would make an excellent father for me. You have all the necessary qualifications, but just now I am looking for a husband."

REV. JONATHAN GOFORTH HAS OPENED A WEEK'S REVIVAL IN PETERBORO'

Rev. Jonathan Goforth opened a week's series of meetings in Peterborough yesterday, preaching at St. Paul's church in the morning, addressing a mass meeting at St. Andrew's church in the afternoon and conducting the evening service at Knox church. Mr. Goforth, who is one of the leading missionaries of the Presbyterian church of Canada in China was actively identified with the great revivals in Honan and Manchuria, and he tells a wonderful story of the work of the spirit of God in those places. He is an impressive speaker and was heard by large audiences yesterday. The revival in Manchuria, which is Mr. Goforth's principal subject, was greatly blessed by God and hundreds of Chinese men, women and children. There is no doubt, Mr. Goforth says, but that the spirit of God was at work in China and he believes it will be at work in Peterborough before the week is over. A great revival is looked for here.

Each afternoon this week a service will be held in St. Paul's church at 3.30 o'clock and also each evening at 7.45 o'clock in the same place. A children's rally will be held on Friday afternoon, June 25th, at 4.15 o'clock. Meetings for business men will be held each evening in the Y.M.C.A. parlors at twelve o'clock.

At St. Paul's church yesterday, Mr. Goforth said that Peterborough could be blessed with a revival if people were really desirous of having one and would pray earnestly for a visitation of the spirit of the Lord.

24TH FIELD BATTERY BEGAN MARCH THIS MORNING

Made a Fine Showing on the Line of March—Expect to Reach Cobourg This Evening at 6 o'Clock.

The members of the 24th Field Battery left this morning at 7.30 on their long march to Cobourg where they will go into camp for the next twelve days. They carried four guns with twenty men to each gun and Major Young was in command. The new uniforms of the Battery and the splendid soldiery appearance made a good showing on the line of the march. Lunch will be partaken of at Bailieboro and it is expected that Cobourg will be reached at six o'clock this evening.

THE HEALTH OF THE CITY IS RAPIDLY REACHING NORMAL

The medical health officer, Dr. Macpherson, reports a continued decrease of contagious diseases. Reports of a grossly exaggerated character have been in circulation especially as to deaths of people in quarantine, who were not even seriously ill or not ill at all. Some distress has been caused by these unfounded reports. The hospital tents are serving all the purposes of isolation hospitals. One is northwest of the Hilliard farm and the other at Jackson's park. There are some nineteen cases of smallpox, but none of them is of the virulent kind and as they are decreasing in number and every attention is being given to their suppression no further anxiety may be felt on that score. At the present time the Mexican gypsies are producing a much greater sensation.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, LINDSAY, RESTORED AND DEDICATED

The Lindsay Post has a full account of the ceremonies in connection with the opening of St. Mary's church in Lindsay—

On Sunday morning St. Mary's church, which has, during the past six months, been undergoing extensive improvements, was re-blessed and re-dedicated to the service of Almighty God by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, of Peterborough.

Shortly after the destructive fire at the church in December last, and during the progress of the repairs to the edifice, the very wise idea was suggested by Venerable Archdeacon Casey that it would be useless, as well as unsatisfactory to patch up and improve the portions of the interior which had suffered from the conflagration, and leave the major portion untouched. Accordingly a meeting of the congregation was held, and with commendable unanimity it was resolved to renovate and beautify the church as an act of thanksgiving to God for it being saved from total destruction.

The contract was placed in the hands of the well-known ecclesiastical decorators, the Thornton-Smith Co. and early in January their splendid artists started to work on the structure. The result of their labors has been, to put it mildly, phenomenal. St. Mary's has been transformed interiorily into one of the handsomest edifices in the Dominion, and its appearance is a tribute alike to the artists as well as the congregation. A citizen who visited the church this week stated that he was surprised at the gorgeousness and richness of the interior. It was some time since he had entered the edifice, and the beauty of the interior surprised him.

Venerable Archdeacon Casey is justly proud of St. Mary's church, and that pride is shared by the members of the congregation. The decorative work has cost considerable, but the congregation has contributed most liberally towards paying for the work, and on all sides are heard expressions of satisfaction and delight at the beautiful change which has been effected by the painters' brush.

A large number from Peterborough went up to attend the re-dedication.

THE PETERBOROUGH CLUB WILL HAVE FINE NEW QUARTERS

The new quarters of the Peterborough Club are being rapidly moulded into shape. The old "Bank of Montreal" building is a thing of the past. The main door that formerly fronting on Water street has been turned into a window and the massive oak doors have been placed in the enlarged main entrance on Simcoe street, where the old house entrance used to be. Inside the chief alteration is in the staircase. The old hall was about 8 feet square with a spiral staircase. A partition has been knocked out, the size of the hall doubled and the staircase provided with a landing half way up. The main room downstairs will be the full size of the old bank room and will be provided with an English billiard table, handsome decorations, and either mission or Flemish furniture. It is not likely that the third storey will be made use of this year. The other rooms remain pretty much as before except where one more is provided by the removal of the vault.

EXCURSIONS TO PETERBOROUGH FROM SEVERAL OUTSIDE POINTS

Two Excursions From Lindsay in Next Few Days — One From Roseneath End of Week.

Peterborough is to be as much of a favorite in the matter of excursion points this year as ever. There are two excursions coming from Lindsay alone in the next few days. The Presbyterian Sunday School will run their anual excursion to Jackson park, on Saturday, June 26th, while on Wednesday July 7th, the Lindsay corps of the Salvation Army have arranged for a monster celebration. They will be the guests of the local corps while here and the band are arranging an interesting day for the visitors. They will come by special train and will make Jackson park their headquarters.

Roseneath and their band are bringing an excursion to the city the latter part of the week.

VICTORIA COUNTY DWELLING BURNED TO THE GROUND

The commodious residence of Mr. John Hartnett, three miles south of Lindsay, was burned to the ground Friday afternoon at four o'clock.

The fire occurred while Mr. and Mrs. Hartnett were in Lindsay, word being conveyed to them by one of the neighbors. They had only left their home about ten minutes when the fire broke out, and in a very few minutes the entire building was enveloped in flames, and is to-day a total wreck.

The house was left in charge of the servant girl, and she has not the slightest idea of the cause of the fire, although it is thought that it was caused by a spark falling on the floor from the kitchen range in the summer kitchen at the rear of the residence. When Mr and Mrs. Hartnett left home there was very little fire in the range.

One of the nearby neighbors was the first to notice the fire, and in a few minutes dozens of neighbors were on hand and did everything possible to save the building, but the fire had gained too great a start, and aided by the strong northwest wind, the fine dwelling was soon burned to the ground.

They succeeded in saving part of the contents downstairs, but their wearing apparel and upstair furniture are a total loss.

The residence, which was a very modern one in every respect, was erected three years ago, and was bricked this summer, the bricklayers only completing their work last week. The loss is a severe blow to Mr and Mrs Hartnett, and is estimated at 4,000, the building costing in the neighborhood of $3,000. The house was insured for $1,100 and the contents for $200. Mr. Hartnett will erect another residence at once, and in the meantime will reside in Lindsay.

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Death of Mr. John Lee Who has Resided in this City for the Past 64 Years

There are many people in Peterborough, who will regret to hear of the death of Mr. John Lee, which took place at the home of his son, Hammond Lee, 172 Charlotte street, over the Canadian Machine Telephone Co.'s exchange office, at nine o'clock Saturday night. The deceased was 67 years of age, and was a resident of this city for 64 years, having come here from Belfast, Ireland, with his parents when only three years old. Upon arrival in the city the old folks settled at the corner of Smith and George streets, and when the deceased was 17 years of age he erected the Octagon House, now standing at 706 George street, just a few yards from the old homestead, and there he lived continuously until some nine months ago when he retired from active life and went to live with his son. He was a millwright by trade, and was employed in the Auburn Woollen Mills for 40 years. He enjoyed good health all his life, and was always active and faithful to his duties. He was well known to all the old residents and many of the new ones, and was greatly respected. He was married twice, the first time to Miss Carlyle, sister of Mr. John Carlyle, of Ashburnham, and some years later to Miss Moffitt, daughter of Mrs. D. D. Gallety, and sister of the late Dr. John Moffitt, of Norwood. He was a life-long member of St. Paul's church, and also a member of the A.O.U.W.

The late John Lee is survived by one brother Robert, of the W. A. Murray Co., Toronto, and four sons, Fred, of Toledo, Ohio; Rollie, of Toronto, and Bruce and Hammond of the city.

The funeral will be held to-day and will be private. The services will be conducted at the house by Rev. Mr. Pogue, but interment in Little Lake cemetery will not take place until Tuesday afternoon when Fred Lee, of Toledo, Ohio, will arrive.

BREAD ADVANCES ONE CENT A LOAF

The Staff of Life Goes up in Price Because of Dearer Flour

On Saturday night a meeting of the local bakers was held, to discuss the situation in the baking trade, brought about by the recent advance in the cost of flour. It was decided, almost unanimously to advance the price one cent per loaf. For some time bread has been selling at 5c for the one and one-half pound loaf. It is stated by those who pay for the flour that the advance in this article is about 70 cents per 100 pounds on some grades and over $1.00 per 100 lbs on the finer. About how long the increase will keep up is not known possibly for some months, or until the season's crops of wheat reaches the millers. In the meantime those on whom the advance falls heavily can economize on ice cream, 5 cent shows, newspapers, candy, gum or other important necessaries of life, and we will all pull along reflecting that the deserving baker is getting what is about his dues. He has a laborious and trying time at any time and if half of us were compelled to do his business under the conditions in which it is done we should put bread at 8 cents per loaf at the least.

CITIZEN'S COW RAN AT LARGE

A Fine of $2.00 Was Imposed at the Police Court This Morning

A citizen residing in the west end of the city was fined $2 this morning at the police court for allowing his cow to run at large on Friday last.

A witness stated that the cow had been out on the street but did not state that any damage had been done.

The defendant told the Magistrate that he had seen the owner of the property where his cow was pastured with the object of having the fence repaired. This had been done but the animal had broken out again.

The Magistrate held that he was liable for the actions of the cow, and imposed the above fine to be paid in ten days.

MASONIC BRETHREN ATTEND SERVICE

They Heard able and Timely Address at Murray St. Baptist Church

Yesterday the members of Peterborough Masonic Lodge attended divine service at Murray street Baptist church, and heard a very interesting and able sermon, preached by Bro. Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the church. Rev. Bro. Webb is also chaplain of Peterborough Lodge.

The members assembled at the Masonic Hall and marched to the church. The service being held at 4 o'clock. The church was very comfortably arranged for the accommodation of the visitors. The efficient choir added to the interest of the service, with an anthem and solo by Miss Miller.

Rev. Bro. Webb's sermon was given from an appropriate text, and dealt with the completion of King Solomon's temple, from which he drew illustrations bearing on the life of the individual and his work and conduct through life, on his attitude to the community as a citizen, and to those with whom he came in contact. In the course of his remarks he referred to the principles of the Masonic Order and to the objects kept in view by the society, which made at all times and in all places for the uplifting of man and his moral advancement.

At the close of the service the gathering returned to the Masonic Hall, in a body, and afterwards dispersed.

BAND OF GYPSIES WERE ARRESTED THIS MORNING

The Officers Arrived in the City at Noon With the Entire Camp—Are Quartered at the County Gaol—Another Party Likely to be Arrested.

This morning County Constable Geo. Cochrane sallied out on a mission into the territory above Fowlers Corners, to look up the doings of the band of Mexican gypsies who have been carrying on in the section to the north for the last week. Word was phoned in yesterday that the gypsies were coming south, leaving the neighborhood of Bobcaygeon and making for Peterborough or Lindsay, and alarming the farmers en route. In the party are about fifty men and women with thirteen waggons and horses. When they camp at night they take down fences and turn their stock into the fields, regardless of the damage to the crops. It is understood that they came into Ontario from the west by way of the Soo and have been working around in the back country. When they left Bobcaygeon word was sent along the route to look out for them, and at Fowlers' Corners further intelligence was supplied.

ARRIVAL IN THE CITY

Shortly after twelve o'clock the officers arrived back to the city with the entire camp. The thirteen caravans, drawn by poor looking horses and which were driven by ill looking drivers presented an unique spectacle and one which is not seen very often. Within the dirty looking caravans were the women and children of all ages. Warden Scott and Detective Greer led the procession with the High County Constable and the rest of the officers distributed between every two or three waggons. The gypsies were arrested at Fowler's Corners and although loudly protesting did not cause any trouble. On arriving at the county gaol the women started to abuse the officers for bringing them to such a place. Strange to say the men had little to say and sat in their places in the waggons and seemed to take the affair as a joke. The whole outfit was put into the big court yard and the gates locked to keep out the curious crowd. It was while in here that the men started at the officers. They claimed that they were not the guilty party and stated that the robberies and damages had been caused by another band. P. C. Newhall, who understood their language had to put up with the greater part of the abuse as it was to him they did most of the talking. The older women were elaborately decorated with all kinds of jewellery and beads, and even the small children had pieces of Mexican money tied about their hair. Their clothes were the regular costume worn by travelling gypsies. One young girl who appeared to be about eighteen years of age was extremely pretty. Her teeth were mostly all gold and about her neck were beautiful strings of beads. Gold and silver bracelets encircled her small wrists while on her fingers were different kinds of rings.

The children are bright and healthy looking but very dirty and poorly clad. The men are a villainous looking lot and appear fit to undertake any crime.

It is reported that another band are encamped in the south end of the city and more arrests may be made this afternoon.

PRELIMINARY HEARING.

The band of gypsies arrested this morning are being given a preliminary hearing this afternoon at the County Police Court before Magistrate Edmison.

MEMBERS OF THIRD PRINCE OF WALES DRAGOONS IN CAMP

Today sees the opening of the annual summer camp of the 3rd Dragoons at Nassau. From present indications the camp looks as it it would be even a greater success than has been anticipated. Everything is in first class running order, and the men are elated at the bright prospects. At present there are about 175 officers and men and as many horses on the grounds and it is expected that before evening their numbers will be brought up even higher. The brigade is made up of men from Peterborough, Warsaw, Millbrook, Colborne and Trenton and they are a fine looking lot of men.

The parades and manoeuvres will be commenced tomorrow morning at 9.30 and it is expected that a large number of Peterborough people will take advantage of the proximity of the camp to visit it during the next few days.

At Jubilee the crowd had dinner and supper in picnic fashion, and a long list of sports was run off. The events were well contested and provided good amusement. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. G. Maitland, Mrs Watts, Mrs H. Gibbs and Alderman Duncan and Mr Maitland. ## T. A. S. PLAYERS CAPTURE BOTH THE BATTING PRIZES

Yebbie Flaherty, the second baseman for the T.A.S., has the honor of making the first home run of the season at Riverside Park Saturday, and by so doing wins the box of cigars donated by Mr. W. F. Talbot. The homer could not have arrived at a more desirable time as the bases were well occupied when the hit came. To Abe Quinlan goes the Belleghem picture for making the first three two-baggers, he having made two in the West End game and one in the first time up in the contest between the Strathconas and his team on Saturday. Both prizes have been won fairly, and the Review takes this opportunity of congratulating the players on the splendid showing they have made.

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

A FAIR HIT.

Rule 44.—A fair hit is a legally batted ball that settles on fair ground between home and first base, or between home and third base, or that is on fair ground when bounding to the outfield past first or third base, or that while on or over fair ground touches the person of the umpire or a player while on fair ground.

A FOUL HIT.

Rule 45.—A foul hit is a legally batted ball that settles on the foul territory between home and first base, or home and third base, or that bounds past first or third base, or, while on or near fair ground touches the person of the umpire or a player whil on foul ground.

The city league had the largest gate receipts on Saturday yet taken. The fans are turning out in good numbers, and the games are getting better every Saturday.

Kendry is doing good batting for the Strathconas and is a hard worker all the time.

Some of the spectators got away with a trade mark as the grandstand is being painted.

Wanted—A good battery, four infielders and three outfielders to represent the Strathconas at Riverside Park. Apply to Bill Metheral.

Park street are strong in the pitching department and on the whole the work of the players has been satisfactory.

The T.A.S. have a good pitcher, and the batting of the team is always a feature of the game.

Ther was some little dispute about that hit of Yet. Flaherty's which sailed over the left field fence. However, it was only momentary, and the fast second sacker is entitled to full honors.

The work of Dan McCabe as official umpire has been highly satisfactory and is appreciated both by the fans and players alike.

Jack Oldham's bunch of ball tossers play like winners. An early lead against them does not apparently bother the West Enders.

Here's a sample of the confidence displayed by one of the twirlers Saturday, with his team in the lead, the opposing team at bat with two gone, a man on third, and the batter with two strikes against him. These are the identical words; "This is the last one, Don; hang on to it"—and it was, for the batter never came near it.

FOOTBALL MATCH AT LAKEFIELD

Havelock Wins by Score of 3-0 in Return Game--Travel to Lakefield and Back in Auto Bus

The Havelock football team journeyed to Lakefield on Saturday evening to play a return game with the team of that village. They arrived in Peterborough on the 4.48 C.P.R. and took the auto bus to Lakefield, returning in time to take the midnight train home.

At the game in Havelock last week the home team won the game by a score of 3 to 0, while on Saturday they were again victorious by 3 to 0. The Havelock players are a husky lot of players and the Lakefield team attributed their defeat to the fact that their opponents were much heavier, a number of them being over 200 pounds. The Lakefield boys took their defeat gamely though and played a good game.

There was a large attendance of the villagers to see the game and much interest was manifested.

The Difference.

TENNIS

The schedule of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association covering inter-club matches is being carried out in a very satisfactory manner, the games being arranged for and completed promptly. The various clubs representatives are evidently performing their duties in a businesslike manner and deserve the commendation of all concerned.

The inter-club matches thus far have been productive of some of the finest tennis seen in Peterborough in years. The keenness with which some of the games have been contested has produced a classy game of the highest order. On Saturday the match between the Golf Club and the YMCA was one of the best exhibitions of tennis seen on the Y. courts this year. ## NAVAL RED TAPE.

The Result of Having Neither Coffins Nor Graves in Stock.

A case once occurred, which is vouchsafed for by naval officers who were present and who tell of it as a joke, showing the absurdities to which red tape can go. About twenty years ago a certain ship was in a foreign port. One of the men was taken sick and on the recommendation of the surgeon was sent to a hospital on shore. The man finally died, and it became necessary to bury him.

The simple and straightforward method would have been to call in an undertaker and have him arrange for a decent casket and a lot in the cemetery. This would be the usual procedure with a business man or ordinary citizen. The regime of economy and reform, however, would not permit of so simple a course. What actually occurred was this:

The surgeon made a requisition on the paymaster for one coffin. Naturally he did not have one in stock and therefore it was forwared to the fleet paymaster, who also, not being in the undertaking business, had no coffins on hand. Then the admiral directed the fleet paymaster to purchase one coffin after obtaining prices from six reputable dealers. The same course had to be followed in securing the grave. The surgeon made requisition on the paymaster for one grave. Strange as it may seem, the paymaster had no graves in stock. Neither had the fleet paymaster. Consequently the commander in chief directed the fleet paymaster to procure bids from six reliable dealers in graves and purchase one from the lowest responsible bidder.

All this, of course, is a screaming farce, but it is the horrible example to show what comes when common sense and experience are set aside to give room for the play of amateur and academic fancy.—Engineering.

REPAIRING CHINA.

Rare Specimens That Can Be Mended at Home.

SOME TRICKS OF THE TRADE

A Slight Talent For Modeling Is Necessary to Do the Work Scientifically. Homemade Cements That Are Good Substitutes.

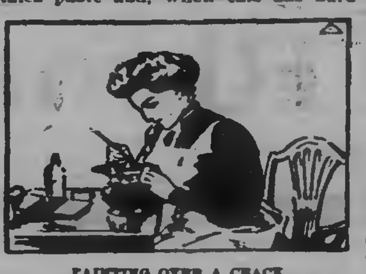
When a handsome china cup loses its handle or a spray of flowers its stalk the deficiency can be replaced by a new bit of modeling, cast in a plaster of paris mold. If there is a corresponding stalk intact upon the china the cast for the new one can be made direct by merely oiling the duplicate and pressing a layer of potter's clay over it until it has taken the impression of its shape and then pouring on it a mixture of plaster of paris and water—about the thickness of thin cream—until the clay is covered with a coating of plaster half an inch deep. This hardens very quickly, and when it has been removed and lined out with oil or soapy water all that remains to be done is to fill the plaster mold with molten lead or solder or plaster of paris and gum arabic mixed with hot water until it becomes a thick paste and, when this has hardened, to dislodge it with the help of a blunt penknife and to fix it in position with cement and color it.



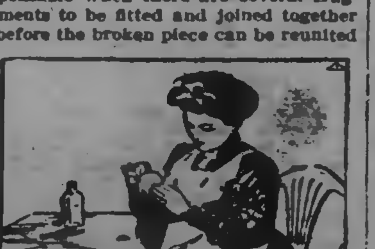
PAINTING OVER A CRACK.

If there is no duplicate from which to make the plaster cast the repairer must rely upon her own inventive genius to construct a little model in the potter's clay, and except where it is a conventional design that is to be reproduced, which must be drawn or traced from a similar bit of decoration and copied exactly—and this is usually the case when it is a piece of the rim of a plate or the lip of a jug that has been replaced—the choice of suitable coloring is also a test of her taste entirely, for the color of other similar parts may be a helpful guide.

Ordinary water color paints are quite satisfactory substitutes for the pigments that are used by professional china painters if the piece that is to be painted is prepared beforehand with a layer of gelatin and covered when dry with a thick wash of Chinese white as a foundation for the colors, and when these have been applied the glazed effect of china is produced by a varnish of gum arabic and water.

The question of cement can be solved by the purchase of one of the excellent mixtures that are concocted by the "trade," if the repairer does not feel disposed to follow the very simple and old fashioned recipe of steeping and stirring an ounce of white isinglass and three-quarters of an ounce of transparent gelatin in a basin containing about six ounces of water and adding rather less than an ounce of acetic acid while holding the basin over boiling water until the mixture warms. This makes a clear cement which can be used for glass as well as china, and it keeps almost indefinitely if it is bottled and corked securely. Before using it it is advisable to warm the bottle in hot water to reduce its contents to a liquid, and the china to which it is to be applied should be warmed to a corresponding temperature.

It saves endless trouble and prevents the very possible disappointment of seeing the piece that has been cemented loosen and drop before the cement has dried if it is given the temporary support of a smear of sealing wax to hold it in position until it has firmly fixed. This support is almost indispensable when there are several fragments to be fitted and joined together before the broken piece can be reunited to the whole, for to hold them would be boredom personified, and the sealing wax is a harmless time saver, for it chips off readily and leaves no mark at all.



CEMENTING AN ORIENTAL CUP.

Small cracks and chips which are not sufficiently destructive to break through the china can be filled in with a tiny quantity of the mixture of plaster of paris and gum arabic that has been mentioned before. Not only does the filling prevent a real breakage, but when painted over it makes the disfigurement invisible.

There is yet another form of china mending—riveting—both simple and the kind that is known as "through and through."

Improving the Flavor.

A squeeze of lemon juice added to sauces, soups, gravies and stews after cooking will bring out the flavor wonderfully and is a palatable improvement.

THE KISS.

Phyllis kissed her beau last night,
  Kissed him in the hall,
And I, alas, beheld the deed
  In the mirror on the wall.

She kissed him, and he gave return,
  The rogue! How could he dare
To take such liberty as that
  With eyes and lips and hair?

And, though the glass revealed the maid
  I love with such a passion
Boldly greet this favored youth
  In such a loving fashion,

I cannot call her bold nor bad,
  This quite bewitching miss,
Nor can I love her less, because
  'Twas I received the kiss.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

"Inspector," said I, "you will think me very obstinate, but all you have told me about Sears, all I have heard about him, in fact"—this I emphasized—"does not convince me of the entire folly of my own suspicions. Indeed, I am afraid that, if anything, they are strengthened. This steward, who is a doubtful character, I acknowledge, may have had his reasons for wishing Mrs. Fairbrother's death, may even have had a hand in the matter, but what evidence have you to show that he, himself, entered the alcove, struck the blow or stole the diamond? I have listened eagerly for some such evidence, but I have listened in vain."

"I know," he murmured, "I know. But it will come, at least I think so."

This should have reassured me, no doubt, and sent me away quiet and happy. But something—the tenacity of a deep conviction, possibly—kept me lingering before the inspector and finally gave me the courage to say:

"I know I ought not to speak another word; that I am putting myself at a disadvantage in doing so, but I cannot help it, inspector. I cannot help it when I see you laying such stress upon the few indirect clews connecting the suspicious Sears with this crime, and ignoring the direct clews we have against one whom we need not name."

Had I gone too far? Had my presumption transgressed all bounds and would he show a very natural anger? No; he smiled instead, an enigmatical smile no doubt, which I found it difficult to understand, but yet a smile.

"You mean," he suggested, "that Sears' possible connection with the crime cannot eliminate Mr. Grey's very positive one. Nor can the fact that Wellgood's hand came in contact with Mr. Grey's at or near the time of the exchange of the false stone with the real make it any less evident who was the guilty author of this exchange."

The inspector's hand was on the door knob, but he dropped it at this and, surveying me very quietly, said:

"I thought that a few days spent at the bedside of Miss Grey in the society of so renowned and cultured a gentleman as her father would disabuse you of these damaging suspicions."

"I don't wonder that you thought so," I burst out. "You would think so all the more if you knew how kind he can be and what solicitude he shows for all about him. But I cannot get over the facts. They all point, it seems to me, straight in one direction."

The inspector's hand was on the door knob.

"All? You heard what was said in this room—I saw it in your eye—how the man who surprised the steward in his own room last night heard him talking of love and death in connection with Mrs. Fairbrother. 'To kiss what I hate! It is almost as bad as to kill what I love'—he said something like that."

"Yes, I heard that. But did he mean that he had been her actual slayer? Could you convict him on those words?"

"Well, we shall find out. Then, as to Wellgood's part in the little business, you choose to consider that it took place at the time the stone fell from Mr. Grey's hand. What proof have you that the substitution you believe in was not made by him? He could easily have done it while crossing the room to Mr. Grey's side."

"Inspector!" Then hotly, as the absurdity of the suggestion struck me with full force: "He do this! A waiter, or, as you think, Mr. Fairbrother's steward, to be provided with so hard-to-come-by an article as this counterpart of a great stone? Isn't that almost as incredible a supposition as any I have myself presumed to advance?"

"Possibly, but the affair is full of incredibilities, the greatest of which, to my mind, is the persistence with which you, a kind hearted enough little woman, persevere in ascribing the deepest guilt to one you profess to admire and certainly would be glad to find innocent of any complicity with a great crime."

I felt that I must justify myself.

"Mr. Durand has had no such consideration shown him," said I.

"I know, my child, I know; but the cases differ. Wouldn't it be well for you to see this and be satisfied with the turn which things have taken without continuing to insist upon involving Mr. Grey in your suspicions?"

A smile took off the edge of this rebuke, yet I felt it keenly, and only the confidence I had in his fairness as a man and public official enabled me to say:

"But I am talking quite confidentially. And you have been so good to me, so willing to listen to all I had to say, that I cannot help but speak my whole mind. It is my only safety valve. Remember how I have to sit in the presence of this man with my thoughts all choked up. It is killing me. But I think I should go back content if you will listen to one more suggestion I have to make. It is my last."

"Say it. I am nothing if not indulgent."

He had spoken the word. Indulgent, that was it. He let me speak, probably had let me speak from the first, from pure kindness. He did not believe one little bit in my good sense or logic. But I was not to be deterred. I would empty my mind of the ugly thing that lay there. I would leave there no miserable dregs of doubt to ferment and work their evil way with me in the dead watches of the night which I had yet to face. So I took him at his word.

"I only want to ask this. In case Sears is innocent of the crime, who wrote the warning and where did the assassin get the stiletto with the Grey arms chased into its handle? And the diamond? Still the diamond! You hint that he stole that too. That with some idea of its proving useful to him on this gala occasion, he had provided himself with an imitation stone, setting and all—he who has never shown, so far as we have heard, any interest in Mrs. Fairbrother's diamond, only in Mrs. Fairbrother herself. If Wellgood is Sears and Sears the medium by which the false stone was exchanged for the real, then he made this exchange in Mr. Grey's interests and not his own. But I don't believe he had anything to do with it. I think everything goes to show that the exchange was made by Mr. Grey himself."

"A second Daniel," muttered the inspector lightly. "Go on, little lawyer." But, for all this attempt at banter on his part, I imagined that I saw the beginning of a very natural anxiety to close the conversation. I therefore hastened with what I had yet to say, cutting my words short and almost stammering in my eagerness.

"Remember the perfection of that imitation stone, a copy so exact that it extends to the setting. That shows plan—forgive me if I repeat myself—preparation, a knowledge of stones, a particular knowledge of this one. Mr. Fairbrother's steward may have had the knowledge, but he would have been a fool to have used his knowledge to secure for himself a valuable he could never have found a purchaser for in any market. But a fancier—one who has his pleasure in the mere possession of a unique and invaluable gem—ah, that is different! He might risk a crime. History tells us of several."

Here I paused to take breath, which gave the inspector a chance to say:

"In other words, this is what you think. The Englishman, desirous of covering up his tracks, conceived the idea of having this imitation on hand, in case it might be of use in the daring and disgraceful undertaking you ascribe to him. Recognizing his own inability to do this himself, he delegated the task to one who in some way, he had been led, to think, cherished a secret grudge against its present possessor—a man who had had some opportunity for seeing the stone and studying the setting. The copy thus procured, Mr. Grey went to the ball, and, relying on his own seemingly unassailable position, attacked Mrs. Fairbrother in the alcove and would have carried off the diamond, if he had found it where he had seen it earlier blazing on her breast. But it was not there. The warning received by her—a warning you ascribe to his daughter, a fact which is yet to be proved—had led her to rid herself of the jewel in the way Mr. Durand describes, and he found himself burdened with a dastardly crime and with nothing to show for it. Later, however, to his intense surprise and possible satisfaction, he saw that diamond in my hands, and, recognising an opportunity, as he thought, of yet securing it, he asked to see it, held it for an instant, and then, making use of an almost incredible expedient for distracting attention, dropped, not the real stone but the false one, retaining the real one in his hand. This, in plain English, as I take it, is your present idea of the situation."

Astonished at the clearness with which he read my mind, I answered, "Yes, inspector, that is what was in my mind."

"Good! Then it is just as well that it is out. Your mind is now free, and you can give it entirely to your duties." Then, as he laid his hand on the door knob, he added: "In studying so intently your own point of view, you seem to have forgotten that the last thing which Mr. Grey would be likely to do, under those circumstances, would be to call attention to the falsity of the gem upon whose similarity to the real stone he was depending. Not even his confidence in his own position, as an honored and highly esteemed guest, would lead him to do that."

"Not if he were a well known connoisseur," I faltered, "with the pride of one who has handled the best gems? He would know that the deception would be soon discovered and that it would not do for him to fail to recognize it for what it was, when the make believe was in his hands."

"Forced, my dear child, forced; and as chimerical as all the rest. It cannot stand putting into words. I will go further—you are a good girl and can bear to hear the truth from me. I don't believe in your theory; I can't. I have not been able to from the first, nor have any of my men; but if your ideas are true and Mr. Grey is involved in this matter, you will find that there has been more of a hitch about that diamond than you, in your simplicity, believe. If Mr. Grey were in actual possession of this valuable, he would show less care than you say he does. So would he if it were in Wellgood's hands with his consent and a good prospect of its coming to him in the near future. But if it is in Wellgood's hands without his consent, or any near prospect of his regaining it, then we can easily understand his present apprehensions and the growing uneasiness he betrays."

"True," I murmured.

"If, then," the inspector pursued, giving me a parting glance not without its humor, probably not without something really serious underlying its humor, "we should find, in following up our present clew, that Mr. Grey has had dealings with this Wellgood or this Sears! or if you, with your advantages for learning the fact, should discover that he shows any extraordinary interest in either of them, the matter will take on a different aspect. But we have not got that far yet. At present our task is to find one or the other of these men. If we are lucky, we shall discover that the waiter and the steward are identical, in spite of their seemingly different appearance. A rogue such as this Sears has shown himself to be would be an adept at disguise."

"You are right," I acknowledged. "He has certainly the heart of a criminal. If he had no hand in Mrs. Fairbrother's murder, he came near having one in that of your detective. You know what I mean. I could not help hearing, inspector."

He smiled, looked me steadfastly in the face for a moment and then bowed me out.

The inspector told me afterward that, in spite of the cavalier manner with which he had treated my suggestion, he spent a very serious half hour, head to head with the district attorney. The result was the following order to Sweetwater, the detective:

"You are to go to the St. Regis, make yourself solid there and gradually, as you can manage it, work yourself into a position for knowing all that goes on in room —. If the gentleman (mind you, the gentleman; we care nothing about the women) should go out, you are to follow him if it takes you to ——. We want to know his secret, but he must never know our interest in it and you are to be as silent in this matter as if possessed of neither ear nor tongue. I will add memory, for if you find this secret to be one in which we have no lawful interest you are to forget it absolutely and forever. You will understand why when you consult the St. Regis register."

But they expected nothing from it; absolutely nothing.

CHAPTER XVI.

I PRAYED uncle that we might be driven home by the way of Eighty-sixth street. I wanted to look at the Fairbrother house. I had seen it many times, but I felt that I should see it with new eyes after the story I had just heard in the inspector's office. That an adventure of this nature could take place in a New York house taxed my credulity. I might have believed it of Paris, wicked, mysterious Paris, the home of intrigue and every redoubtable crime, but of our own homely, commonplace metropolis—the house must be seen for me to be convinced of the fact related.

Many of you know the building. It is usually spoken of with a shrug, the sole reason for which seems to be that there is no other just like it in the city. I myself have always considered it imposing and majestic, but to the average man it is too suggestive of old world feudal life to be pleasing. On this afternoon—a dull, depressing one—it looked undeniably heavy as we approached it, but interesting in a very new way to me, because of the great turret at one angle, the scene of that midnight descent of two men, each in deadly fear of the other, yet quailing not in their purpose—the one of flight, the other of pursuit.

There was no railing in front of the house. It may have seemed an unnecessary safeguard to the audacious owner. Consequently, the small door in the turret opened directly upon the street, making entrance and exit easy enough for any one who had the key. But the shaft and the small room at the bottom—where were they? Naturally in the center of the great mass, the room being without windows.

It was, therefore, useless to look for it, and yet my eye ran along the peaks and pinnacles of the roof, searching for the skylight in which it undoubtedly ended. At last I espied it, and, my curiosity satisfied on this score, I let my eyes run over the side and face of the building for an open window or a lifted shade. But all were tightly closed and gave no more sign of life than did the boarded up door. But I was not deceived by this. As we drove away, I thought how on the morrow there would be a regular procession passing through this street to see just the little I had seen today. The detective's adventure was like to make the house notorious. For several minutes after I had left its neighborhood my imagination pictured room after room shut up from the light of day, but bearing within them the impalpable aura of those two shadows flitting through them like the ghosts of ghosts, as the detective had tellingly put it.

The heart has its strange surprises. Through my whole ride and the indulgence in these thoughts I was conscious of a great inner revulsion against all I had intimated and even honestly felt while talking with the inspector. Perhaps this is what this wise old official expected. He had let me talk, and the inevitable reaction followed. I could now see only Mr. Grey's goodness and claims to respect, and began to hate myself that I had not been immediately impressed by the inspector's views, and shown myself more willing to drop every suspicion against the august personage I had presumed to associate with crime. What had given me the strength to persist? Loyalty to my lover? His innocence had not been involved. Indeed, every word uttered in the inspector's office had gone to prove that he no longer occupied a leading place in police calculations; that their eyes were turned elsewhere, and that I had only to be patient to see Mr. Durand quite cleared in their minds.

But was this really so? Was he as safe as that? What if this new clew failed? What if they failed to find Sears or lay hands on the doubtful Wellgood? Would Mr. Durand be released without a trial? Should we hear nothing more of the strange and, to many, the suspicious circumstances which linked him to this crime? It would be expecting too much from either police or official discrimination.

No; Mr. Durand would never be completely exonerated till the true culprit was found and all explanations made. I had therefore been simply fighting his battles when I pointed out what I thought to be the weak place in their present theory, and, sore as I felt in contemplation of my seemingly heartless action, I was not the unimpressionable, addle-pated nonentity I must have seemed to the inspector.

Yet my comfort was small and the effort it took to face Mr. Grey and my young patient was much greater than I had anticipated. I blushed as I approached to take my place at Miss Grey's bedside, and, had her father been as suspicious of me at that moment as I was of him, I am sure that I should have fared badly in his thoughts.

But he was not on the watch for my emotions. He was simply relieved to see me back. I noticed this immediately; also that something had occurred during my absence which absorbed his thought and filled him with anxiety.

A Western Union envelope lay at his feet—proof that he had just received a telegram. This under ordinary circumstances would not have occasioned me a second thought, such a man being naturally the recipient of all sorts of communications from all parts of the world, but at this crisis, with the worm of a half stifled doubt still gnawing at my heart, everything that occurred to him took on importance and roused questions.

When he had left the room, Miss Grey nestled up to me with the seemingly ingenuous remark:

"Poor papa! Something disturbs him. He will not tell me what. I suppose he thinks I am not strong enough to share his troubles, but I shall be soon. Don't you see I am gaining every day?"

"Indeed I do," was my hearty response. In face of such a sweet confidence and open affection doubt vanished, and I was able to give all my thoughts to her.

"I wish papa felt as sure of this as you do," she said. "For some reason he does not seem to take any comfort from my improvement. When Dr. Freligh says, 'Well, well, we are getting on finely today!' I notice that he does not look less anxious, nor does he even meet these encouraging words with a smile. Haven't you noticed it? He looks as careworn and troubled about me now as he did the first day I was taken sick. Why should he? Is it because he has lost so many children he cannot believe in his good fortune at having the most insignificant of all left to him?"

"I do not know your father very well," I protested, "and cannot judge what is going on in his mind, but he must see that you are quite a different girl from what you were a week ago and that, if nothing unforeseen happens, your recovery will only be a matter of a week or two longer."

"Oh, how I love to hear you say that! To be well again! To read letters!" she murmured, "and to write them!" And I saw the delicate hand falter up to pinch the precious packet awaiting that happy hour. I did not like to discuss her father with her, so took this opportunity to turn the conversation aside into safer channels. But we had not proceeded far before Mr. Grey returned and, taking his stand at the foot of the bed, remarked, after a moment's gloomy contemplation of his daughter's face:

"You are better today, the doctor says. I have just been telephoning to him. But do you feel well enough for me to leave you for a few days? There is a man I must see—must go to, if you have no dread of being left alone with your good nurse and the doctor's constant attendance."

Miss Grey looked startled. Doubtless she found it difficult to understand what man in this strange country could interest her father enough to induce him to leave her while he was yet laboring under such solicitude. But a smile speedily took the place of her look of surprised inquiry, and she affectionately exclaimed:

"Oh, I haven't the least dread in the world, not now. See, I can hold up my arms. Go, papa, go; it will give me a chance to surprise you with my good looks when you come back."

He turned abruptly away. He was suffering from an emotion deeper than he cared to acknowledge. But he gained control over himself speedily and, coming back, announced with forced decision:

"I shall have to go tonight. I have no choice. Promise me that you will not go back in my absence; that you will strive to get well; that you will put all your mind into striving to get well."

"Indeed, I will," she answered, a little frightened by the feeling he showed. "Don't worry so much. I have more than one reason for living, papa."

He shook his head and went immediately to make his preparations for departure. His daughter gave one sob, then caught me by the hand.

"You look dumfounded," said she. "But never mind, we shall get on very well together. I have the most perfect confidence in you."

Was it my duty to let the inspector know that Mr. Grey anticipated absenting himself from the city for a few days? I decided that I would only be impressing my own doubts upon him after a rebuke which should have allayed them.

Yet when Mr. Grey came to take his departure I wished that the inspector might have been a witness to his emotion, if only to give me one of his very excellent explanations. The parting was more like that of one who sees no immediate promise of return than of a traveler who intends to limit his stay to a few days. He looked her in the eyes and kissed her a dozen times, each time with an air of heartbreak which was good neither for her nor for himself, and when he finally tore himself away it was to look back at her from the door with an expression I was glad she did not see or it would certainly have interfered with the promise she had made to concentrate all her energies on getting well.

What was at the root of his extreme grief at leaving her? Did he fear the person he was going to meet or were his plans such as involved a much longer stay than he had mentioned? Did he even mean to return at all?

Ah, that was the question! Did he intend to return or had I been the unconscious witness of a flight?

Mothers and Husbands.

Once I was young, now I am old, and I have never seen a girl that was unfaithful to her mother that ever came to be worth a one-eyed button to her husband. It is the law of God. It isn't exactly in the Bible, but it is written large in the miserable lives of many unfortunate homes. I am speaking for the boys this time. If any of you chaps ever come across a girl that, with a face full of roses, says to you as you come to the door, "I can't go for thirty minutes yet, for the dishes are not washed," you wait for that girl. You sit right down on the doorstep and wait for her, because some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right there you lose an angel.

STRATHCONAS LOST TO T. A. S. WEST ENDS DEFEATED P. A. C.

The Batting of the Abstainers Was a Feature of the First Game, the Score Being 11-6—Second Contest Was an Exciting Exhibition, the West Ends Finishing Strong—Score 9-8.

The large number of fans who attended the senior league games at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon received their money's worth and a little more, and that the interest in the league is growing, can easily be noticed. There was nearly four hours of playing, and the majority of the spectators remained until the last man was put out in the second contest. To any fair-minded lover of baseball the contests must have been interesting—in spots, of which the distance apart was not very far. There were many good plays pulled off, and although the errors were handed out in liberal quantities, they were taken good naturedly by the crowd and this is much appreciated by the players.

FIRST GAME.

The Strathconas received their third consecutive defeat, at the hands of the T.A.S. by 11—6 in the first game, and the better team won. For the first four innings the Straths gave a weird exhibition, while the Abstainers were in fine form and took advantage of every misplay of their opponents. Harold Hickey started off poorly, and to make matters worse his team mates did not give him any kind of support. The T.A.S. hit his benders freely and trotted around the bases while the fielders were muffing the ball or using poor judgment at their respective positions. Bobby Ryan succeeded him in the fifth and the players at once settled down and played good ball, but there was still the same "I-don't-care" spirit shown by several of the players. That high fly between the centre and right fielders was a beautiful example. Neither players undertook to go after the ball, while either could easily have made a put out had they not been asleep. A diet of ginger for the next week will make a big improvement, and this has been ordered by Manager Metheral. Still, the team did some good batting and fielding at times, and actually outclassed their opponents in the last five innings, but the lead was too big to overcome.

The Strathconas started to score in their half of the second innings.

Craig reached first on an error by McFadden, but was caught napping by a quick throw by Quinlan. Wettlaufer struck out. Kendrey walked, stole second and scored on a wild throw. Heaslip fanned. One run.

In the second innings Kendrey banged out a two-bagger and a single by Heaslip scored him. Derocher dropped Wilson's fly to left and Heaslip scored, the batter reaching second and went to third on a passed ball. Ryan's sacrifice scored the runner. Curtis grounded to Doherty and made second. Shaw popped out to McFadden and the runner was caught off second. Three runs.

In the eighth Shaw hit for three bases and Weatherstone's sacrifice brought him home. Craig was out on a grounder, and Wettlaufer met nothing but the high wind. One run.

In the last innings Kendrey hit for his second two-bagger. Heaslip fanned and Wilson was out on a grounder. Kendrey stole third and romped home on a wild throw from Quinlan to third base. Ryan made first on an error, but Curtis fanned. One run.

Ab Quinlan had a lot to do with the win by his team. He twirled good ball, batted well and fielded his position, which put the necessary confidence into his fielders. He was hit hard at times, but his support was generally good, although there is room for improvement. There were only two of the players who did not get a hit. Four of the hits were two-baggers, and a homer, and as they came with men on bases a goodly number of scores resulted, the summary showing eleven hits and eleven runs.

Three men crossed the plate in the first innings. Kendrey's error allowed Callaghan to reach first. Flaherty was hit and Derocher flew out to Weatherstone, Quinlan hit for two bags, scoring Callaghan and Flaherty. M. O'Brien singled, allowing Quinlan to count. W. O'Brien was out at first and Doherty fanned. Three runs.

H. Quinlan scored in the second on a wild pitch, and although the bases were filled twice, no more runs resulted. One run.

In the third on a single by M. O'Brien and a double by Doherty netted a run. Again with each base occupied Flaherty hit over the left field fence sending the runners home and scoring later on an error by Heaslip. Five runs.

In the fourth M. O'Brien scored on a wild pitch and in the sixth he again counted by his own double and a single by Doherty by Doherty Two runs.

SECOND GAME.

The contest between the West Ends and Park Street was a good one. It was interesting all through. The West Ends were picked to carry off the honors, but the south enders held the lead up to the seventh, and looked good to win, but the errors by the fielders and several hits by Jack Oldham's bunch turned the tide, and the Baptists took the small end of the 9—8 score. Dusty repeated his performance of last Saturday, and pitched in fine form, and Jimmie Pilling, who replaced him in the eighth, also did well. He secured the only three-base hit of the game, and scored twice. Teddy Pilling at right field played his position well, but was off color in batting. Crowe and O'Brien had a busy time, each having nine putouts. George McDonald caught well and the rest of the players gave a good account of themselves.

In the first three innings Park St. made six runs, mostly by good batting. In the seventh and ninth two more runs were counted, making a total of eight.

The West Ends were guilty of seven misplays, all of which were costly. They batted well, and their work with the bat was responsible for the game being won. Kirn pitched winning ball, striking out eight men, and although hit hard at times, did not lose confidence in his ability to land the game. Minorgan had an off day at short, and the fielding of the team was not up to past performances.

In the first three innings four runs were counted, and another tally resulted in the sixth. In the seventh, by some clever hitting and base-running, the West Ends scored three times, and their last run came in the eighth.

FARMER CAUSED THE EXCITEMENT

George street residents were given an exciting time for a few minutes on Saturday evening. A personage who had been imbibing rather freely took occasion to drive his horse up George street. About Dublin street he started to get out of his buggy, to wipe the earth with a number of small boys who had been guying him on the way up town. As his foot touched the mother earth the horse moved forward and the driver was unceremoniously pitched onto the earth.

Fortunately the steed was of the quiet family variety or otherwise a serious accident might have occurred.

REV. DR. MEDZLER AT MARK ST. CHURCH

Both services at Mark street church yesterday were addressed by Rev. Dr. Medzler, of Cavan, to good congregations. The doctor's discourses were thoroughly enjoyed.

In the evening the choir presented a new number, "The Lord is My Strength," in a highly creditable style. Mr. Pratt sang "Hallelujah! What a Savior," in good voice.

THE QUENQUINNIAL WOMEN'S CONGRESS

Toronto, June 21— The quinquennial congress of women this moring, brought in a recommendation to all municipal and state governments to exclude children under fourteen from taking part in theatrical productions as contributing to degradation and white slave traffic.

Expresses Thanks

Mrs. W. J. McCallum writes: — Will you kindly allow me the space to express publicly my sincere thanks and appreciation to the superintendent and nursing staff of Nicholls Hospital. During my stay there of several weeks, I received every care and attention and it is largely due to the nurses and to the skill of Dr. T. N. Greer that I owe my life. At Nicholls Hospital the patients receive the best of everything and it is a pleasure to be there when sick.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT ONTARIO CITIES

Peterborough Most Progressive and One of the Prettiest—New City Directory to be Issued Early in August

There is to be a Peterborough City Directory issued by the Union Publishing Company, of Ingersoll, early in August, and a canvas is now being made by their representative, Mr. Rawlings, and his assistants.

In conversation with Mr. Rawlings this morning, the Review representative learned a number of interesting facts in regard to the issue of the directories in the different cities. Mr. Rawlings says that Peterborough has the most uniform class of people that he finds in any city, there being very few foreigners and almost every married man is a householder. In Brantford, on the contrary, there are many foreigners of all nationalities. These are for the most part employed by the Malleable Iron Works, and include Armenians, Syrians, Poles and Russians. There are many of these whose names do not appear in the Brantford city directory, for the simple reason that their names seem so outlandish and unintelligible to the Canadian as to be of no real benefit to anyone.

Brantford people pride themselves on their manufacturing products being of greater value than those of Peterborough, but although their exports may be greater, the value of the manufactures of Peterborough industries is shown in recent Government reports to exceed those of Brantford.

Woodstock's population are mostly of English descent, while in Windsor there are an unusual number of colored people. At Berlin the German names are a worry to the typesetter, while in London there are very few who have not English names.

St. Thomas is a thoroughly American city due, no doubt, to it being the home of so many employees of the three American railroads, the Pere Marquette, Wabash and Michigan Central, which all run through the city.

On every hand Peterborough has an enviable reputation for commercial activity and progressiveness, and many enquiries are made with interest when it is known that the visitor is a resident of this city. Peterborough has every reason to be proud of its beautiful parks and streets and nicely kept lawns.

Mr. Rawlings is accompanied by his wife and is very enthusiastic about the city and its beauties.

KIDNAPING VOTERS.

Once a Regular Feature of Political Warfare In England.

In England a generation or two ago kidnaping was a regularly recognized feature of political warfare. On the eve of an election especially men of influence on either side would mysteriously vanish to reappear later with strange tales of forcible seizures, mad races across country in post chaises driven by yelling postilions, followed by longer or shorter terms of gilded imprisonment in great mansions, where they were wined and dined in sumptuous style and treated right royally in every way, only their liberty being denied them.

Quite humble voters, too, were forcibly abducted, but these did not always fare quite so well. Thus one victim made complaint before a magistrate that he had been decoyed from his house by a ruse and kept shut up in a coal hole for three days.

Wholesale kidnaping of voters in batches, too, was not unknown, the process being rendered easier by the custom of candidates paying the traveling expenses of their electors to and from the polling places.

For instance, at a certain Newcastle election a whole shipload of freemen of the borough, dispatched from Lon-

TO LOOK INTO THE BOOKS; McGILL AGAIN ON STAND

Late Head of Ontario Bank Declares That the Directors Knew all About His Dealings and Instructed Him to Buy Stocks.

Toronto, June 22.—Once more the books of the defunct Ontario Bank will come under the scrutiny of Charles McGill, who though serving a penitentiary term, is now in Toronto, to give evidence before Referee Kappelle.

From eleven o'clock yesterday morning, until a quarter after four, with two hours off for lunch, he was under examination, trying to recall dates and circumstances when, he swears, he was directed by men "higher up" to carry out certain financial transactions in connection with the business of the bank. He was submitted to a severe memory test, but he was unable always to furnish definite information, declaring that if he could only get another look at the books, he'd substantiate his statements.

He will be given two hours to look over the books before resuming his evidence to-day.

The enquiry is being conducted before Referee George Kappelle, McGill appearing to urge his defence to being officially liable for 1,713 shares of Ontario Bank stock.

"There were no shares in my name at the time of the failure," he explained. "Shares were transferred to the Officers' Trust Fund. Acting under the instructions of the directors I gave instructions to brokers to purchase stock for the bank."

Continuing, he said, these orders were not in writing. All through, he stuck to the contention that he had at all times acted according to the instructions of the directors and particularly the president, G. R. R. Cockburn. If he were only given time to go through the books and refresh his memory, he would be able to connect somebody with each transaction. Frequently he averred that President Cockburn knew as much or more about the buying and selling of the bank's stocks as himself and that if the late Mr. Smith and the late Donald McKay had been examined when he had so advised, they could have and would have confirmed him in his every statement.

"I do not like to generalize, but after all I have been through, it is impossible for me to cite specific cases unless I can get access to the books."

"Did you ever give any information to Mr. Cockburn as to the holdings by the bank of its own shares?" asked Mr. James Bicknell, K.C., who appeared for the liquidators.

"Yes."

"What was the last time before the failure that you did that?"

"I cannot say. He saw the books every day and was aware who were buying and how much stock the bank had to take care of. He knew everytime that I bought anything."

"Did you ever give Mr. Cockburn a statement showing what funds of the bank were invested in its own shares?"

"Yes, and at this time Mr. Cockburn told me not to sell any more shares until he had sold his."

September 1, 1906, was the meeting when he was instructed not to buy any more stock; yet, at the request and with the consent of the directors, 1,000 shares had been transferred between that date and Oct. 9. At that meeting, witness claims, he officially revealed to them, though they all previously knew, the exact balance in the balance book. Then the directors had gone through it item by item. Just before the bank's collapse, he was instructed to purchase more stock and only did so after very stiff protest.

OZONIZING WATER A SUCCESS; LINDSAY PEOPLE PLEASED

The bright, sparkling appearance and the pleasant taste of the water on tap for Lindsay people's consumption has moved the hearts of Lindsay people to gladness. The Ozone treatment is likely to be the great and successful way of treating drinking water for the future and it is not expensive. The plant now installed was intended to treat 700 gals. a minute and all was going well when the agent left but it took 1000 gals. a minute to stake the thirst of the people hence the analysis became less satisfactory than at first and than expected. The agent returned however and is squaring the machine to the needs of the population. Even at 10 0 gals the purifying process was exactly in proportion to specifications. At any rate Lindsay people say that they will never go back to the old way.

MR. FRED. MERKLE GOT 'LUNGE OF IMMENSE PROPORTIONS WHILE FISHING YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Fred Merkle of Perry street landed the biggest fish that has been caught in these waters for some time when he hauled in one that weighed 19 1 2 pounds. Mr. Merkle hauled in the monster a short distance below Crawford's Grove and was accompanied at the time by Mr Robert Sheppard.

Mr. Sheppard told the Review that the fish gave quite a battle but the struggle was rather a disappointing one in view of its great size. Mr. Merkle has his captive on ice and intends to have it mounted by Mr. Edwin Elcome. The lucky angler who is an enthusiastic fisherman regrets that the lunge didn't weigh half a pound more so that he could claim the Banks prize.

ANOTHER WANDERING TRIBE THAT IS VERY UNWELCOME

The residents in the vicinity of the vacant field at the foot of George street, where the camp of Syrians is located, have an objection to make.

One of the citizens of that district called at the Review office at noon to-day and expressed himself pretty strongly on the point.

"They may be all right, but again they may not be," he said, "and the people living near the camp object to the Syrians being where they are. There are several of them, men, women and children, and their presence is unwelcome. They rented the field from a prominent citizen and it seems strange to me that he should allow them to have the use of the grounds and thus encourage their presence in the city. The county authorities have determined to put an end to the gypsy nuisance and I should think it would be desirable to keep the city clear of these bands of transient foreigners of all kinds."

GYPSIES WERE REMANDED

Will be Kept Here for One Week in Order That Evidence Against Them May be Secured

The men in the party of gypsies arrested yesterday morning appeared before Magistrate Edmison in the afternoon and were remanded for one week, in which time enquiries will be made in an endeavor to secure evidence against them. The outfit is still in the court yeard, and all the occupants are behaving themselves.

The leader of the party with his wife were allowed out this morning and many curious eyes were directed at them as they walked around the streets for a short time. The leader treated himself to a shave at a local barber shop, while his wife, who was dressed in a stunning costume, guarded the door.

The affair has created considerable interest around the city, especially among the gentler sex, who are very anxious to get a glimpse at the latest fashions in jewellery and wearing apparel displayed by the ladies of the party.

A woman would just as lief be married to a street sweep as a prince if it would give her the seat of honor at dinner.

PROBABILITIES.

Showers or thunderstorms but mostly fair and decidedly warm.

MR. W. L. M. KING IS ELECTED

New Minister of Labor Goes in by Acclamation

Berlin, Ont., June 22.—Hon. W. L. M. King was yesterday elected by acclamation to represent North Waterloo. The vacancy was caused by his elevation to Cabinet rank in the Laurier Government.

Allan Huber, who threatened that he would oppose him, failed to raise the cash for the necessary deposit, and was not nominated.

"It is with deep appreciation of the honor which has been conferred and of the added responsibilities which it brings, that I thank the electors of this riding," said Hon. Mr. King, in addressing the meeting. "It is sometimes said that there is too much party and too little politics, according to the true meaning of that word. I am prepared to subscribe to the truth of that statement. I believe in principle before party, and patriotism before prejudice, and I rejoice to feel that I shall be able through the remainder of my life to point to the riding of North Waterloo as having on this occasion demonstrated its adherence to this larger view. But I am chivalrous enough, I hope, to appreciate a generous act, especially when it comes from an opponent, and I wish, therefore, to thank also my friends of the Conservative party."

Regarding the claim that a labor man, who had received his apprenticeship at a trade or had come to Parliament direct from the workshop, the mine or the factory, was alone competent to fill the position of Minister of Labor, Mr. King said:

"What is wanted to-day is a closer relationship between our universities and our workshops, a better understanding by educated men of the problems and conditions which confront the thousands who labor. I hope to live to see the day when a workingman will hold the portfolio which I have now the honor of holding, and when more workingmen will find a place in Parliament."

HOLYHEAD ROUTE IS POSSIBLE

London, June 22.—The White Star steamship Cedric, from New York on June 12, arrived at Holyhead at 11.23 a.m. Sunday. The passengers and mails were landed by noon and left on three special trains for London. The first of these specials arrived at the Euston Station at 5.48 p.m. so that the passengers were comfortably seated in the London hotels about the time the Cedric arrived off Liverpool.

This is a new departure, which possibly may mean the permanent opening of Holyhead as a station for the landing of the American mails, and the experiment is regarded in every way as highly successful. It is contended that Holyhead has the advantage of ample water at all stages of the tide to accommodate the larger liners.

THE DELEGATES AT GLASGOW

They had been lying there all day and most of the previous night, with not a bite to eat.

The brave young mother had tramped the entire 75 miles into the city, occupying four days on the trip, sleeping wherever she could find a sheltered spot, eating whatever she could beg or obtain in other ways from the farms she passed.

THEY SHOULD SEEK OFFICE; WOMEN PASS RESOLUTION

Big Gathering in Connection With International Council Places Itself on Record as Believing That Women Should Contest All Elections.

Toronto, June 22.—Canada has still a good deal to learn if the International Council of Women is any criterion. The question of suffrage for women is looming large on the political horizon of many countries, and has risen to the zenith in several of considerable importance. Canada is behind Australia and New Zealand in this respect. Several of the United States have taken the step which politicians who fear clean politics dread. In Finland the Parliamentary and all other suffrages are extended to women.

There was a capital audience in Convocation Hall last night in connection with the fact that universal suffrage had been adopted as a department of the council. Every country, however, is left free to take up its own line of work. This was all lucidly explained by Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw, who presided. The International Council was waiting for some of the more backward councils to appoint delegates. To many present the movement was regarded as the most important work not only in the council but that was done.

Dr. Shaw said she regarded woman suffrage as the next great step in human freedom. They could not separate man from woman, and should take into the service of the state the best ability of both sexes.

The speakers were Mrs. O. E. Edwards, provincial vice-president, for Alberta; Mlle. Lepric la Fontaine, Brussels, one of the founders of the Belgium league for the rights of women, and who spoke in the absence from illness of Mlle. Popelin; Madame Julia Bernocco-Fava Parris, delegate from Italy; Frauline Salomon, who not only represented Germany, but also spoke as the newly-elected corresponding secretary, her excellent English commending her for the position; Miss Gina Krog, president of the Norwegian Council, whose quaint and jaunty self-possession quite won the audience; Mrs. Henry Dobson, president of the National Council of Tasmania and eminent in a score of societies; and last, but by no means least, the Countess of Aberdeen.

"That the International Council of Women strenuously endeavor to place women on all boards now open to women. And to secure the inclusion of women on all boards now open to women. And to secure the inclusion of women on all other authorities or committees dealing with public work."

This was the first resolution, spoken to by Mrs. Edwards, and supported by those who preceded Frauline Salomon, who moved the resolution endorsing woman suffrage. The other speakers, including the Countess of Aberdeen, supported the motion. Both were unanimously adopted.

"That each National Council promote the holding on Sundays and week days of peace days and assemblies by churches, schools, universities and societies" was the proposal of the committee on peace and arbitration presented to the afternoon session.

Mrs. Mary Wright Sewall read the report, saying a large number of countries already have a peace day.

There was some discusion, and not all were of one mind regarding the question of peace day. Indeed when it came to a vote there were 41 nays to 95 yeas.

Frau Stritt of Germany said the National Council of Germany refrained from proposing a peace day as "it would never, never find people who were in sympathy with it," although every woman was in favor of the principle of peace.

The mover said that the reports from the different countries showed an increasing growth in favor of the annual peace day.

THEY CALL THIS FIRE BAPTISM

Pickering, June 22.—The Friends' yearly meeting now in session here, held three well-attended sessions in the restored brick meeting house on Sunday. The veteran lady missionary, Eliza Varney, was present and although infirm in body, was clear in voice and mind. Thomas Davidson of England gave a lucid history of the use and growth of Quakerism. John Dillingham of Philadelphia, an ex-professor, made two splendid addresses. He conveyed the message of the Emily Williams, a colony preacher, but now an invalid, wherein he made a plea for union of all the Friends in Canada. "One body was baptized with fire in the loss of their college, another by fire in the destruction of their meeting house, and it looks like a call to peace and union."

LA PRESSE AND MR. WILLISON

War is declared by La Presse on Mr. Willison and incidentally upon the Toronto News. It has been in the air for some time. It will help eventually to a better understanding.

• • • • • • •

The present "row" is attributed to Mr. Willison's personal hatred of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He is in the position of a disappointed biographer. After having lavished unstinted praise upon Sir Wilfrid he found that the feet of his idol were of clay. It is never safe to write anybody's "life" until the person is dead and unable to get back at the author or do further damage. We may put that down as lesson No. one.

• • • • • • •

But Mr. Willison is too big a man to be treated as a mere disgruntled victim of misplaced confidence. In company with a large number of others, including lifelong Conservatives and a very large majority of Orangemen Mr. Willison in 1896 pinned his faith upon Sir Wilfrid and lauded him to the skies as the apostle of liberty, the Garibaldi of Canada, the man who ignored the "pretensions" of his mother church in order to wave the flag of religious and political freedom, and to lead the hosts to victory, etc. The Conservatives under Sir Charles Tupper were spat upon. They too were deceived. They stood by "the Constitution." They founded their policy upon the judgment of the Privy Council of England! What better charter one would say for a loyal and upright policy. But as we have said, they also were deceived. Not that they would have sacrificed their principles had they known of it. But they were deceived, no doubt of that and as in the case of Mr. Willison, a burnt child anathematizes the fire.

• • • • • • •

The unsophisticated reader will ask what happened. Only this. Sir Wilfrid instead of being against the church, was for it, and the church instead of being with Sir Charles, was against him. The Conservatives have forgotten or overlooked all this, but they were not "biographers." As a matter of fact not even more than a perfunctory compliment was ever made use of by them regarding Mr. Willison's late hero.

What was the rest of it? The rest residue and remainder was that the enemies of the Orangemen triumphed by virtue of Orange votes. This was naturally a "little too much" both for them and for Sir Wilfrid's biographer.

• • • • • • •

It is useless to deny that Sir Wilfrid was not above board as was Sir Charles Tupper. Had he been he would have gone the same way, so he chose the crooked path. He sent secret word like another "chieftain of the hills" and the clansmen fell into the trap.

• • • • • • •

So if Mr. Willison, the biographer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is annoyed, we can understand it. But let us look at the real issue. It is that of the full, complete and absolute autonomy of the French-Canadians. They do not wish to be Canadians in the broad sense. They look to England as their ally in this regard. They have individuality to preserve and they are determined to preserve it. If this spirit is the correct one, we can never be a united people. It would be far better to break up confederation altogether and to go back to first principles. The perennial conflict of race and creed goes on with varying temperature. At present it is rising. Distrust of the thirteenth apostle and the elements of race discord are boiling up with more viciousness than usual. It is a strange thing that in private life men and women may be friends and companions, but in the totality of national life there is no such thing as even common sense amongst them. Why is it? It looks as if Canadians, French, English, Irish, Italian, German, Doukobobors, Mennonites and heaven knows how many more, are being exploited by designing men.

• • • • • •

If we are to be united, let us act like it. Let us give up class, race, creed and sex as a basis of claim for office, or emolument. If not, let us quit the pretence of union. It will only lead, ultimately, as it is at present, to serious trouble and in the meantime it frets the body politic. If Public Opinion is such a thing at all in Canada, let it rule. Otherwise we are condemned already. Mr. Willison sees into the future and realized the present. He is fair, strong, cogent and honorable, with great resource, and a penetrating eye. La Presse cannot bluff him. The anti-imperialists cannot stampede him as they do their compatriots in preparation for an election. The assertion in the French press that Laurier, at the next election, will have to bear the whole burden of the French-Canadian race in its fight for freedom, is an outrage. It is a contemptible political trick and it is that sort of stuff that is moving Mr. Willison to anger. Let the French-Canadians join with us in being Canadians To distrust us is to insult us. We are willing, why not they?

We expect as much of the others. Why should they be the one disrupting element? Let the common principle and the common justice of humanity guide us all. We admire and love the French. Why do they hate us?

• • • • • •

We have been told that the loss of a language means the loss of the history and ideals of the speakers of that language. But history disproves it. Ideals are the heritage of the whole world. However, if necessary as a compromise let us agree on a common tongue, whether it be Volapuk or a combination Franco-English. But whatever happens let us stop quarrelling amongst ourselves. A united government cannot represent a disunited people.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Saint Jean Baptiste procession was the biggest ever this year, both on account of the coming meeting of the Grand Plenary Council of the Roman Catholic Church and of the growing desire to emphasize French-Canadian nationality. So at least it would appear from the newspapers.

Radium as a curative agent continues to absorb a great deal of attention among members of the medical profession. Dr. Louis Wickham, chief of the Radium Institute of Paris, speaking in the hall of the Royal Society of Medicine, London, said that as a rule, when speaking to a doctor about radium as a means of curing disease, there arose in the inquirer's mind the idea of a burning and an inflammable reaction or of the destruction of the tissues. It was found, however that these reactions were followed by the repair of tissue and hence radium was a very precious therapeutic agent. He was of opinion that from this standpoint radium had a higher mission and a far greater sphere of usefulness. An interesting feature of Dr. Wickham's lecture was a series of slides showing results achieved in the Paris hospital. One picture exhibited the four stages of treatment of a case of a bulging cancer, of the face, where a cure was effected in 35 days. In conclusion he referred to the possible hopes of women in the curing of breast cancer, and submitted a precis of the results obtained by himself and co-workers on this subject. —Vancouver World.

MADE HER SIGH.

Mrs. Brown and Her Experience With a Newspaper Reporter.

"Are you Mrs. Brown?" asked the reporter.

"Yes," replied the lady, who was holding herself in readiness to slam the door in his face if he attempted to enter.

"I have been sent out to secure a picture of you for publication in the Morning Bulletin. Have you a photograph of yourself that I may borrow?"

"Mercy! I like your effrontery. I wouldn't think of permitting any paper to publish a picture of me."

"You are Mrs. William Henry Brown, are you not?"

"Yes, but that makes no difference. I shall not let you have a photograph. I would be so mortified that I could never look any of my friends in the face again if a picture of me were printed in a newspaper."

"I am sorry you feel that way about it. Of course if you object I suppose we shall have to get along without the photograph. Your husband is the William Henry Brown who has just been elected to the presidency of the Rein and Stirrup club, is he not?"

"No; that's another William Henry Brown. The papers are always getting us mixed. It's awfully provoking."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. In that case it is not your picture I want. We intended to publish a group under the head of 'Beautiful Wives of Prominent Clubmen.' I am sorry to have bothered you. Good afternoon."

"There, that's just my luck," she said to herself when she had picked up her popular novel again. "I do wish my husband had the gumption to get elected president of something. And those last photographs I got make me look so young too!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Mistaken.

"I don't believe," angrily declared the would be contributor, "that you ever read my poem. It didn't look when it came back to me as if it had even been unfolded."

"Let me see the postmark on the envelope," replied the editor. "Yes. There, you see, it was mailed back to you on the 10th. I must have read it, for I remember clearly that I was sick on the 11th."—Smart Set.

Did You Ever Notice?

Stubb—Yes, as they came from opposite directions I heard each woman murmur to herself, "The last person in the world I wanted to meet."

Penn—Then I suppose they passed on without speaking?

Stubb—Oh, no. They stopped and kissed and each inquired about the other's baby.—St. Louis Republic.

Not Necessary.

"Does a man who steers a boat have necessarily to be a man of determined character?"

"Goodness gracious, no! Whatever put such an idea into your head?"

"Nothing, only I thought from his location on the boat he would have to be a man of stern purpose."—Baltimore American.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

"I thought you said May Nagget had married a good natured man?"

"So she did."

"Nonsense! I met him yesterday, and he's a grouch."

"Well, he's been married to May for nearly four months now, you know."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Good Idea.

The Mistress—Mary Ann, you get up an hour before we do, but you don't seem to accomplish anything in that time. Isn't there something you might do in that hour?

The Maid—Yessum. I moight make th' beds.—Cleveland Leader.

Correct.

"Mrs. Allingham claims that her husband is a very highly educated man."

"She's right. He got his education in a business college that had quarters on the nineteenth floor of a skyscraper."

On Silver Lakes.

"Ah, darling, say that you will drift down the stream of life with me in my little canoe!"

"Make it a steam yacht, dear, and I'll say yes!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fortunate.

"They say Miss Screacher is a beautiful singer."

"It's a good thing she is, for no one would listen to the noise she makes if she weren't."—Princeton Tiger.

His Top Teeth.

Howard, four years of age, bit his lip for the first time and ran to his mother, crying, "Oh, mother, my top teeth stepped on my face!"—Circle Magazine.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 21.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending June 19 were 2450 cattle, 450 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 900 calves. The supply for local consumption this morning consisted of 900 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 110 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices for all grades being fairly maintained on account of a smaller run than a week ago, and a keener demand from both local and outside buyers. A large percentage of the offerings consisted of grassers, the bulk of them being in poor condition, and the general impression is that it would pay the farmer if he kept such stock a little longer on the grass before marketing. The attendance of buyers was large, including several from Quebec, who bought three or four carloads, and trade on the whole was more active than it has been of late. There was also some demand from exporters, owing to the stronger cable advices from Liverpool, which noted an advance in price of ½c to 1c per pound, as compared with a week ago. Choice stall-fed steers sold here at 6¼c to 6½c; good at 5¾c to 6c per lb. The best grassers brought 5¼c to 5½c; medium, 4½c to 5c, and lower grades from 3½c to 4½c per lb. Owing to the small supply of hogs and the keener demand for the same from packers and dealers, a stronger feeling developed in the market, and prices scored an advance of 25c to 35c per 100 lbs., with sales of selected lots at $8.75 to $8.85 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The condition of the market for small meats were unchanged. Supplies of all lines were limited, for which the demand was fairly good, and sales of sheep were made at 3½c to 4½c per lb. Lambs brought from $3 to $7 each, and calves from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, the receipts for the week ending June 19 were 1762 cattle for export account, and 793 cattle, 807 sheep and lambs, 890 hogs and 1588 calves for local consumption. The offerings this morning were 250 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 25 hogs and 125 calves.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REPORT TO COUNTY COUNCIL

The following is the report and request of the chairman of the Finance Committee for 1909—

Notwithstanding the fact that a current deficit to the amount of $918.31, appeared from a current standpoint at the end of 1908, chargeable to the general county rate, I am pleased to state that with your cooperation for the balance of the year the same rate as last year, or, (in other words, the rate of 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, will meet all general current expenses, namely, 2 4-5 mills on the dollar, and I would respectfully ask you to make provision for the levying of the same for 1909, the amount required being $22,817.47.

Owing to considerable permanent improvements having been done and now under way at the county House of Refuge, the rate for the past two years being adequate for current purposes, practically speaking, covered the same but as stated the permanent improvements are responsible for a deficit, therefore, in order to provide funds to meet the shortage, namely, $1,056.78 I would ask you to provide for the sum of $5,704.36, which will require a rate of 70-100 of one mill on the dollar for House of Refuge purposes for 1909.

The equivalent to the government school grant being $1,173.00, will require a rate of sixteen and one-eighth one-hundredths of a mill on the dollar on the sections enjoying said grant.

Respectfully submitted.

(Signed) A. BREAULT,
Chairman.

The Finance Committee recommends as follows—

1. That the report of the chairman and estimates for the year be received and adopted, and that the rates as set forth in his report be adopted, namely, general rate 2 4-5 mills; house of refuge rate, 70-100ths of a mill, and equivalent to Government school grant, 148-800ths of a mill.

2. That the payments set forth in schedule "A", being payments made under warden's or other contract, be confirmed, save account of Peterborough Review, of $29.00, which is referred to the county solicitor for consideration.

3. That the accounts set forth in schedule "B" be paid.

4. That the payment of $200, referred to in resolution of the council of 20th of June, 1908, regarding the Horticultural Society, be paid when approved by the treasurer and solicitor.

5. That the account of St. John's Industrial School for maintenance of J. J. Lapointe, be paid.

6. That the warden and county treasurer be authorized on behalf of the municipality, to execute such bond as may be required by the Traders' Bank to indemnify them against payment over to the municipality of the moneys deposited by the late J. Farthing in the bank, and which are payable to the county under agreement with him.

7. That the Board of Management of the House of Refuge be authorized to purchase a plot of land in the Lakefield cemetery, with full power to act.

8. That East Peterborough Agricultural Society and the West Peterborough Industrial Society be granted each $100.00, and the Lakefield, Keene, Kinmount and Lakehurst Societies be granted $25.00 each.

9. That if the Lakehurst Society does not have an exhibition this year the amount of above grant to the Society be expended upon the Mississauga bridge, and that Mr. Shaw be commissioner.

10. That a special grant of $100.00 be made to the townships of Belmont Methuen to assist in defraying expenses of recent smallpox epidemic, provided the Province of Ontario grant $300.00 toward the same purpose.

11. That no action be taken on application from secretary of Winter Fair and of National Sanitorium Association.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) A. BREAULT,
Chairman

The Return Of Gypsy.

By ADDISON HOWARD GIBSON.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

In the amethystine haze of an April morning on the Arizona foothills the cowboys of Circle H wheeled their bronchos into the gray dust of the trail.

There was a wild jangle of spurs, a clatter of restive hoofs, and they were off like one of the brown whirlwinds of their own desert to meet Gypsy and "the boss," who were coming to the ranch to spend a week.

They had derisively hurled "Adios, Layne!" at the bronzed young foreman as he leaned against the corral gate. They could not understand why he had persistently refused to join their reception committee.

It really was not the coming of Herington, "the boss," that was calling forth the unusual demonstration, but the return of Gypsy, their little comrade of the range, whom they had not seen for four years. It never entered their simple heads that two years of school in France, followed by two more of travel and society, might have changed their merry, fun loving little pet.

She was coming back as she had promised—that was the dominant consideration—and off they went, whooping.

Ned Layne, however, knew differently. He had seen her a year ago, and the knowledge had come to him then. She was a young lady, and they—and he—were only cowboys. As he leaned against the gate he thought of the old days. He remembered her eyes and voice on the evening before she departed into the world, and he remembered how she had said to him:

"Goodby, Ned. Father is going to give you the place of foreman. Make the most of your opportunities and buy out the Bar T. Don't forget me, Ned," and her eyes had been moist when she suddenly dropped them.

"I'll never forget you, Gypsy," he had promised stoutly, pressing the hand that fluttered in his.

"When I come home to the ranch I want you to be here to meet me," she added.

"I'll be sure to meet you," he returned. Then the train had borne her away to the new life, so different from that among the boys on her father's ranch.

Ned Layne and Gypsy Herington had been great comrades in those care free days, and if now he was the only one not riding out to meet her it was because he felt that these old days were gone forever and would best be forgotten. There should be nothing on his part to remind her of old promises and old thoughts that could have no place in her life any more.

Just a year ago Layne had seen her once at a great hotel in New York, where the wealthy ranchman and his daughter were stopping. He had gone all the way to the far eastern city for no other purpose than to see her, but the result had been a sadly discouraging one, and he had said farewell to his dreams. Gypsy, dressed in a bewildering gown and moving with bewildering ease and elegance among the elegant throng that oppressed the ranchman, was on her way to the opera under escort of an immaculately clad young Englishman possessed of a big title, and Layne was left to be entertained by her father.

She had asked him to come back and breakfast with them, but her changed bearing and the cool treatment accorded to him by the condescending nobleman had nettled Layne. He took the very next train back to the land of sunshine, where people were not proud and stuck up and did not forget old friends.

On his return the cowboys of Circle H had besieged him eagerly for news of their little chum of the ranch.

"Yes, I saw her," he answered, veiling the bitterness in his heart, "and she's a great belle in her society togs. She has a beau, Lord Percy Ellington, one of those ping hatted chaps, and she seems to like his attentions all right. The boss says he followed them back from Europe."

Having imparted this information to the news hungry men, Ned had gone off by himself under the starlight and finally abandoned all his old plans and hopes.

Ever since that night the young man had been formulating a plan for his future which he kept strictly to himself, resolved to execute the first step toward it when the owner of the ranch returned to his own again. Accordingly he mounted Muggins, his own pony, and rode rapidly away across the brown mesa before the party could arrive.

From an eminence his well trained eyes caught the blur of rising dust far up the trail. Nearer approach enabled him to recognize the ranch buckboard driven by Bob Cat Nick. Seated by the driver was the trim figure of Gypsy, while the stout form of Herington and a slender man wearing a derby occupied the back seat. Trailing behind or galloping proudly on either side of the vehicle rode the adoring cowboys, chatting merrily with their old friend.

At sight of the derby hat a frown crossed Ned's face, and, putting spur to the unoffending Muggins, the disgruntled young horseman rode off down the gulch.

"Ellington along!" he exclaimed. "Yet what right have I to be surprised or care for that? No doubt Herington wants to show his prospective son-in-law what a fine ranch he has for his daughter."

When he had reached the live oak thicket quite a distance away he let Muggins rest. Throwing himself upon the ground, he surrendered his mind to a train of miserable thoughts.

He had lain there a long time, when suddenly he was aroused from his bitter reflections by the clatter of hoofs over the rocky trail.

Pushing back his sombrero from his eyes, he looked up into the smiling face of Gypsy, seated upon Slap Dash her favorite pony.

"And this is the way you keep your promise?" she said reproachfully.

He scrambled to his feet and, throwing one arm across the saddle on his pony's back, leaned there till he could summon self mastery.

"What do you care, Gypsy?" he finally interrogated, his eyes stubbornly refusing to meet hers.

Some of the brightness left the girl's face as she noted the misery on his.

"Tell me what it all means, Ned," she begged. "Why are you not yourself? Why do I find you so changed?"

"Changed? Heavens!" and he could not forbear a gesture of impatience. "You"—

"Here," she interrupted in the scolding tone of her privileged girlhood, "we come all the way from New York to pay you a visit at Circle H, arrive and find this on the table," and she held up a letter. "What do you mean by resigning? Why do you want to leave father's ranch? He is wild over it and sent me to find you."

"I should think Ellington might object to your riding after me," he remarked, his bronze cheeks reddening with scorn.

"Ellington?" Then a light broke over her face. "That funny lord? Why, Lord Percy is in England long ago. Finding me too loyal an American to buy a foreign title, he ended the long siege and departed."

"Who came with you and your father, then?" he inquired.

"Oh, that was Cousin Cyril, who is just out of college and needs the tonic of our mountain ozone."

Slipping lightly from the back of Slap Dash, she came over to Ned and in her old way put both hands on his strong young shoulder.

"Now, Ned," she said, "you won't leave Circle H, will you? Father needs you."

"Why did you treat me as you did in New York?" he moodily demanded, evading the question.

"Before a stranger—and Lord Percy at that?" asked she, laughing roguishly. "If, sir, you had come to breakfast next morning, I—I might have treated you otherwise."

He turned, facing her squarely. With one of his strong hands he imprisoned both of hers and held them against his breast.

"What would you have done if—if I had come?" he said breathlessly.

Her lovely face went very crimson under the searchlight of his eyes, but she answered bravely, "Ned, I'd have kissed you right out."

The foothills looked natural again. The sun shone with its old time glint and shimmer upon the gray desert sand. He had no longer the feverish desire to get away to fresh scenes.

"I'll stay at Circle H always, Gypsy, since you wish it," and, taking his written resignation from her, he tore it into fragments. "Say, sweetheart," he added, putting an arm tenderly round her waist, "I'll buy out Bar T tomorrow, and we'll run both ranches together."

Some Bathroom Mottoes.

It is very odd that while mottoes have been made, invented and borrowed for every other room in the house, the bathroom should be mottoless. Verses appropriate to the guest room come prettily framed, the dining room walls sometimes show a mural decoration of good cheer, an appropriate verse is carved into the library mantel, while smoking room, den and living room each boasts a special incentive to smoke, loaf or indulge in cheery chatter in painted, pyrographed or stenciled verse or prose. Only the bath room remains mottoless.

Surely, with so vast a field for invention or imitation, there should be no dearth of mottoes for the bathroom. For example, take Bacon's "Cleanness of body was ever esteemed to proceed from a due reverence to God."

And here's one from sixteenth century's John Heywood:

> The loss of wealth is loss of dirt,
> As sages at all time assert.
> The happy man's without a shirt.

Or Pope's scornful prod, "A heap of dust alone remains of thee." "Aye, there's the rub!" might be carved into the towel rack, while let into or over the tub Byron's "Once more upon the waters, yet once more."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Why the Indian Wanted a Desk.

A story is told of Quanah Parker, one of the old Comanche chiefs. Parker had been extremely valuable in bringing the Comanches into friendly relations with the whites. He found himself getting on in years, but without any property, and his white neighbors thought it would be a good idea to collect money to build him a house. They did this, and when the house was ready they told him and he went to see it.

"There is no furniture here," he said.

"What do you want?" they asked.

He replied he wanted this and that and added, "I want a big desk—a great big desk."

"What do you want that for?"

"Well," he said, "I want to go in there and sit back in my chair and put my feet up on that desk, and some one will come in and knock at the door and say, 'Is this Mr. Parker?' 'Yes.' 'I want to speak to you.' And I will say, 'Oh, go away; I'm busy today.'"—Delineator.

Largest Floating Dock.

The largest floating dock in the world is at Hamburg. Dock V., as it is called, has a bearing capacity exceeding 35,000 tons, nearly twice as great as the American dock Dewey, hitherto the most capacious of its kind in the world. This is the fifth floating dock built by the Hamburg yard, the present giant's immediate successor carrying but half the above mentioned tonnage. The dock consists of separate pontoons combined by the lateral cases to a solid unit. These several pontoons can also be docked in the dock. At each of the side cases the dock possesses complete steam engine and boiler plant, with dynamos and air compressors, so that it is wholly independent from the land and can be anchored anywhere. Electric cranes, with their arms reaching to the middle of the dock, run from end to end of the two lateral cases. Its keel and fundamental arrangements are such as to accommodate the greatest merchantmen or heaviest warship afloat.—Exchange.

The Eucalyptus Tree.

Hard, fine grained, durable wood usually grows slowly. A most remarkable exception is the eucalyptus, and this it is which gives the tree its great value as a means of reforestation. It is said that it grows five times as rapidly as any other tree. Seedlings have been observed to make an average growth of six inches in height a day, and one tree in California has attained a height of 125 feet and a diameter of 36 inches in nine years. The eucalyptus will not thrive where there are frosts, but in the south it promises to go a long way toward filling the place once occupied by other hard woods, which have been greatly reduced by demands for furniture, carriage and cooperage stock.—Youth's Companion.

OR AFTER?

WHEN are you going to find out whether the fire insurance you have paid for is really good or not—before or after the fire which makes it due or payable? You cannot change it after the fire. # A RECORD RUN WITH HOT DINNER

Mr. T. Hooper Delivers Dinner in 45 Minutes 17 Miles Away

Yesterday the 24th Field Battery started early on their march to Cobourg. Like all able-bodied people, they needed a meal about mid-day. And it was provided in this way. Last week, Major Young, of the staff, went down to about Baillieboro, on the Gravel Road, to see if any farmer or farmers along the line would undertake to provide dinner for the seventy odd men. No one would undertake the contract, so Major Young looked up Mr. T. Hooper, the popular caterer, and told him of the trouble. It wasn't a trouble very long for Mr. Hooper offered to provide a hot dinner and have it ready for the men at noon.

On Monday he had dinner cooked, and at 11.15 it was stowed, piping hot, into Mr. Stevens' big auto. At 12.00 noon it was served out to the men about a mile the other side of Baillieboro. Pretty quick work to cover the ground, nearly 18 miles, with such a load in 45 minutes. The men were greatly relieved and pleased, for up to 11.50 no dinner was in sight. A line received from Bob Hay says that the men and horses were in excellent shape and had taken it easy, doing the distance in a little less than four hours. They expected to make camp early in the evening, being at dinner time about half way.

OBJECTIONS MADE TO TREES BEING CUT DOWN

Island at Katchawanooka Lake Will Lose Its Beauty—Many Visitors to Stoney Lake Make Objections.

A citizen who has been up to Stoney Lake informed the Review this morning that there were many objections being made against the cutting down of trees on the island at Katchawanooka Lake for the purpose of making accommodation for those who wish to witness the aquatic sports on July 1. He says that the authorities of Lakefield are due considerable credit for the artistic taste and good judgment in keeping this spot in a state of nature. The island has been covered with a luxuriant growth of trees, feathered down to the water's edge and is a feature of the lake. A gang of men have been put at work with sharp axes at this place by the county council and are engaged in slashing down trees thus allowing anything but a pleasing back ground. Once these trees are cut down the former beauty of this spot will be lost and this pleasing feature of the landscape will be beyond the power of man to reproduce. To see this act of vandalism has made many painful impressions on the many people who pass up and down the waters as here at one swoop the people of Lakefield have been robbed of the credit so they have enjoyed for religiously preserving nature on their interesting lake.

WATERWORKS UP-TO-DATE NEW PRESSURE METER AT OFFICE

In order to enable the officials to tell exactly what happens to the pressure in the water mains and how it fluctuates, a new meter has been installed in Supt. Henderson's office in Hunter street, that is a marvel. It is like a barometer in appearance, or ordinary steam gauge. The face is a removable paper disc, with the pressure in figures running at regular intervals along a spoke radiating from the centre or hub. This disc revolves by clockwork, and at just the same rate as the hands of an ordinary timepiece, so that the exact moment of all variations is known. The variations are traced automatically upon the face of the paper disc by a little instrument that looks like a rake or safety razor, fed with red ink. Every fluctuation of pressure, just as in the case of a temperature chart, is traced in red ink, and by referring to the pressure figures it can be seen where the pressure has remained or gone to. A new disc is put on every day, and the old one fyled for reference. The railways, it is seen, cause no disturbance of pressure, as they are fed from tanks which are filled in turn, so as to entail no sudden fall of pressure. The great variation, however, is from 6 to 10 o'clock a.m., when eight watering carts are out, and these taking 700 to 800 gallons apiece cause a big variation.

CANOEIST WAS LUCKY THAT HE WASN'T OVERTURNED

Something was at fault last night when a launch and a canoe collided about two miles down the Otonabee. The steersman of the launch lays the blame on the canoeist who he states acted as though he was very inexperienced and ran his craft across the bow of the launch instead of keeping close to the shore, and trying to avoid the collision.

The launch was almost brought to a standstill when the canoe was hit the bow of the bigger boat gently nosing the canoe which rocked like the cradle in the tree top but the meeting was not a very forceful one and an upset was fortunately avoided.

MR. RYERSON RITCHIE OPENS NEW B. OF T. AT BOSTON, U.S.

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie is perhaps the best known authority on the continent on Board of Trade and Chambers of Commerce. Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, etc, all owe their reconstructed boards to the genius for re-organization of the former Peterborough boy. The Boston Post contains a full page account of the re-organization which was made by Mr Ritchie at the request of the merchants of Boston. Some thirty photographs give an excellent idea of the men who look quite unlike New Yorkers having apparently less energy and more repose. Mr. Ritchie's photo appears with those of the new secretary and new treasurer in a gallery of honor.

COMPANY INSPECTION OF 57TH REGIMENT LAST NIGHT

Inspection Will Be Continued To-night and To-morrow Night—Rules Governing Efficiency Pay—Miniature Ranges in the Shooting Gallery of the Armouries Now Ready.

The 57th Regiment did not hold a marchout last night but instead the annual company inspection, commenced under the supervision of Col. Young, of the D.A.A.G., Kingston. The regiment was put through company and squad drill, and the inspection, which will continue throughout the week, will be thorough. The miniature ranges are now open in the shooting gallery of the armouries, and practice will start on July 5th. Regimental drills will be discontinued until further notice, after Wednesday, June 23rd. The orders for the week are as follows;—

Headquarters,
Peterborough,
June 21, 1909.

Orders by the Officer Commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers:

No. 1.—Detail of duty for the week ending June 28th, 1909;—Captain for the week, Capt. Cluxton; subaltern for the week, Lieut. Merritt.

No. 2.—The following extracts from General Orders are promulgated for the information of the regiment;—

General Order 58, May, 1909;—

"Efficiency pay;—

"For article 217 amended by G.O. 49, April, 1909, substitute 217. Efficiency pay may be issued to warrant officers, Non.-Coms. and men of the active militia (non-permanent) an addition to pay of rank while on ordinary service, at the rates prescribed herein and under the following conditions;—

Rates of efficiency pay;—
1st rate, 20 cents per diem.
2nd rate, 40 cents per diem.
3rd rate, 50 cents per diem.

"Second conditions applicable to all arms (non-payment.)

"If a man misconducts himself or is negligent or inefficient, the commanding officer may stop the whole or any portion of such man's efficiency pay, which he would otherwise have qualified for, and the amount so stopped with the reason for such stoppage to be shown in the efficiency pay roll.

"To be eligible for efficiency pay a man must:

(a) Be duly enrolled in a corps of active militia and have performed training as prescribed for the corps to which he belongs for not less than 10 days in the year for which pay is claimed.

(b) Have satisfactorily performed the drills and duties prescribed for his position in the arm of the service to which he belongs, and be certified in the efficiency pay roll by the officer commanding the unit to have become reasonably proficient therein and deserving of efficiency pay.

(c) Must further fulfill the following conditions applicable to the arm of the service to which he belongs.

The above are the only exemptions allowed and no other men are allowed to draw efficiency pay except those specified in article 220, unless they carry out prescribed musketry practice.

If exempted under this clause, from musketry practice, or under article 220 efficiency pay may be paid at the rate the officer commanding the regiment certifies the man is deserving of having regard to his length of service and manner in which he has performed his duties, provided that any man who has not previously attended any training must not be granted more than first rate of efficiency pay.

(e) For first rate of efficiency pay, 20 cents per diem.

Have made a score of not less than 14 points at each of two ranges, 100 and 200 yards, seven shots at each.

For first rate of efficiency pay;—50 cents per diem.

"Have made a score of not less than 28 points at each of two ranges as above.

The ranges herein specified refer only to units training at camps where service ranges are installed.

For city corps (i.e. units not training at camps) the ranges to govern efficiency pay may be 200 and 400 yards instead of 100 and 200 yards, but the choice must be made by the O.C. before the annual course commences.

INFANTRY WITHOUT RANGES

(f) In the case of Infantry units without service range accommodation the conditions of clause (e) may may be varied as follows;—

"Have made a score of not less than 30 points at each of two ranges, 25 and 50 yards as above.

(g) Men who fail to qualify for the first rate of efficiency pay at their first trial cannot in any case be permitted to draw higher than the first rate of their qualify in a subsequent trial.

DISQUALIFICATION.

(h) Any cases of the following nature occurring during musketry practice are to be considered as disqualifying to the men concerned from any grant of efficiency pay, and the range officer is to report such case to the commanding officer in order that the offenders may be punished and the necessary deductions made.

(i.) Any man firing or attempting to fire for another by impersonation or any man allowing another person to fire in his behalf."

No. 3.—In accordance with the foregoing General Order, it is hereby notified that the miniature ranges are now open in the shooting gallery of the armouries, and that practice will be commenced on and continue until further order from July 5th, 1909.

No. 4.—Musketry practice will begin each evening at 8 p.m. and will be under the charge and direction of the chairman of the Rifle Committee, who will detail from time to time the necessary range officers.

NASSAU CAMPING GROUNDS PARTICULARLY SUITABLE

Up around Nassau the locality is bright with the uniforms of the soldiery. The plateau at the foot of the big hill forms an ideal camping ground. In the days gone by, when the lumber interests were the main thing in sight the ground was covered with freshly cut timber, piled to wait for the drying before shipment. Very few traces remain of the gigantic mills and piling grounds that once existed at this point.

No finer spot could be desired for the camp. It is clean, well in grass, the river along side supplies abundant water, and the ground is high enough to be well drained. There is ample room for the manoeuvres and the mimic war can be played out on the turf without let or hindrance. From the top of the big hill that rises to the west a view can be had that covers the city and a wide area surrounding. The course of the river may be traced from below Lakefield to where it disappears, below Inverlea Park, to appear again in the widening of Little Lake. To the south, until the hills of Otonabee shut off the view, the course of the river is in sight. Across from the camp, on the Douro side of the river is lock No. 5, of the Trent Canal system, and from the power house of the Otonabee Power Co. the dam stretches across the river. Did the force desire to indulge in exercises looking to acquiring some knowledge of the new warfare as will be exemplified in the air ship of the future, the big hill offers an ideal place to learn to glide. To learn to glide means mastering the A.B.C. of flight in the air. The future routine may bring with it appliances for use in mastering the first principles of the art of the aerial scout.

MERCHANT SPEAKS OF RECENT CHANGE

Mr. F. C. Cubitt said in conversation with a Review representative this morning, that he admired the policy which the T.A.S. had adopted this year in deciding not to solicit any help from the merchants of the city, but to accept only what was voluntarily offered. He thought if more of the institutions would follow in the same steps, it would not only be more comfortable for the merchants, but would result in the societies being thought more of, and all help given would be given cheerfully.

A business man could help the cause in which he was most interested, and not be held up for everything that comes along, because some regular customer is sent in to ask for the contribution.

This plan also leaves the business man some independence, and gives him the pleasure of giving unasked, in the direction he wishes his assistance to go.

DAUGHTER BORN TO QUEEN VICTORIA

Royal Couple of Spain Pleased With Birth of Princess

Special to the Review.

Lagranja, Spain, June 22.—Queen Victoria gave birth to a daughter at 8.25 this morning. The birth of a princess is particularly pleasing to both the King and Queen, as they had hoped that this child, their third, would be a girl. The first two children are boys, Prince Alfonso, born May 10th, 1907, and Prince Jaime, born June 23, 1908.

A BUSY NIGHT FOR LITTLE ONES

The council chamber, where the civic Solons sit in solemn and deliberate conclave has been put to a new and helpful service. Last night it was invaded by a swarm of little ones, brought or sent to be vaccinated. The chatter and hum made the room lively. Many of the children seemed to take the occasion as a sort of festive gathering and were quite ready to be vaccinated. Little girls with pig-tails carefully plaited hanging down their backs were a trifle diffident. Boys were more boisterous and crowded up to get their turns.

Dr. Amys and Dr. Grey were there each having laid out before him an assortment of tools and vaccine points. A white gowned nurse flitted about and prepared the little arms of the wee ones for the doctor's inspection, and operation. Only a few minutes were required and the little folk watched with wide open eyes, and their fears were easily allayed. Both nurse and the doctors were as gentle as possible and reassuring and it didn't seem such a dreadful thing after all. All submitted arms for the operation though a few modestly preferred legs. But arms were in the majority.

By seven o'clock the first comers were being treated. At eight o'clock business was quite brisk and in half an hour the rush was on. By nine there was a falling off with the result that quite a large number had been treated.

The medical men take turns in giving their services, so long as the call for vaccination keeps up. It is a precaution that while often urged is generally neglected and it is as well to have it done and over.

TO SUMMER AT LAKES

Kawartha Regions Attract American Pleasure Seekers

Peterborough always makes a good impression as a summer town. A member of the Review staff to-day received a letter from Mr. Maurice Darcy, who was here as the "Man in the Moon" with the "Land of Nod." Darcy stated that he would be here in about two weeks' time to spend the remainder of the summer at one of the resorts on Stony Lake.

Mr. Darcy says he has been at Brooklyn since "The Land of Nod" disbanded several weeks ago, and has been enjoying himself thoroughly with the fleet of the Brooklyn Yacht Club. Two other members of the company, Messrs Wardle and King, may accompany Mr. Darcy.

CITY BUYS CYCLONE GRATES

When the city installed the heater in the city buildings it was supposed that the outfit was complete for all service required. It turns out that while fairly economical in the matter of fuel, there is no arrangement concerning the grates, on which the fuel is burned, may be shaken. Why this was not discovered at the time the business was installed is not clear, but it has been decided to put in something effective at once and get it ready for the winter to come. So the sum of $60 will be expended in getting and fitting in a set of "cyclone" grates. It is claimed that there will be a marked saving in fuel and better heating facilities. The term "cyclone" does not give any clue as to whether the rate of combustion will be so fast that the name will justly describe the condition of burning or that the draft will be improved but anyway the change will be made.

WEDDING BELLS

LOCKINGTON—WESLEY

A very quiet wedding took place yesterday at St. John's church at 2.30 o'clock when Miss Lily Maude, daughter of Mrs E G Wesley, 360 Stewart street became the wife of Mr. Harry Lockington, son of Mr. John Lockington, of Nassau. On account of recent bereavement in the bride's family only the immediate friends were present. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J C Davidson, and there were no attendants.

WHITE—DRUMMOND

A pretty house wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Alexander Drummond, 750 George st., this afternoon when her only daughter, Catharine Isabella, became the wife of Mr. John White, a prominent business man of Midland.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robt. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's at two o'clock in the presence of over thirty guests. The rooms had been prettily decorated for the occasion with palms, marguerites and peonies and with the dainty gowns of the guests, presented a very pretty picture. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Duncan Drummond, wore a handsome gown of cream duchess satin, en train, and carried a bouquet of white bride roses and lily of the valley. She also wore the conventional veil with a wreath of lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Mary McPherson, of St. Thomas, was daintily gowned in pale mauve silk and carried a bouquet of marguerites and maidenhair fern. The groom was assisted by Mr. Ernest Alexander, of Midland. Before the bridal party entered the room Miss Margaret McGregor, of St. Thomas, played the wedding march, and later sang "O Fair, O Sweet, O Holy." Mrs. Drummond, mother of the bride, wore a handsome dress of black voile over silk.

Mr. and Mrs. White left on the 4.48 C.P.R. for Toronto, where they will take the steamer for a trip down the St. Lawrence. Mrs. White travelled in a three piece suit of grey cloth elaborately embroidered by hand, as were the buttons, which were used as trimming. With this she wore a pretty hat of white milan straw, faced with white moire and trimmed with a large white osprey.

Mrs. White will be much missed by her associates in the city, especially in St. Paul's church, where she took an active interest. The large number of presents received were an evidence of her popularity.

A number of guests were present from out of town and many remembrances were received from India, Mexico and the Northwest.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. White will take up their residence in Midland, where Mr. White is in business.

LOOK LIKE A "TROVATORE" CREW

Gypsies Eligible for Grand Opera in the Matter of Appearance

When the gypsies were taken into custody it looked as though a grand opera had been rounded up. There were suggestions of possible Caruso's, Plancons, Calves, and others in the contingent, and the women looked slovenly picturesque in their brilliant and Oriental-like raiments.

An observer of the motely crowd at the gaol yard would be liable to think that the curtain was up for the prison ensemble, and the company was liable to spring some sizzling arias on the unsuspecting and defenceless gaol birds.

DOG RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

Occupants Stopped Their Machine and Took Care of the Injured Animal

An automobile with several occupants, ran over a dog at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets last night about nine o'clock. The injury to the animal was accidental, but the machine was stopped and the injured dog was taken care of. This is very commendable on the part of those in the automobile, and a case such as this, though seemingly a very small matter, is deserving of notice and if other drivers would show the same spirit, the abuse which is directed against the automobile as a general rule, would not be long in diminishing to a very small fraction.

SUCCESSFUL RECITAL

At Conservatory Music Hall Last Night by Pupils of Misses Adamson and Newman

A delightful recital, the first of a series being held, was given at the Conservatory Music Hall last night by the pupils of Miss Adamson, violin, and Miss Newman, piano, of the Conservatory staff. A good sized audience was in attendance, and the recital was a most successful one.

Three of Miss Newman's pupils were unable to be present, and their places were taken by Misses McGill, Starke and Sisson, pupils of Mr. Gliddon. Without any opportunity of preparation they were called from the audience, and they played in a most satisfying manner.

The programme was as follows—

Schutt ...... Canzonetta
Genevieve Sanderson.
Paldne ...... March Mignonne
Schubert ...... Adagio
Edwina Palmer.
Schubert ...... Fantasy
Miss McGill.
Faust ...... Waltz
Katherine McCarthy.
Chopin ...... Berceuse
Annie Sisson.
Mendelssohn ...... Spring Song
(For violin)
Edwina Palmer.
Liszt ...... Love Dream
Beatrice Starke.
(a) Field ...... Nocturne
(b) Spinning Song ...... Mendelssohn
Katherine Burnett.

The Conservatory's closing concert will be held to-morrow night.

RETURNS FROM TRIP ABROAD

Miss Ethel Flavelle returned home yesterday after a most pleasant three months trip abroad. She was accompanied by Mrs. W. E. Rundle, and Miss Mina Flavelle, Toronto, the latter returning some weeks ago. During her extended trip Miss Flavelle visited many places of interest in The Azores, Gibraltar, Italy, France, Switzerland and England.

Miss Flavelle sailed from New York on the White Star Line steamer Finland and returned on the Allan Line steamer Victoria, landing at Montreal. Miss Flavelle was met at Quebec City by her father, Mr J. D Flavelle and her sister, Miss Edith. They arrived in Peterborough yesterday morning and came to Lindsay in an auto arriving here at noon.—Lindsay Warder.

In the case of Howard Gould, however, Mrs. Howard Gould appears to have an all sufficient tax upon his income.

HAZEL BELLE'S SECOND RACE

The Toronto Driving Club held a matinee at Dufferin Park yesterday afternoon and put on three good races for the harness horses, all mile heats. The weather was perfect for good racing, the track in first-class condition, but the attendance was not up to the average that has patronized these matinees this season.

The judges were not satisfied with the showing made by the drivers in class B. special, and found it necessary to change the drivers behind Wallace W. and Prairie Oyster in the third heat of this race. The change did not affect the result, and Stroud got the race in straight heats.

First race—Class B special, one mile:

| Stroud | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Wallace W. | 2 | 2 | 2 |
| Prairie Oyster | 3 | 3 | 3 |

Radium and Vaccine.

An Italian physician who exposed fresh vaccine virus to the emanations of radium for varying periods and then made use of it in vaccinating children found that there was no effect on the action of the virus produced by the exposure to the rays, but that the pustules produced by the virus were entirely free from any septic suppuration. There was no inflammatory area and no fever. He finds that this is an efficient method of purifying vaccine virus, but on account of the expense of radium not one that can be commonly followed.—Il Policlinico.

HOPE OF THE HEART.

By BALDWIN SEARS.

The scuttle in the roof of the farmhouse opened slowly, and a girl's head appeared. As she held up her face to the evening breeze her fair face, yellow hair and delicate features made her appear like some faint star just glancing above the horizon.

A young man with a scythe over his shoulder crossing the lane below the barn looked up toward the house. Seeing the girl, he stopped, straightened his shoulders as though he half expected her to speak and to speak himself, then walked on with lagging steps and disappeared below the orchard where the brook flows into the woods.

Mary leaned her arms on the edge of the scuttle and looked out. The hot air from the garret blowing in gusts past her face was like a twitch at her sleeves reminding her of the household she had left below.

She was the only one who had not already gone to bed. It was harvest time. They were cutting the wheat in the meadows, and all day the hum of the reaper had come up from the broad white fields where the men were at work. Since dawn the house had been buzzing with lively toil, but now the day's work was ended.

In the front room off the porch the farmer and his wife were asleep. They had gone to bed immediately after supper, and while Mary had sat on the porch she heard their low voices talking over the potato crop and the grain, their drowsy words growing fewer, slower, until at length they sank away and ceased while yet the bobolinks were skimming over the meadow and the red of the sunset lingered.

Across the gate her married brother and a neighbor had talked politics. Mary had heard their nasal voices alternating like the wooden balls tossed by a juggler. In the south chamber just under the attic her sister-in-law had been putting her children to bed, the creak, creak of the rocking chair as it swayed over an uneven board dimly audible through the silent house. In the attic under the roof slept her little brother Bob, dreamless, tired and contented at the end of his long summer day.

Down in the kitchen yard the turkeys and chickens had gone to roost in the apple trees and the grape arbor, clucking and twittering in sleepy protest against the awkward ones as they settled themselves together.

In a few moments it had grown very still and dark.

The girl on the housetop drew a long breath and leaned her head back against the edge of the roof. It was only 8 o'clock, and the faint yellow twilight lingered on the border of the summer night. A new moon hung low over the crest of the woods. The west wind brought up the hot smell of ripening cornfields, and a bat darted out of the orchard in swooping circles against the clear night.

From her eyrie above the treetops the farm buildings, the neighboring houses, the fields and lanes, even the wide post road, looked quite small and cheap, like a toy village. The countryside in its irregular checkerboard of pasture, corn and woodland, pale yellow with the wheat stubble, somber green where half ripened orchards spread, marked here and there by a cluster of roofs, a spire that told a hamlet in the hills, became significant only in the mystery of distance as it mounted toward the hills and ended at last in one vast, gray, sealike level against the trackless sky. Mary looked at it all as one upon whose mind the meaning of these familiar scenes had just begun to dawn—these fields, the chickens she must pluck, the bread she must make, the raspberries she must preserve, all grouped themselves before her in a coherent scheme of life. From dawn till dark, each day alike, cooking, washing, preserving, holding the babies—the burdens of each side were hers. So far she had carried them unthinkingly, unquestioningly. It was only the lot of every farmer's life.

Tonight she was unusually tired. To escape a feeling of restlessness she had determined to go to bed. It was refreshing to lie in the cool darkness. But before she reached the top of the attic stairs she felt the dry heat of the sun baked roof. The great, timbered space, dark with its age blackened beams and scantly windowed twilight, held a strange odor of cedar shingles, of ancient leather trunks, of musty papers. In the solemn dusk the candle lost its bold glare and drooped to a wavering spark, eyed by the glimmering gray panes of the gable windows high under the ridge.

The two chimneys, like huge stone giants whom she had been feeding all day, stooped over her as they towered toward the roof, reminding her of tomorrow's kitchen work.

As Mary sat on the edge of her cot, thinking of these things, she looked up vaguely. A star, the first in the pale night, shone through the window upon her, clear, unwinking, pensive, holy.

A lock of hair loosened by the wind floated softly across her cheek like the kiss of unseen lips. For the first time in her life she felt the restless longing for some good of which she was ignorant. What was it her simple, sweet existence lacked? Had she not everything that a girl could ask—father, mother, food and shelter, a place in the world? What else had any one? The aged farmer and his wife—those two good people fast asleep without a thought in their nightcaps beyond the potato crop—their daughter-in-law, the men at work in the fields, all those dependent on the great harvests, on the bountiful farm—were they not happy, contented, unquestioning? Was she not happy too? Had she anything to complain of, to regret, to wish for?

Suddenly out of the bush came the cry of the whippoorwill, that piercing, mournful voice of the vacant, wind blown fields, of meadows flowering unseen and far away. It thrilled her like a pain. It stabbed her through and through and cut her to the heart with its questioning, solitary call, hidden in the twilight of the woods.

She had heard it so often, year after year, like the robin and the lark. Never had it sounded so lonely, so friendless and apart. A strange longing swelled up in her breast; tears filled her eyes. The years of her life, with their simple tasks, their ambitions, hopes and dreams, came to her like some vast tidal wave upon a sunny shore, withdrawing in a long resounding sigh at the absence of some unknown joy. She stared through the warm darkness toward the edge of the woods outlined against the evening as though one should try to read the soul of a silhouette. Then she dropped her face in her hands for a single minute.

At 6 o'clock in the morning Mary was in the garden picking the vegetables for dinner. The sunshiny, dew fresh day, the beans and cabbages in their prim symmetry, the tall scarlet hollyhocks nodding against the fence, made the experience of the night before very remote and visionary.

As Mary reached the end of the row of peas she pushed back her sunbonnet and looked up; then her song stopped, and she knelt silently.

A young man was standing on the other side of the garden wall looking at her. He blushed as he met her steady, smiling gaze. "Picking peas?" he asked. "You've got a lot, haven't you?"

"Yes, indeed; plenty this year. Have you?"

"All we can eat and more too. Getting old, though. How are these?" He crossed the wall and stood beside her. "Yours are pretty tender yet." He tore off another pod. "Shan't I help you? Two can work better than one."

"Oh, thank you; you needn't bother." Yet she smiled at him.

"Oh, I like to do this. I'll take the inside of the row."

"It's very kind of you," she answered, looking up at him sweetly.

How brown and strong and sinewy he had grown since he had begun to work in the harvest fields! She had not seen him for a long while, not since they were in school together. She was looking at him again when he glanced up and caught her eyes. This time they both blushed. They said nothing for some time. Mary picked busily, and the boy whistled half to himself. They were beside each other, with nothing between them but the slender trellis of pea vines, enough to give the boy courage to say, "Did you hear the whippoorwill last night?"

Mary felt a flash that made her nerves tingle.

"Oh, did you, too?" she exclaimed, then stopped, abashed at her own eagerness. How could Alvy understand the confession she had made to a whippoorwill just because it was unseen? "Where was it?" she asked, with all the carelessness she could summon.

"Down in the wood lot about half past 8. I was coming home 'cross lots back of your barn; been up at the other farm all day."

They were picking slowly now. How pretty Mary was with her braided yellow hair, her rose pink ears, her smooth lidded, down drooping eyes!

Alvy felt his heart throb dizzily. So many words and thoughts went round and round in his head that he could not say one. And there was the screen of brush and vines between them. The delicate film of green was strong as a prison grille, through which the serene face of the girl showed upon him. Somehow their hands met upon the same pods. Mary's trembled, then lay still in his.

"I saw you up on the roof," whispered the boy. "You were listening, weren't you?"

Mary nodded.

"Do you—do you like to hear it, Mary? Do you like the whippoorwill?" Mary's lip trembled. "I don't know. I guess so."

"Because he—he loves you, Mary."

"Mary, Mary, where are you?"

The two in the garden sprang up as the shrill voice called from the kitchen. As the boy leaped over the fence into his own orchard Mary looked after him. From the trees among which he disappeared came clear, low and sweet the call of the whippoorwill.

Australia and the Chinese.

Australia is perturbed by the discoveries of Mr. Batchelor, the commonwealth minister for external affairs, who has been inquiring into the illegal influx of Chinese. There is a wealthy organization in China with agencies in all the principal Australian ports, and with the connivance of ships' officers the systematic smuggling of Chinese into Australia has been carried on for a long time. The ships trading between Hongkong and the Australian ports have been so cunningly supplied with false bulkheads, walls and floors that hiding room has been provided for eighty Chinese stowaways on a single voyage. Ship cooks have been secretly paid to supply the stowaways with food. The trade is very profitable, as Australia is only a few days' steaming from China, and many thousands of Mongolians are always ready to pay large sums and run all sorts of risks to get to the land of gold.—Chicago News.

THE QUEER RUSSIANS.

They Are Kindly and Cruel at One and the Same Time.

No one can be long associated with Russians without reaching a condition of utter amazement at the extraordinary inconsistency of their mental makeup. The kindliest of men seem to receive placidly the most blood curdling doctrines. They enforce the cruelest of laws in the gentlest way, or vice versa. An odd tale illustrating their queer ideas of discipline is told by a revolutionist who has just come to this country. By those who ought to know it is said to be typical of a singular simplicity of mind which is also said to be peculiar to the Russians.

A follower of Tolstoy was called on for military service. He presented himself to the army officers, as required, and explained that he could not serve because of his beliefs.

"Ah," said the officer in charge politely, "but you understand that this means prison?"

"Of course."

"You will be sent," continued the officer, "to the Caucasus," naming a prison of dreadful repute. "The guard will have to start at once with you."

He turned to several other officers and discussed the matter of the guard for a few minutes. Then he had a happy thought.

"Why send a guard at all?" he said. "You," turning to the young man—"you can find your way there alone, can't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, that saves a lot of trouble," exclaimed the officers, delighted. So they wrote him a careful letter of introduction to the governor of the prison, explaining that the bearer was to be locked up as soon as he arrived in a most unpleasant cell.

"That's all right," they said in great satisfaction. "We hope your journey won't be too tiresome." And they parted with great cordiality.

The young man did as he was told and is now in prison. The chances are probably even that he and the governor will become sincere friends or that an order to put him to death will arrive and be executed in the same impersonal, eminently Russian manner.—New York Times.

HAMPTON COURT GHOSTS.

Specters That Haunt the Historic Old English Palace.

The discovery at Hampton Court palace of some arches bridging a long forgotten moat reminds a correspondent of several other curious discoveries made in this royal palace. One concerns Mistress Sibell Penn, who was Edward VI.'s nurse and died in the palace in 1562. She was buried in Hampton church, and a monument was erected, which was irreverently destroyed when the old church was pulled down in 1829. Soon after this strange noises, as of a woman working a spinning wheel, were heard in the southwest wing of the palace. Search was made; an ancient chamber was discovered, in which was an antique spinning wheel, and the old oak planks were worn away where the treadle struck the floor. After this Mrs. Penn's ghost is said to have disturbed many occupants of the palace; but, according to Mr. Law's history of the palace, she has not been seen since 1886, when her tall, gaunt figure nearly frightened a young soldier to death.

Another discovery arose through the experiences of a lady of title who lived on the west side of the fountain court in 1870. She was conscious of the presence in her rooms of two invisible beings, and, disturbed by mysterious sounds, she complained to the lord chamberlain, but he declined to interfere on the ground that there were no funds at his disposal for any such work and that, moreover, his jurisdiction did not extend to the spirit world. However, on Nov. 2 1871, some workmen excavating in the cloister of the fountain court found two perfect skeletons of full grown men opposite the lady's door. They were given Christian burial in Hampton church, and the strange noises from that time ceased.

Now the only ghost seen in the palace is that of Jane Seymour, queen of Henry VIII., who, according to certain veracious residents, still occasionally walks, lighted taper in hand, through Silver Stick gallery.—London Chronicle.

London's Homeless.

On one night in each year the London police take a careful census of the homeless. This year the night selected was that of Jan. 15, when the officers found more than 2,000 persons, of whom nearly 200 were women and 23 children, sleeping outdoors without shelter. On the same night nearly 22,000 persons were occupants of common lodging houses of the poorer type, and about 1,200 more were accommodated in the casual wards of workhouses.

Compressed Haversack Rations.

A Tonawanda (N. Y.) firm recently completed a sample order of 3,000 packages of compressed haversack rations for the use of the United States army. The rations are packed in a water tight box 2¾ inches long, 2¼ inches wide and 1¼ inches thick. The articles contained are: Salt, .16 ounce; pepper, .02 ounce; sugar, 2.4 ounces, and coffee, 1.12 ounces, sufficient for one soldier for a day. The coffee is compressed under twelve tons pressure and is reduced one-third in bulk. The salt is prepared under five tons pressure, and the pepper is placed in a capsule inserted in a wooden holder. Each article is wrapped in waterproof paper.—New York Tribune.

How Henry Knew.

It was while H. H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, was working at his first job, delivering the village newspaper, that his inborn capacity became evident. He brought in the name of a new subscriber, Isaiah West. Mr. Anthony, the publisher, wrote down the name. Then he turned to the boy. "How do you spell Isaiah, Henry?" he asked. "I-s-a-i-a-h," said Henry. "You'll do," said Mr. Anthony, with a chuckle. He told the story to a skeptic neighbor. "But how did you know how to spell it, Henry?" asked the neighbor. "I saw him write it down," said Henry.—Argonaut.

New Parisian Terror.

We are threatened—at least we are threatened in London, for we have it already in Paris—with a fearsome novelty in barrel organs. An ingenious descendant of Mephistopheles has invented a piano organ which is built on the lines of an automatic match machine. Its proprietor places it outside a house and goes around the corner.

The organ begins to play, and on top of it appears a notice, "Put a penny in the slot and the music will stop." A penny buys only three minutes' silence, though. Has anything more diabolical yet been invented?—London Standard.

CHAPTER XVII.

A FEW days later three men were closeted in the district attorney's office. Two of them were officials—the district attorney himself and our old friend the inspector. The third was the detective Sweetwater, chosen by them to keep watch on Mr. Grey.

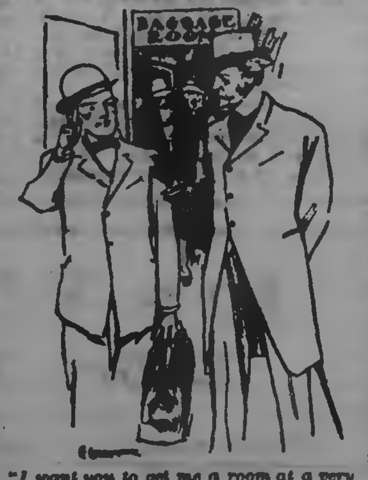
Sweetwater had just come to town. This was evident from the gripsack he had set down in a corner on entering; also from a certain tousled appearance which bespoke hasty rising and but few facilities for proper attention to his person. These details counted little, however, in the astonishment created by his manner. For a hardy chap he looked strangely nervous and indisposed—so much so that after the first short greeting the inspector asked him what was up and if he had had another Fairbrother house experience.

He replied with a decided no; that it was not his adventure which had upset him, but the news he had to bring.

Here he glanced at every door and window, and then, leaning forward over the table at which the two officials sat, he brought his head as nearly to them as possible and whispered five words.

They produced a most unhappy sensation. Both the men, hardened as they were by duties which soon sap the sensibilities, started and turned as pale as the speaker himself. Then the district attorney, with one glance at the inspector, rose and locked the door.

It was a prelude to this tale which I give, not as it came from his mouth, but as it was afterward related to me. The language, I fear, is mostly my own.



"I want you to get me a room at a very quiet hotel."

The detective had just been with Mr. Grey to the coast of Maine. Why there will presently appear. His task had been to follow this gentleman, and follow him he did.

Mr. Grey was a very stately man, difficult of approach, and was absorbed besides by some overwhelming care. But this fellow was one in a thousand and somehow during the trip he managed to do him some little service, which drew the attention of the great man to himself. This done, he so improved his opportunity that the two were soon on the best of terms, and he learned that the Englishman was without a valet, and, being unaccustomed to move about without one, felt the awkwardness of his position very much. This gave Sweetwater his cue, and when he found that the services of such a man were wanted only during the present trip and for the handling of affairs quite apart from personal attendance upon the gentleman himself, he showed such an honest desire to fill the place, and made out to give such a good account of himself, that he found himself engaged for the work before reaching C—.

This was a great stroke of luck, he thought, but he little knew how big a stroke or into what a series of adventures it was going to lead him.

Once on the platform of the small station at which Mr. Grey had bidden him to stop, he noticed two things—the utter helplessness of the man in all practical matters and his extreme anxiety to see all that was going on about him without being himself seen. There was method in this curiosity, too much method. Women did not interest him in the least. They could pass and repass without arousing his attention, but the moment a man stepped his way, he shrank from him only to betray the greatest curiosity concerning him the moment he felt it safe to turn and observe him. All of which convinced Sweetwater that the Englishman's errand was in connection with a man whom he equally dreaded and desired to meet.

Of this he was made absolutely certain a little later. As they were leaving the depot with the rest of the arrivals Mr. Grey said:

"I want you to get me a room at a very quiet hotel. This done, you are to hunt up the man whose name you will find written in this paper, and when you have found him make up your mind how it will be possible for me to get a good look at him without his getting any sort of a look at me. Do this and you will earn a week's salary in one day."

Sweetwater, with his head in air and his heart on fire—for matters were looking very promising indeed—took the paper and put it in his pocket; then he began to hunt for a hotel. Not till he had found what he wished and installed the Englishman in his room did he venture to open the precious memorandum and read the name he had been speculating over for an hour. It was not the one he had anticipated, but it came near to it. It was that of James Wellgood.

Satisfied now that he had a ticklish matter to handle, he prepared for it with his usual enthusiasm and circumspection.

Sauntering out into the street, he strolled first toward the postoffice. The train on which he had just come had been a mail train, and he calculated that he would find half the town there.

His calculation was a correct one. The store was crowded with people. Taking his place in the line drawn up before the postoffice window, he awaited his turn, and when it came shouted out the name which was his one talisman—James Wellgood.

The man behind the boxes was used to the name and reached out a hand toward a box unusually well stacked, but stopped halfway there and gave Sweetwater a sharp look.

"Who are you?" he asked.

"A stranger," that young man put in volubly, "looking for James Wellgood. I thought perhaps you could tell me where to find him. I see that his letters pass through this office."

"You're taking up another man's time," complained the postmaster. He probably alluded to the man whose elbow Sweetwater felt boring into his back. "Ask Dick over there; he knows him."

The detective was glad enough to escape and ask Dick. But he was better pleased yet when Dick, a fellow with a squint whose hand was always in the sugar, told him that Mr. Wellgood would probably be in for his mail in a few minutes. "That is his buggy standing before the drug store on the opposite side of the way."

So, he had netted Jones' quondam waiter at the first cast! "Lucky!" was what he said to himself. "Still lucky!"

Sauntering to the door, he watched for the owner of that buggy. He had learned, as such fellows do, that there was a secret hue and cry after this very man by the New York police; that he was supposed by some to be Sears himself. In this way he would soon be looking upon the very man whose steps he had followed through the Fairbrother house a few nights before and through whose resolute action he had very nearly run the risk of a lingering death from starvation.

"A dangerous customer," thought he. "I wonder if my instinct will go so far as to make me recognize his presence. I shouldn't wonder. It has served me almost as well as that many times before."

It appeared to serve him now, for when the man finally showed himself on the crosswalk separating the two buildings he experienced a sudden indecision not unlike that of dread, and, there being nothing in the man's appearance to warrant apprehension, he took it for the instinctive recognition it undoubtedly was.

He therefore watched him narrowly and succeeded in getting one glance from his eye. It was enough. The man was commonplace—commonplace in feature, dress and manner; but his eye gave him away. There was nothing commonplace in that. It was an eye to beware of.

He had taken in Sweetwater as he passed, but Sweetwater was of a commonplace type, too, and woke no corresponding dread in the other's mind, for he went whistling into the store, from which he presently reissued with a bundle of mail in his hand. The detective's first instinct was to take him into custody as a suspect much wanted by the New York police; but reason assured him that he not only had no warrant for this, but that he would better serve the ends of justice by following out his present task of bringing this man and the Englishman together and watching the result. But how, with the conditions laid on him by Mr. Grey, was this to be done? He knew nothing of the man's circumstances or of his position in the town. How, then, go to work to secure his co-operation in a scheme possibly as mysterious to him as it was to himself? He could stop this stranger in mainstreet with some plausible excuse, but it did not follow that he would succeed in luring him to the hotel where Mr. Grey could see him. Wellgood, or, as he believed, Sears, knew too much of life to be beguiled by any open claptrap, and Sweetwater was obliged to see him drive off without having made the least advance in the purpose engrossing him.

But that was nothing. He had all the evening before him and, re-entering the store, he took up his stand near the sugar barrel. He had perceived that in the pauses of weighing and tasting Dick talked; if he were guided with suitable discretion, why should he not talk of Wellgood?

He was guided, and he did talk, and to some effect—that is, he gave information of the man which surprised Sweetwater. If in the past and in New York he had been known as a waiter—or should I say steward—he was known here as a manufacturer of patent medicine designed to rejuvenate the human race. He had not been long in town and was somewhat of a stranger yet, but he wouldn't be so long. He was going to make things hum, he was. Money for this, money for that, a horse where another man would walk, and mail—well, that alone would make this postoffice worth while. Then the drugs ordered by wholesale! Those boxes over there were his, ready to be carted out to his manufactory. Count them, some one, and think of the bottles and bottles of stuff they stand for. If it sells as he says it will, then he will soon be rich, and so on, till Sweetwater brought the garrulous Dick to a standstill by asking whether Wellgood had been away for any purpose since he first came to town. He received the reply that he had just come home from New York, where he had been for some articles needed in his manufactory. Sweetwater felt all his convictions confirmed and ended the colloquy with the final question:

"And where is his manufactory? Might be worth visiting perhaps."

The other made a gesture, said something about northwest and rushed to help a customer. Sweetwater took the opportunity to slide away. More explicit directions could easily be got elsewhere, and he felt anxious to return to Mr. Grey and discover if possible whether it would prove as much a matter of surprise to him as to Sweetwater himself that the man who answered to the name of Wellgood was the owner of a manufactory and a barrel or two of drugs, out of which he proposed to make a compound that would rob the doctors of their business and make himself and this little village rich.

Sweetwater made only one stop on his way to Mr. Grey's hotel rooms, and that was at the stables. Here he learned whatever else there was to know, and, armed with definite information, he appeared before Mr. Grey, who, to his astonishment, was dining in his own room.

He had dismissed the waiter and was rather brooding than eating. He looked up eagerly, however, when Sweetwater entered and asked what news.

The detective, with some semblance of respect, answered that he had seen Wellgood, but that he had been unable to detain him or bring him within his employer's observation.

"He is a patent medicine man," he then explained, "and manufactures his own concoctions in a house he has rented here on a lonely road some half mile out of town."

"Wellgood does—the man named Wellgood?" Mr. Grey exclaimed, with all the astonishment the other secretly expected.

"Yes, Wellgood—James Wellgood. There is no other in town."

"How long has this man been here?" the statesman inquired after a moment of apparently great discomfiture.

"Just twenty-four hours this time. He was here once before, when he rented the house and made all his plans."

"Ah!"

Mr. Grey rose precipitately. His manner had changed.

"I must see him. What you tell me makes it all the more necessary for me to see him. How can you bring it about?"

"Without his seeing you?" Sweetwater asked.

"Yes, yes; certainly without his seeing me. Couldn't you rap him up at his own door and hold him in talk a minute while I looked on from the carriage or whatever vehicle we can get to carry us there? The least glimpse of his face would satisfy me—that is, tonight."

"I'll try," said Sweetwater, not very sanguine as to the probable result of this effort.

Returning to the stables, he ordered the team. With the last ray of the sun they set out, the reins in Sweetwater's hands.

They headed for the coast road.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE road was once the highway, but, the tide having played so many tricks with its numberless bridges, a new one had been built farther up the cliff, carrying with it the life and business of the small town. Many old landmarks still remained—shops, warehouses and even a few scattered dwellings. But most of these were deserted, and those that were still in use showed such neglect that it was very evident the whole region would soon be given up to the encroaching sea and such interests as are inseparable from it.

The hour was that mysterious one of the late twilight, when outlines lose their distinctness and sea and shore melt into one mass of uniform gray. There was no wind, and the waves came in with a soft plash, but so near to the level of the road that it was evident even to these strangers that the tide was at its height and would presently begin to ebb.

Soon they had passed the last forsaken dwelling, and the town proper lay behind them. Sand and a few rocks were all that lay between them now and the open stretch of the ocean, which at this point approached the land in a small bay, well guarded on either side by embracing rocky heads. This was what made the harbor at C—.

It was very still. They passed one team, and only one. Sweetwater looked very sharply at this team and at its driver, but saw nothing to arouse suspicion. They were now a half mile from C— and seemingly in a perfectly desolate region.

"A manufactory here!" exclaimed Mr. Grey. It was the first word he had uttered since starting.

"Not far from here," was Sweetwater's equally laconic reply, and, the road taking a turn almost at the moment of his speaking, he leaned forward and pointed out a building standing on the right hand side of the road with its feet in the water. "That's it," said he. "They described it well enough for me to know it when I see it. Looks like a robber's hole at this time of night," he laughed. "But what can you expect from a manufactory of patent medicine?"

Mr. Grey was silent. He was looking very earnestly at the building.

"It is larger than I expected," he remarked at the last.

Sweetwater himself was surprised, but as they advanced and their point of view changed they found it to be really an insignificant structure, and Mr. Wellgood's portion of it more insignificant still.

In reality it was a collection of three stores under one roof; two of them were shut up and evidently unoccupied, the third showing a lighted window. This was the manufactory. It occupied the middle place and presented a tolerably decent appearance. It showed, besides the lighted lamp I have mentioned, such signs of life as a few packing boxes tumbled out on the small platform in front, and a whinnying horse attached to empty buggy, tied to a post on the opposite side of the road.

"I'm glad to see the lamp," muttered Sweetwater. "Now, what shall we do? Is it light enough for you to see his face, if I can manage to bring him to the door?"

Mr. Grey seemed startled.

"It's darker than I thought," said he. "But call the man and if I cannot see him plainly, I'll shout to the horse to stand, which you will take as a signal to bring this Wellgood nearer. But do not be surprised if I ride off before he reaches the buggy. I'll come back again and take you up farther down the road."

"All right, sir," answered Sweetwater with a side glance at the speaker's inscrutable features. "It's a go!" And leaping to the ground he advanced to the manufactory door and knocked loudly.

No one appeared.

He tried the latch; it lifted, but the door did not open; it was fastened from within.

"Strange!" he muttered, casting a glance at the waiting horse and buggy, then at the lighted window, which was on the second floor directly over his head. "Guess I'll sing out."

Here he shouted the man's name.

"Wellgood! I say, Wellgood!"

No response to this either.

"Looks bad!" he acknowledged to himself, and, taking a step back, he looked up at the window.

It was closed, but there was neither shade nor curtain to obstruct the view.

"Do you see anything?" he inquired of Mr. Grey, who sat with his eye at the small window in the buggy top.

"Nothing."

"No movement in the room above? No shadow at the window?"

"Nothing."

"Well, it's confounded strange!" And he went back, still calling Wellgood.

The tied up horse whinnied, and the waves gave a soft splash, and that was all, if I except Sweetwater's muttered oath.

Coming back, he looked again at the window; then, with a gesture toward Mr. Grey, turned the corner of the building and began to edge himself along its side in an endeavor to reach the rear and see what it offered. But he came to a sudden standstill. He found himself on the edge of the bank before he had taken twenty steps. Yet the building projected on, and he saw why it had looked so large from a certain point of the approach. Its rear was built out on piles, making its depth even greater than the united width of the three stores. At low tide this might be accessible from below, but just now the water was almost on a level with the top of the piles, making all approach impossible save by boat.

To be continued.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Some Hints to Keep People Well.

Ninety-nine per cent. of the ordinary sicknesses are caused by the bowels, the kidneys or the skin.

As you know, these organs are the great purifiers of the human system. They filter impurities from the blood and pass them from the body. If the kidneys, bowels or skin weaken or get tired out or fail to do their regular work—then the blood becomes laden with impurities and poisoned. If it be the fault of the kidneys, then the skin is overworked in its efforts to throw off the excess of urea or waste matter. The glands become inflamed and enlarged—pimples break out—and there may be a rash or eczema of the skin. If it is the fault of the skin, then the kidneys are strained by overwork and there is constant pain in the back, dizziness, neuralgia, headaches and rheumatism. If it be the fault of the bowels, the blood is poisoned, the skin and kidneys weakened, the stomach upset—and, of course, there is Constipation and Biliousness.

How easy it is, then, to be free of all these troubles!

"Fruit-a-tives" is not merely a remedy for any one of these troubles but a cure for all. "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the skin, the liver, and the kidneys. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps all these great organs well and strong, and thus insures the blood being always pure and rich. With "Fruit-a-tives" in the house to take at the first sign of not feeling well, you need not have a day's sickness. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE BUILDING OF THE NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY

Summary of the Specifications as Laid Before the Property Committee to Consider

Last night the Property Committee of the Council met to go over the specifications for the new library. There was present Alderman Bradburn, chairman, and Aldermen Duncan and Morgan, of the committee, with Mayor Rush. The architects, Messrs. Belcher and Blackwell, were in attendance.

In brief, the conditions under which the contract is taken cover important details. The tenders are to be made in a bulk sum for all materials and work, drawings and specifications being taken together, and as they explain each other. The contractor or contractors to pay all fees and to assume all risks of loss by fire while the building is under construction. It is provided that changes may be made in the specifications if the committee deem desirable. Payments to be made on certificate of the architects, to the amount of 80 per cent., and the final 20 per cent. will be paid within 35 days after the building has been taken off the contractor's hands. Work must begin within two weeks after the signing of the contract, and continued without delay until completion, the date for this being placed at May 1st, 1910. Fifty dollars per week penalty may be exacted for failure to have the building ready at the time specified.

As it is assumed that the interior of the building will be finished during the winter months, the contractor is to keep the building heated during winter weather at his expense.

The foundation, up to the surface of the ground will be of concrete, and above the ground Longford stone. The walls to be of red pressed brick, set in colored mortar. Trimmings of Roman stone and of Limestone. The roof will be shingle covered.

The specifications are very full and minute, and cover all details, even down to the smallest particular. In general the wood finish of the rooms and entrances, open to the public, will be of oak and Georgia or red pine, as may be determined.

Other details convey the impression that the new library will be a most convenient and well designed building carefully planned and thoroughly well finished. While careful that the ultimate cost shall not exceed a reasonable amount, the committee desire that in all respects it will be a structure creditable to the city, as permanent as possible, and a building that should give many years' service on a minimum for repairs. Constructed as it will be, it should meet the needs of the city in all respects during the life of the present generation. If there be ratepayers who assume that such matters as the erection of public buildings do not receive careful attention, such idea may be dispelled by listening to the painstaking threshing out of each detail, and the consideration each item of the proposed construction receives.

The lettered stone over the main doorway will carry the inscription "Public Library," though that is not considered final. The committee expect that some suggestions may follow.

Some additions, bearing on the construction of a vault will be added, and the specifications will be furnished to the council with the recommendation of the committee, that they be accepted. It will then remain for the council, if they accept, to advertise for tenders and get the work started as soon as possible. It was suggested by the chairman that the council might hold a special meeting and take the matter up at once, so as to avoid delay.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WEST RIDING FARMERS' INSTITUTE

If the number of farmers in attendance at their annual meeting on Saturday were a just criterion of the future of the Institute, the prospects for successful work by the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute would be near the vanishing point. Enough members, however, were in attendance to form a quorum, and what they lacked in numbers was made up in interest and enthusiasm for the work in hand. Mr. Charles C. Nixon, editor of "Farm and Dairy," was present and gave some valuable suggestions. Mr. H. C. Duff, the newly appointed teacher of the Agricultural Department at Norwood, also gave a short address. Mr. J. Telford, of Bridgenorth, occupied the chair. After the usual routine of business, officers for the ensuing year were elected. Mr. Telford, who for the past three years, has acted as President, expressed his desire to retire. The elections resulted as follows;—Mr. John Garbutt, Smith Township, President; Mr. T. D. Young, Vice-President; Mr. Wm. Collins, re-elected Secretary.

The President, Vice-President and Secretary were appointed to nominate a Board of Directors.

The old Board of Directors were re-elected, with the addition of several younger men, whom it was thought, would prove more energetic in the work of the Institute. They are as follows;—J. H. Garbutt, President, Peterborough; T. D. Young, Vice-President, Peterborough; Wm. Collins, Sec.- Sec.-Treas. Peterborough.

Directors—J. N. Telford, Bridgenorth; T. T. Melburn, Peterborough; Alex. McGregor, Peterborough; G. W. Mann, Bridgenorth; Fred McKee, Selwyn; John McConkey, Selwyn; T. J. Cullen, Lakefield; H. C. Garbutt, Lakefield; C. E. Moore, Peterborough; Robert Shaw, Lakehurst; Archibald Wilson, Lakehurst; Henry Coons, Lakefield; J. K. Galvin, Ennismore; John Flood, Ennismore; David Crough, Ennismore; John Brown, Springville; T. M. Hunter, Peterborough; R. Hanbridge, Peterborough; S. Deyell, Peterborough; Sandy Matchett, Peterborough; Robert Chambers, Peterborough; W. B. Stewart, Peterborough; C. C. Nuzon, Peterborough; E. M. Elliott, Peterborough; E. A. Fitzgerald, Peterborough; R. H. Leary, Peterborough; John Riddell, Jos. Barnard.

It was decided to ask the Department for speakers to hold regular meetings at Ennismore and Lakefield one day each next winter. Also three days each next supplementary meetings, to be held at Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, 4th line, Smith Hall and at Peterborough, an afternoon meeting, and in the evening at North Monaghan Town Hall.

NORWOOD DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

In addressing the meeting, Mr. H. C. Duff, BSA. who has been appointed to take charge of the new District Department of the Ontario Department of Agriculture that is located at Norwood congratulated the farmers of West Peterborough upon the great opportunities that lay at their very door for successful Institute work. They were particularly fortunate in having Farm and Dairy and the Canadian Horticulturist located in Peterborough inasmuch as the editors of these papers and other members of the staff were available as speakers. Mr. Duff, speaking of the Department at Norwood said that his work was not confined by any means to that district. West Peterborough would not be left out in the cold, as the work was intended to cover the whole county. An office is being opened in Norwood and in connection with it a reading room in which will be kept agricultural papers, bulletins, and magazines for the benefit of any choosing to use them. The reading room will be fitted out comfortably, and will be used also as a meeting place for Farmers' Institutes and directors of Fall Fairs, and for holding the Farmers' Club, which will be organized. Mr. Duff outlined how he could be of assistance to the farmers in addition to the work that would be carried on in the High School at Norwood. Greatest of all perhaps, would be the assistance he could give in connection with drainage problems. Farmers wishing to drain low lying lands upon which it would be difficult to decide the fall, should make application to Mr. Duff, at Norwood to have a survey made. This work will be done free of cost.

It is intended to put on a two-year course in agriculture at the Norwood High School. Mr. Duff outlined the work that would be taken up in this course. It was pointed out how the the public school does not fit a boy for farming, nor does the course in the high school. Few of the boys that attend a high school ever return to the farm. It was evident that something was radically wrong. In the public school pupils were taught the definition of relative pronouns, etc. They were obliged to familiarize themselves with the rivers of every little country in the world. They learned the difference between a moraine and a glacier, but not one of them was taught the difference between a head of wheat and a head of barley. They studied and learned about the battle which brought about Napoleon's Waterloo but were not taught to bring about the codling worm's waterloo. After explaining the economic value of the course offered Mr. Duff said that calendars outling the course in full were now ready and could be obtained on application to the Department at Norwood. The course is given free, the only cost being that of board, which can be had at a comparatively low rate in Norwood. He hoped that many from West Peterborough would avail themselves of the opportunities brought before them by the inauguration of the course in agriculture in the county of Peterborough.

Mrs. Cartwright, wife of Mr. Arthur Cartwright, of North Monaghan, died this morning. Mrs. Cartwright was the daughter of Mr. Charles Hall, of Peterborough. The funeral will take place on Friday at 2 p.m.

WILLIAM GRAHAM.

A very sad death occurred, Monday, June 21st, of Mr. William Graham, only son of Mr. Samuel Graham, of the 12th line of Cavan. The deceased had been a sufferer since last December with throat trouble, but death was not expected, as he was confined to his bed only since last Friday. Besides his father and mother he leaves two sisters, Mrs. J. Waddis, Emily; and Miss Nettie, at home, to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate brother and son. The deceased was well and favorably known throughout Cavan and was a consistent member of Ebenezer Methodist church, where he attended service and Sunday school all his life. He was 28 years of age, and all his friends unite in extending their deepest sympathy to the bereaved family. The funeral will take place on Wednesday, June 23rd, 1909, at 2 o'clock, from his late residence, 12th line, Cavan.

MRS. JOHN W. KINDRED

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. John W. Kindred at the residence of her father Mr. John Breckenridge in Asphodel. The deceased, who was 36 years of age had been ailing for about nine months. Besides her husband, three children, Grace, Charles and Jean are left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Lot 7, in the 12th concession of Otonabee, on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock and interment will take place in Little Lake cemetery.

MISS DEBORAH REVINGTON

On Thursday last, June 17th, death removed one of Ennismore's oldest and most respected citizens in the person of Miss Deborah Revington, aged 90 years. She was the daughter of the late George Revington and was born in King's county, Ireland. The family emigrated to Canada in 1846, and first settled in Emily, afterward moving to Ennismore where the subject of this obituary lived for the past 70 years. She was the last survivor of a family of five sisters and four brothers and had lived for many years with her nephews and nieces, the well known Haggart family of Ennismore.

Miss Revington possessed all those sterling qualities of character and disposition that in their influence live on, even long after death has claimed the body. Of an affectionate and motherly nature she was greatly beloved by her nephews and nieces whose care had fallen to her by the early death of their mother. Not soon will they forget her wise counsel and careful guidance in life. As a neighbor she was always considerate and charitable and greatly won the hearts of a wide circle of friends. As a Christian woman she stands out, a worthy example of consistency and faith. She was a life-long member of the Anglican branch of the Catholic church whose ministrations were very precious to her, and in which faith she was gently laid to rest in "sure and certain hope of the resurrection to eternal life."

The funeral which was conducted by her pastor the Rev. J. H. Teney, rector of Omemee and Emily, took place on Saturday, June 19th, to Little Lake cemetery, Peterborough, and was attended by a large gathering, bearing testimony to the esteem in which she was justly held.—om.

THE HONEYMOON

The honeymoon has no definite duration, but is longer and shorter, according as the temper of the high contracting parties determines, or their relatives, or the weather, or the mode, or the comparative cost of travelling and staying at home. Briefly, it is that interval during which the man, going out in the morning, remembers his kiss and forgets his overshoes, as distinguished from the interval during which he remembers his overshoes and forgets his kiss.—Brooklyn Life.

The body of a Russian, murdered during a boarding house quarrel, was found floating in the river at Montreal.

JUNE SITTINGS OF THE COUNTY COURT OPEN TO-DAY

His Honour Judge O'Connell Presiding—His Opening Address, and the Address From the Members of the Bar

The June Sitting of the County Court opened this afternoon with His Honor Judge O'Connel, presiding.

The case of Burnham vs Ackerman was called and proceeded with after the address of His Lordship and the members of the bar.

His Honor Deputy Judge O'Connell, presiding, in quarter sessions.

Since the last regular holding of the quarter sessions death inevitable to all, has visited us and left vacant a place long honorably filled by the late Charles Alexander Weller, Esq. and today we feel it becoming at this session of the court, to make public our deep regret that one who for over fifty years was an honored citizen of Peterborough and for nearly a quarter of a century Judge of the County and Surrogate Courts, and local Master of the High Court of Justice has been called away.

With profound sorrow we make public mention of the great loss that has befallen the community and the especial sorrow of those who through familiar intercourse have learned the singular gentleness of a strong man, and the integrity and honor of a faithful servant who, placed in a high and honorable position, so acquitted himself as to win the respect and love of all. The late Judge was a man of large knowledge of affairs, a patient hearer and with a constant desire to do what was just and equitable. His judgments on after thought were usually approved as right, they were rarely appealed against and more rarely reversed. With the profession he was uniformly courteous and obliging and while always dignified, he succeeded in winning a feeling kindlier than mere respect.

We part with him after a full life in which he maintained an ever youthful sympathy with everything that was manly and of good report. We shall cherish his memory as a good citizen, a kind parent, a courteous refined and able Judge. In sorrow and in reverence we place this, our chaplet, on the memory of our deceased Judge.

And now Sir, we would express our gratification that the gentleman whom the late Judge asked to be appointed as his successor, a courteous refined and able judge. In soreness has been so promptly appointed, and is now able to take up the business which has accumulated in the Court.

We wish for you during your incumbency until a permanent Judge be appointed, much success and pleasure in the performance of your duties.

On behalf of the Bar of Peterborough,—

The representatives of the bar present were Messrs. D. W. Dumble, K.C.; E. A. Peck, John Green, E. L. Goodwill, J. W. Bennett, R. T. Medd, W. H. Moore, K.C.; A. P. Poussette, K.C.; R. Ruddy, K.C.; Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, F. D. Kerr.

His Honor Judge O'Connell addressed the Grand Jury upon the several criminal cases which are on the docket for hearing at this sitting. He gave a very concise and explicit explanation of each case, after which the Grand Jury retired to consider the cases. In conclusion of his address His Honor made a very feeling reference to the death of the late Judge Weller, whose death occurred just recently. He characterized the late Judge as an eminent, wise and just judge. There are hundreds of people in the city and community who have heard and profitted by the words of wisdom which have fallen from his lips in the past, and at all times his judgment was received by the parties interested as being just. His Honor then made an eloquent reference to the law and courts, the system adopted in the country to settle disputes and troubles between the citizens. A judge must be prudent, wise and broadminded, while at all times a judge must be firm, he must also be merciful and render judgment irrespective of race, creed or nationality. The late judge possessed all these characteristics, and no man has nything but loving memory of him. He was a man and judge who need not fear to meet his Judge on the other side.

The Grand Jury then retired to their chambers to consider their duties.

ROOM-MATE CONFESSES AND TELLS HOW CRIME WAS DONE

Murderer's Friend Describes the Murder.

Saw Body of Girl Lying on Bed and Watched Murderer Put Body in the Trunk.

New York, June 23.—Bullied and intimidated by detectives, threatened with prosecution and confused with a rapid fire of questions, Chong Sing, one time room-mate of Leon Ling, told yesterday afternoon of the murder of Miss Sigel, Ling's Sunday school teacher in New York. Under the terrific pressure of the third degree, the little Chinaman admitted that he had seen the body in Leon Ling's room over the Eighth avenue chop suey restaurant, and that he had touched it while it was still warm; that he had smelled drugs, and had watched Leon Ling's preparations for placing the body in the trunk, where it was found horribly decomposed on Friday night last.

Chong Sing, in fact, if what was learned at the criminal courts yesterday is correct, described almost everything concerning the murder of the girl except the actual commission of the crime. He denied any implication in it, and protested stoutly that he was ignorant of the whereabouts of Leon Ling, the supposed murderer.

All day he was bullied, persuaded and entangled in a mass of questions by the detectives and lawyers, but it was not till late in the afternoon that he broke down and told what he knew of the young missionary's death. He was told that Leon Ling had been captured and had laid the blame upon his (Chong Sing's) shoulders. This, together with the persistent hammering at the prisoner, brought the confession.

From the man's story it is apparent that Elsie Sigel was first drugged with chloroform and then choked to death. She was killed apparently on the night of June 9, although Chong Sing appeared a little mixed in his dates. But he says that early in the morning of June 16 he heard a strange noise in Leon's room adjoining his, and, looking over the transom, saw the girl lying on the bed with a bloody towel over her mouth. He passed through the room to go out to wash his hands and as he did so felt the body, which was still warm. Afterwards he went down to the chop suey restaurant below, then returned to the room. Leon in the meantime had covered the body with a blanket up to the chin and had pulled a trunk to the middle of the floor. This trunk, Leon was calmly emptying preparatory to placing the body therein. The rope with which the body was bound was lying on the floor at the time, according to Chong Sing. Once again he went downstairs, said Chong Sing, where he remained until Leon called him. When he entered the room the body was not visible, having been bound with rope and placed in the trunk.

GREAT FRENCH CONGRESS MEETS

Big Attendance at Reunion of Gallic Nation in America

Montreal, June 23.—The great French congress, with 200 delegates, opened here yesterday. Long-headed citizens declare that they do not get much political benefit out of the procession and the speech-making, but that a great deal of good comes of the various branches of the Franco-American and the Franco-Canadian family meeting together and discussing subjects of profit to the people they represent.

On Thursday His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi will celebrate mass in the open air at Lafontaine Park, while Rev. Father O'Clair will preach, and on the following day, H. Bourassa, M.P.P., F. D. Monk, M.P., and Senator Dandurand will give addresses.

The last time a great open air religious ceremony took place in Quebec Province was on the Plains of Abraham, when Cardinal Taschereau said mass and Bishop Racine of Chicoutimi addressed the people. Later on, Chapleau spoke, yet all of these distinguished men have long since passed away. French Canada has made much progress, but her orators are no more celebrated to-day than those of a quarter of a century ago.

The election of the officials for the congress was by acclamation: Honorary President, Archbishop Bruchesi; chairman, J. C. Beauchamp; vice-presidents, C. F. Delage, M.P.P., and Dr. J. J. Brien, of Fall River, Mass.; secretary, J. B. Lagace; chaplain, Rev. F. Perrier.

TO CONSTRUCT CANADIAN NAVY

Montreal, June 23.—Montreal is to be sacrificed to Quebec as a port.

In Montreal to the Chambre de Commerce Hon. Mr. Brodeur said that there was a question whether the drydock should be at Montreal or Quebec. The majority of the accidents were at Quebec or below it, and ship owners thought that was the place for it.

At Quebec, Hon. Mr. Pugsley said the Government would take up the development of the port of Quebec as the summer port of Canada.

Mr. Brodeur also announced, for the first time, that the Government's policy is to construct a Canadian navy.

"This policy," he said, "should not strike anyone as surprising. It is quite natural. States of South America, such as Colombia and Paraguay, have their own navy. The Canadian Government wishes to participate in the defence of the Empire, but at the same time to safeguard its autonomy and the control of its contributions."

Her father and a farm hand, summoned by the mother's screams, managed to drive the bees away, but not before the child had been terribly stung. Physicians say the child cannot recover.

CHILD PREFERS HER MOTHER

Quebec, June 23.—In the Bulmer habeas corpus proceedings yesterday, Sir Francois Langelier quashed the writ without costs, giving the ten-year-old daughter of the parties into the custody of the mother. The judge said that the object of the writ should not be to enforce paternal authority, but to permit freedom of action, and as the child was of an age to be able to decide for herself, and had declared she would prefer the custody of her mother, the court would so decide. The Bulmers were married in Montreal in 1893. Three years later Mrs. Bulmer left her husband and in 1906 took an action against him for separation. This she lost, the court awarding the father custody of the child. This order was never obeyed.

So Declares ex-Manager McGill, Testifying Before Referee Kappelle Regarding Dealings in Stocks—Miss McGill Gives Evidence.

Toronto, June 23.—Charles McGill and his daughter, Isabelle, gave evidence in the Ontario Bank case before Referee Kappele yesterday. The former had previously been allowed access to the bank's ledger to refresh his memory, and his evidence supported his contention that the 1,713 Ontario Bank shares standing in his name when the collapse came were not really his, but were purchased in his name for the bank.

Miss Isabelle McGill testified in support of Mr. McGill's claim against the bank for $2,900, in which it is contended that Charles McGill, when general manager, purchased Sun Life shares with funds belonging to his wife.

In explaining the transaction McGill stated that in 1895 W. H. Hill, general manager for the eastern district of the Sun Life Insurance Co., told him that he wanted him to take over some stock in the Sun Life, and hold it in trust for him. He pressed him so hard that he consented, and as he held some money in trust for his wife, he applied $2,900 of this to buying 65 shares. This was paid by a check, which he had mislaid; but the drawer of the check, seeing the paper was not cashed, agreed to give Mrs. McGill credit for the amount in the bank.

McGill was asked about a buying wave on June 19, 1903, which, he said, had annoyed some of the directors.

"Who was annoyed?"

"Annoyance for the most part was expressed by G. R. R. Cockburn. He would discuss the matter after the meeting of the directors."

"Can you give specific instances of where directors were annoyed because the public was buying the stock.

"The directors were afraid that Senator Cox and other banking institutions were trying to get control of the stock."

"What about the stock carried by Ames?"

"I could not understand why he was buying so freely at the time. Prior to the failure of the Ames Co., the directors asked me how much stock he held, but I told them it was distributed between various financial institutions through Canada, which had advanced money to Ames upon the security of the shares."

"My impression was that Ames was carrying about $300,000 worth of stock, and I told the board that it had better make some arrangement for the carrying of the stock, because it might be forced upon the market at any moment."

"What about the subscription to the new issue of stock on Oct. 1, 1900, when the officers' guarantee fund by Charles McGill subscribed for 50 shares of the issue, which was then being offered to shareholders?"

"I cannot just recall what happened, because I was not permitted to make a record in the minutes of the conversation that took place at these meetings."

SUCCESSFUL STRAWBERRY SOCIAL AT MURRAY STREET

The Young Ladies' Aid Society of the Murray St. Baptist church, under the presidency of Miss Browett, brought off a most successful strawberry festival last evening. Notwithstanding rival attractions a large number turned out to help in the work of aiding the detail work of the church. The roadline was shut off by a canvas curtain studded with flags, while the grounds were beautifully lighted up with Chinese lanterns and electric bulbs. The young ladies found the warm night an excellent "market-day" for their delicious wares. Groups sat about at tables and partook of the "light fantastic" food, suitable to such occasions. The young ladies are to be heartily congratulated. The music was excellent,

MUST CHANGE THEIR ATTITUDE

Ottawa, June 23.—At the opening of the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Ottawa yesterday, the Lord Archbishop of Ottawa said that three most important changes in Christian attitude were needed.

The false idea that the church officers were to be the only workers must be dropped.

Our ideas as to the value of the ministerial life should be amplified. Only then would the young be attracted to a life which must always be a life of self-denial.

There must be a greater use made of lay help. The clergy and the laity must go hand in hand in attacking the forces of modern indifference. Every brotherhood should be encouraged and steps should be taken to form guilds of church workers.

HOLD UP IN THE ROCKIES MASKED MEN ROB TRAIN

C.P.R. Train Was Stopped Near Kamloops

Five Bandits Mistake Vancouver Train for Another Which Was to Carry Silver Bars to the Coast.

Kamloops, B.C., June 23.—Vancouver train No. 97 was held up by five masked men at Ducks Monday night. They had mistaken it for No. 5, carrying 90 silver bars of 70 pounds each to the coast.

Two men climbed over the tender at Notch Hill and compelled the engineer to stop at Ducks, where four men were waiting alongside a camp fire. All were armed with Winchesters. They compelled the fireman to break open the express car, but found nothing in it. Immediately afterwards the robbers got in a boat and started for the north side of Shuswap Lake. A posse is in pursuit.

No. 97 was running several hours late, in charge of Conductor Sam Elliott, who was in charge of the train held up near Ducks by Bill Miner two years ago. The train had stopped at Pemberton siding to pick up some repairers and one of the robbers boarded at that point. Shortly after leaving he crawled down over the tender and accosted Engineer Mat Crawford.

"You run the train until you come to a fire along the side of the track," was the robber's command, and it was obeyed. When the train stopped two other men came to the assistance of the first. All wore masks and were heavily armed. The fireman was ordered down out of the cab and also the engineer. The fireman started to uncouple the engine, but was stopped by one of the robbers.

"You don't need to do that; we don't do things like Bill Miner. We can hold up a train as she stands," he said. With that the robbers set about their business. Coming to the express car, they found it sealed, for 97 does not carry an express messenger and everything is sent through in sealed packets. Handing Engineer Crawford a few sticks of dynamite, they demanded that he blow up the car. Knowing that the car was empty, Engineer Crawford protested, whereupon the robbers battered in the door.

The car next was visited and Mail Clerk Allan had the honor of escorting the robbers through the car.

Nothing valuable was found and the robbers ran back to the engine and told Crawford that everything was all right and to go ahead. Brakeman Ashton ran ahead during the operations to investigate, but was driven back by the robbers, who fired at him three times.

There was considerable firing throughout, but this was more for the purpose of frightening members of the crew.

Four saddle horses were stolen from the stables of the Pioneer poultry ranch Monday night, and it is thought that they were taken by the train bandits to aid their escape.

ROLLED OVER INTO RIVER

Guelph, June 23.—Only a collision with a telegraph post prevented W. H. Beattie, druggist of this city, from being hurled by a runaway horse over the C.P.R. trestle bridge near the depot into the river below. Freed from the buggy in the collision, the frightened animal, owned by Mr. La Fontaine, bolted on the bridge. Its hoofs became lodged in the trestle work, and it rolled over into the river about 25 feet below. Mr. Beattie, who was thrown out unhurt, waded into the water, about four feet deep, but the animal could not be made to budge. Thinking that its back or neck was broken, it was finally decided to let the animal drown, but no sooner did it get its head under water than it revived and struggled out, little worse for the experience. Mr. Beattie was unhurt, and only the buggy suffered damage.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA

"The cool indifference with which Canada observes the log-rolling manipulations in the United States Senate, which is making the new tariff against Canadian agricultural products even higher than the old, would be simply incredible to a reincarnated Canadian of fiteen or twenty years ago. The present Canadian attitude towards the United States tariff-makers is one of non-expectancy, hence cannot result in disappointment. The American attitude on the tariff question is one of economic blindness. Class interest and self-seeking obscure the large, comprehensive outlook which is necessary to a true appreciation of the economic effect of tariffs, and the American Senate is fully maintaining its reputation as the bulwark of class interests, and the instrument of popular oppression at the behest of the favored few. The joke of it all is that almost every class is happy in the belief that it is being protected, childishly innocent of the fact that, if everybody were equally benefitted by protection, the result would be no net advantage to anybody. Protection benefits one interest by taxing others. It can be justified, not as a permanent policy, but only as an expedient and in most cases a doubtful expedient at that."—Farmers' Advocate.

The Advocate still stands, like the Toronto Globe, amazed at the multitudinous folly of the idiotic millions who continue to languish under protection in the U.S., Germany, France, etc. And they might all be put right by reading one issue of either of the above journals too! But the fact is, that Protection is the modern method of maintaining the balance of international trade. It prevents one nation overreaching another. It fosters where its protection is merely local. It can be abandoned when necessary, but it never is abandoned. Why? Because it is the only hope of countries that have not in one, or all respects an unassailable position. No one would ask Jamaica to put a duty on cocoanuts. The Advocate would not advise the American farmer to put a duty on barley. But while the Americans are learning to grow barley as good as ours, their attempts must be protected and they demand it. But necessity is the mother of invention and that is why Protection has become world-wide. The American farmers require it. Why shouldn't ours have it? Log rolling is the curse of Protection but if that would justify its abolition, the present system of government should be abolished for its concomitant iniquities. The reasoning is faulty. The theories of the F. T. critics need revision at least in their application.

WHAT THE RAILWAYS MEAN

Mr. J. J. Hill is considered the greatest railway man of the West. He is very far-sighted and has plenty of money at his back. He says his immediate and ultimate object is to make wheat and flour as cheap to the people of the far east as rice now is. Only in that way can he make return for his railways and provide freight for them when built. So that his intentions are to reduce the price of wheat. This will be bad news to the eastern farmer especially if other things keep up in price which they are bound to do until farming gets so low as to threaten to pass out altogether. To promise low priced wheat in Ontario such as J. J. Hill is figuring for in the west means ruin to our Ontario farmers unless they go into something else. Disturbing the equilibrium of trade by great schemes at sudden intervals will affect the farmer first. Unless more reason is infused into our government policies the whole fabric of our commercial life will centre in the capitalist and the manufacturer for whom the farmer will work as did the slaves for the cotton-growers of the south.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

That rural mail and parcel delivery would be a great convenience for for the farmers and farmers' wives and families of the county of Peterborough seems to make no difference to the powers that be. Ninety-seven routes have been established in Canada since October 26th, 1908, but none here. Why is this? It is not fair to the farmers of this county. Surely all the professions of what was going to be done for the county in this way have not been forgotten. We are doing our best from week to week to remind those in authority that they should do, and what they promised to do for us. But what is that to the G.T.P. and all those who make money out of the great money-spending works that our farmers help to build!

THE NOVA SCOTIAN

This excellent magazine, which may be termed the official organ of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is to hand for June. Its chief articles are: "The Ontario Bank," "The Banking Profession in its broader aspects," "The Light Side of Finance." These afford very instructive reading. The disasters due to wrecks are terrible in their results. The reader will get an idea of the depredations possible in these degenerate days whenever principle is ignored for the sake of Self. It is always fatal as well as mean.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The people of Canada seem finally to have turned down Sir Wilfrid's wild Georgian Bay Canal scheme.

The Montreal Gazette says that press agency work is done to laud Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Circulars on the "Sunny smile" etc. are sent to the faithful Liberal journals. Nice work!

The reduction in Separate School readers saves $25,000 00 a year. Let the Examiner get its famous calculating cap on again. It did not believe it because it didn't know how to do it.

So the cat is out of the bag and the Laurier government will not contribute to an "Imperial" Navy. It is to be to a Canadian navy. One by one the strands are breaking.

Lord Roberts has not of late increased his reputation in Britain as a man of sober commonsense. His ideas on military questions have aroused general opposition.

The leading American professors lament the decline of intellectuality in college life. Materialism and Sport are cutting it down. That this is true will surprise many of those who think "we're the stuff" in the present day.

Kingston Whig, Liberal: The Hamilton Conservatives who talk of putting their wealth in a newspaper, to supplant the Spectator, should remember the Empire. It was an organ of party—not public—opinion, and it had its little day. Besides, the Whitney government admires independence in journalism. It appreciates candid criticism.

The attempt of the Laurier Government organs to give undue credit to the department for the quick work of repairing the lock at the Sault is amusing. In the first place it is amusing because nothing is said about the bungling that let the vessel crash into the gates, no one being near to catch the rope. Then again the repairing was half finished before Ottawa even heard of it.

It is not unlikely in view of the progressive policy regarding street watering just inaugurated and in view of the severe criticisms made by councillors of the work, as already done, it is possible that a street-watering inspector may be appointed and as a representative citizen remarked, applications might as well be sent in at once.

Fifty thousand Separate School pupils will save as follows:—

Winnipeg — The Manitoba Government issued a crop report which is exceedingly optimistic in tone. The report says:—"The prospects are better than for years, and as the most perfect plant is obtainable through a continuous and rapid growth, the crop this year will most likely be a bountiful one, as up to the present moisture has been plentiful and the soil was at seeding time and is still, in fine condition."

The total area under wheat this year is 2,642,111 acres, a decrease of 266,529 acres. Oats and barley, on the other hand shew an increase in acreage of 137,051 acres and 82,567 acres.—Trade Review.

During the afternoon Miss Edna Adams, who is about to leave us, and who has been a faithful worker in the Band, was presented with a beautiful book of poems. Miss Edna, in a few words, expressed her appreciation to the Band.

A very sad drowning fatality occurred on Sunday afternoon last about two miles east of Hastings, on the Trent river, when Charlie Lobb, about 17 years of age, lost his life. A small party, consisting of young Mr. Lobb and two of his brothers, and two or three young ladies, were crossing the river in two boats, when the canoe in which was Charlie and one of his brothers, capsized in the middle of the river, and the two were thrown into the water. The young man who lost his life was unable to swim, and before the boat in which the young ladies were could be brought around to his rescue the poor young fellow sank to his death. Efforts were made to rescue him from his watery grave, but without avail, and it was not until Monday about noon that the heart-stricken friends were able to recover the body. Deceased is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lobb, of the Hastings road. The sad news cast a gloom over the entire vicinity, and the bereaved family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement. The funeral will take place the (Tuesday) afternoon at 4 o'clock to the Norwood cemetery.

The excursion held on Wednesday last under the auspices of the Norwood Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday school, was a decided success. The excursionists went to Bobcaygeon by a special train. All report having spent a very enjoyable outing.

REMINISCENCES OF RICE LAKE AND TEACHINGS OF UNCLE IKE

BY M. W. G. PURSER

On the shores of Rice Lake there are two reservations of the Mississauga tribe of Indians, one at Hiawatha on the north, and the other at Alderville, which village is located a about distance to the south inland. The lake was visited by Champlain in Sept., 1615. The Otonabee river is to be found in the first named reservation, and here was once situated the Iroquois of Kentsio. Thus it happens that in the early French maps the lake is named Lac de Kentsio, later Kente became Quinte, Kentsio became Quintio, and in English maps the water was called Lake Quinte. This, therefore, accounts for the derivation of the name of the Bay of Quinte. My recollections of Rice Lake extend back to the time when I was about five years of age. I can remember being in a boat while a maskinonge was landed. I can remember on the same occasion a boat containing a lady being capsized. I heard her scream and can testify to her rescue. At this time it was the custom when when men were driving or teaming, and they came to any portion of the lake where a boat could be secured, to feed the horses, rent a craft and go trolling for an hour or so. They would generally succeed in capturing four or five maskinonge, and I would that this were the case to-day. I believe that the maskinonge might be almost as abundant now as in those good old times, were they not so shamefully slaughtered during the spawning season by apologies of men, who have no regard for law or anything else. The killing of one female fish at this time undoubtedly means the destruction of hundreds, because the maskinonge under proper conditions is most prolific. If the people of Ontario can be educated to a proper appreciation of the valuable asset they have in their game, preservation would be more the order of the day, and we would conserve a valuable asset that would mean untold wealth for this and coming generations. In Maine such an asset is one of her great sources of wealth. Then, why should not Ontario be similarly favored?

As a boy, I was privileged to camp with parties on some of the western islands of Rice Lake, and recall most vividly living in a tent for a week on a point. The location of the camp had not been carefully selected, and at night we were greatly disturbed by mosquitoes, and the heat. We could do nothing but fan ourselves with our straw hats, and the insects were so thick, that one could imagine that he was almost breathing them in. Had I been as wise as I am now, we would not have been so pestered. A smudge in the camp, yielding plenty of smoke, would have quickly banished the unwelcome guests. We might have rubbed on our hands and faces a little oil of citronella. I might say that oil of pennyroyal and ammonia is worth trying. Also a good mixture is good mixture is composed of oil of cedar, oil of hemlock, oil of tansy, eucalyptus, equal parts. I might add that when a cottage is infested with mosquitoes it will be noticed that in the late twilight the insects all gather on the windows, and can be killed easily. This was discovered by an American staying at the cottage of Uncle Ike a few years ago, and is a tip well worth remembering. Sports do not appear to be cognizant of the fact.

It was a fortunate day for me when disciple of Uncle Ike. He was a venerable looking old gentleman, who appeared to have passed the psalmists' allotted three score years and ten. He has joined the silent majority, and I shed a tear in his memory. He was one of nature's true noblemen, was kind to animals and was an ideal sportsman. He had his idiosyncrasies. To show what kind of a sportsman he was it is only necessary for me to say that he would never shoot a wood-duck. He claimed that this species was becoming rare, and should be preserved.

One day I heard him wax eloquent over this bird and say:—"Mr.——, the wood-duck should be preserved for its beauty. As Saturn transcends all bodies in the starry heavens for splendor, so I say does the male wood-duck surpass all its species for lovely plumage."

Uncle Ike in his earlier days had had considerable experience as a sailor on the great lakes, and had considerable to do with the fish of commerce on the Georgian Bay. He had hunted for game, large and small, and had some success as a trapper. He had partaken of all the hunter's delicacies, including deer-tongue and beaver-tail, and, according to his description of these, they must be superior to ambrosia and nectar. It would take volumes to give his experience.

About 1876 Uncle Ike and another man set out for Pointaberry, Georgian Bay, —so he related to me—to store sufficient ice for the summer's business in fish. It appeared that the supply of provisions was delayed, and they decided to push on, trusting to secure food from the Indians. It so happened that the Red Skins were short of provisions and could only share them half a bushel of Indian corn or maize. Uncle Ike and his companion faithfully discharged their commission—living six days on boiled corn, but he stated that it took most of the rest of the winter to regain his accustomed strength and vigor.

For eighteen years the whereabouts of Uncle Ike was unknown to his friends then one day he turned up like the proverbial bad penny, claimed his share of his father's estate, established a cottage for sport at Rice Lake, and spent his declining years in more or less ease and luxury. I always found him a storehouse of sporting information. He was my Aristotle of sport and Plato like I drank deeply at his feet, and purpose giving some of his teachings and maxims to the world.

My first recollection of Uncle Ike was at his cottage on an island at Rice Lake. There were several men present from Cobourg, who were bent on shooting ducks. One of them picked up a duck call which Uncle Ike had secured somewhere, and asked him if it were any use. He was replied to in the affirmative, and Uncle Ike proceeded to give an exhibition of the powers of the whistle. He then mentioned the calls of the different ducks, and it is here that my note book came into requisition, with the following result:

"The note of the American scaup duck, or blue bill, as you gentlemen probably call it, is a peculiar grunting quack. The hooded merganser gives out low muttered croakings. The mallard's note is a nasal quack, and it may be heard again and again, when they are feeding. The voice of the black duck, our summer duck, is like that of the mallard. The gadwall has a rapid shrill quacking, but you will not notice many of them out here. The widgeon has a shrill, clear whistle. The beautiful wood duck, my favorite, has notes of a soft whistled "peet, peet," and a squeaky danger note like "boo-eek, boo-eek." The red-head's note is a hollow, rapid, croaking. The canvas-back has harsh croaks not unlike the red-head. The golden-eye, called out here the whistler, has a hoarse croak, which is not often heard. The butter-ball's note is a short quack. The old squaw or long-tailed duck's notes are confused but rather musical gabblings. The scoter has a long musical whistle. The green-winged teal gives shrill piping whistles, repeated in quick succession. The blue-winged teal utters a weak and rapid quacking. The pintail has a kind of a chattering note."

When preparations for the evening meal were in progress, Uncle Ike, said he would make the tea, but he was not accorded the privilege during the rest of the stay of the Cobourg sports. They all could appreciate what Cowper has styled "the cups that cheer, but not inebriate," but they had conscientious qualms in regard to the beverage that Uncle Ike brewed. He was undoubtedly unsophisticated, and retained all the old tea that was in the tea pot, putting in a goodly supply of new leaves. He steeped it all for more than the allotted time, and the result can better be imagined than described. It had lots of strength and tannin. I will not commend his method.

Whether it was on account of the first night on the island, or on account of the decoction imbibed which may have had about the same effect as strong coffee, the sports did not seem much inclined to sleep, although they knew they would be up in the morning long before the peep of day. The pipes were kept going and Uncle Ike entertained them with an account of an expedition for deer he had taken to the Oak Hill district with a party which included a son of the late Chief Justice Armour. He told how he had shot a buck which tipped the scales at two hundred and eighty-seven pounds. This was in the days when the deer were driven into the water by the dogs and followed by the hunter in a boat or canoe, but as Kipling would say, "This is another story." Later in the evening Uncle Ike gave the men a few brain twisters. He told them that a man went to a prison, gazed at a photograph and said, "I have neither brothers nor sisters, but that man's father is my father's son." The question is, on whose photo was the man looking? There was considerable argument as to the correct answer, but the old gentleman insisted that the man was looking at his son's photograph. He then gave them the following:—

"Three white men and three Indians, while travelling come to a river and desire to cross to the other side. They can obtain one boat only which will carry but two men. How, if there are more Indians than white men on either side at one time, the Indians would slaughter the white men. How did the six men cross the river."

One of the duck hunters solved the puzzle in about ten minutes, and Uncle Ike gave them the following which none of them could work out. He said he obtained it from a captain up around Windsor, I think. Here is the problem;

"A man paid $100 for having 100 cords of wood cut. Two men did the work, one receiving 25 cents a cord more than the other. If each were paid $50 how many cords did each cut and at what rate was he paid?"

Late in the night the party retired for the purpose of wooing Morpheus, and most of them found that the draught from Lethe was slow to come. One of them got up and refreshed himself with some tanglefoot, and as Uncle Ike was host, he thought to serve him a glass first. Suddenly there was a sputtering and the exclamation, "Coal oil man!" It appeared that the petroleum bottle had been mistaken for the one labelled Old Rye.

Before the peep of day all hands were up. It was Oct. 25th, the ducks had been coming in from the north in large numbers, it promised to be a most favorable day, and the knights of the gun were eager for the fray. It was windy, and one of the party shot over decoys from a point on the island. He shot twenty-two ducks, and he obtained seventeen or eighteen of them. Two of the party went away in a boat, and returned near noon with twenty-two ducks and two wild geese. It appears that they were in a rice bed, and the flock of geese in some unexplained manner came honking along, fairly low, until right over them. They had presence of mind enough to discharge the contents of their double barrels at the leader, which fell. There was great confusion among the rest of the flock, and they succeeded in bagging another. It is needless to say that they were loud in their eulogies of Rice Lake, apparently considering it the neplus ultra of sport. It would be superfluous for me to say that they may go to this lake every season for the remainder of their nature lives, and not have such success as far as wild geese are concerned. This wily game is shot, but very rarely in this vicinity. I may say that the two geese were mounted by a taxidermist, and are at present on exhibition in the store of Field & Bro., Cobourg.

Uncle Ike and I spent the morning trawling in the lea, but were unsuccessful. As we landed, an Indian came ashore, having caught three maskinonge. We had some conversation with him, told him of our bad luck, and he asked to see our outfits. He went to his canoe, got a file and sharpened our hooks. He said: "Hooks quite sharp now; you get plenty fish." This proved to be the case and we found that October was a good month for maskinonge fishing.

While I was trawling with uncle Ike in the afternoon he told me that the season of the year when the Indians are gathering rice (September) most of the maskinonge appear to be in the rice beds, but are frightened out by the Indians at work. Then is the time to skip along the beds with the trawl. He told me that after the spawning season that maskinonge are not found in schools like bass are. He told me that if you catch a large maskinonge in a certain place there is not much use trying there for another, unless bass happen to be spawning there, and the maskinonge are feeding on the fry. Remember bass occasionally spawn at Rice Lake after legal restrictions against their capture have been removed. He went on to say that frogs and catfish eat the fry of the maskinonge; later on the maskinonge eat the frogs. He told me that some fishermen remove all red from the inside of the spoon, and in his opinion it should be done. He said large fish and that was the kind I was after, were found in unlikely places. He told me that maskinonge do not bite well when they are loosing their teeth which generally occurs in July. He had a lot to say about illegal fishing, and warmed up to his subject when he told about the men who went after the fish with jack-lights in the early spring. He related how they were sometimes secured by stunning them by discharging dynamite and said that a quantity of unslacked lime would have about the same effect as dynamite. He said that once in a long while still-fishing a maskinonge is caught. He knew of one having been captured this way and I imagine from his description that it must have been as thrilling as when an eel is hooked. Imagine a ten or fifteen pound lunge on a fine bass line! I would fancy one would have plenty of thrilling sport playing it. He told me that the trawling hooks should be small for maskinonge. I myself have found by experience that they are chary of large hooks. I have caught good-sized ones with an ordinary bass trawling outfit. It is best to play them until they are tired out, and then it is best to use the gaff hook in landing the large specimens.

Uncle Ike told me that maskinonge are more valuable than bass. If you catch a good-sized maskinonge you have in weight more than all the bass you generally catch in a day. The bass are more esteemed for pictures, however, some of them claim that maskinonge taste muddy.

The old gentleman gave me considerable instructions on the method of handling a fish after it is first hooked. He told me to never give the fish slack line, as it would be likely to get away. He told me that when the fish yanks to ease on the line, but always keep on a strain of a pound or so. He said some fishermen after feeling the first jerk on a line, give a yank in order to fasten the hooks but this was a mistake. If the fish were pulling the same time as you were, it increases the chances of getting away.

I proceeded to put his teachings into practice. I had three bites in about an hour, and let two of the maskinonge away. He told me that I had held the line too tightly, which was right. Continuing, he said "You have a college education, but when it comes to fishing you do not know enough to pound sand in a square box."

I then insisted on his taking the lines, and in the course of about an hour and a half he had succeeded in landing four maskinonge. As this was the legal limit he promptly stopped trolling and wished me to try. After about an hour I caught and landed two maskinonge and one bass, and we returned to the cottage with eight fish, but none of them extra large ones.

The evening shooting was not good. After supper two of the party played a game of sixty-six, which I consider the chess game of cards. One of the nimrods happened to say something about Rice Lake being a treacherous one.

"I do not consider Rice Lake a dangerous one," said Uncle Ike, "and I have had considerable experience on it in the days of my youth, and in more recent years. One should watch the sun, the sky, the wind and note the signs. If you are out on the water in a row boat or canoe, and hear thunder, it is advisable to immediately head for land, as a thunder storm is generally preceded by high wind. I may say that I have seen worse thunder storms here than in any part of Ontario, but they have not been destructive. As you see, I have my bed insulated with glass. I was once struck by lightning while on a vessel on Lake Superior, and all that saved me was that I had on my rubbers. As to Rice Lake being dangerous—if the wind is not steady, but a blowing in bluffs, it is best to keep off the water."

Later in the evening the knights of the gun began talking about the success of the day, and were about well satisfied with their bag. A canvas-back had been secured. Four shots from the double-barrels had been poured at it, and only succeeded in wounding it. The guns had to be reloaded, and some more blazing indulged in before the game was safe.

Uncle Ike remarked, "If a canvas-back is wounded in the wing it dives, and generally succeeds in eluding pursuit."

A coot had also been obtained, and Uncle Ike said that it should be skinned in order to remove the feathers. Commenting on some of the other specimens he said that the old squaw or courten and sopers are considered poor table ducks, as they are fishy, coarse, and of dark flesh. Whistle-wings are a little fishy. The majority of the bag consisted of blue-bills.

The visit of the Indians was referred to and turned the conversation to the subject of wild rice which is the food of the wild duck and acts as the drawing card during the seasons of migration. During the course of the conversation Uncle Ike related how he had gleaned from an Indian the method of preparing it for table use. It is burned or singed by the Indians. They place it over a slow fire in order to remove the husks. The result is a long darkish kernel not unlike oats, which has been blackened by mildew. The grain is hard and firm and it tastes like oats rather than domestic rice. It is quite delicious when properly prepared.

The next day the nimrods secured twelve ducks all told. It was cold and windy and the old gentleman and I did not do any fishing. At night he told us the differences between maskinonge and pike in the matter of marking. He said the pike was the shark of fresh water fishes and ate other pike.

A discussion arose as to why the maskinonge bite the trolling spoon, and why they could not be induced to bite on certain occasions.

"They take the bait," said Uncle Ike, "for prey and rush at it with the intention of capturing a good meal."

I advanced the theory that they mistook the twirling spoon for an enemy encroaching upon their preserves or their haunts.

Uncle Ike—No such thing. The most successful spoons look like suckers in the water and the natural food of the maskinonge is suckers, though they sometimes eat perch.

I—But I have caught a maskinonge which proved to be gorged with a sucker. Therefore it did not bite because it was hungry.

Uncle Ike—I have held to the opinion that the reason they do not bite at certain times is that they are gorged with food which in their case takes considerable time to digest. Your fish may have rushed at the troll to begin a fight or drive away a supposed enemy, but I will have to hold to my view, as being the more reasonable.

I—When do maskinonge bite best and will they bite by moonlight like mud-cat will?

Uncle Ike—They bite best an hour or so before sunset, although I have heard of a very odd one being caught a little later. I have only heard of one maskinonge having been caught on the troll by moonlight. I have read somewhere that the only fish that do not sleep are believed to be the salmon, pike and gold fish. Now as the maskinonge belongs to the pike family, the chances are it does not sleep much. But why they do not bite by moonlight I do not know, unless it be that the spoons do not glitter sufficiently to attract their attention. Owing to colder weather setting in next day, and being afraid of being frozen in on the island, we decided to repair to our respective homes, satisfied with ourselves and the world in general, having had exceptionally good success.

In the Rose Garden.

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

It was on the third night of the new moon that Beverly Alden, musing on his sermon in the darkness of his study, beheld from the window something white moving in his garden.

As the Rev. Beverly's garden was a vegetable garden, he thought fearfully of something sinfully trampling on his succulent salads, and he rose hastily. Standing just behind the window shutter, he decided, however, that a horse would be shorter, a dog taller, and he did not believe in ghosts.

He went into the hall, took his hat from the rack and stepped softly over the threshold.

As his footsteps sounded on the gravel of the path the white object moved from the middle of the garden and fled. He heard the click of the gate and then silence.

"Hum!" mused the Rev. Beverly and bent over his lettuce bed. "A thief," he said as he straightened up.

The next morning a fuller investigation showed that there had been depredations of onions and radishes. But the minister said nothing to his housekeeper. Common thieves did not come garbed in white, nor were they of slender outline and graceful.

The Rev. Beverly had no unusual powers of penetration, but it had not taken him many moments to decide that the spoiler of his garden was a woman.

"But why"—he debated the next night as he finished his sermon—"why should a woman steal—a lady, I am sure, by the grace of her carriage—why should she steal my little onions and my lettuce?"

But all the wisdom of the Scriptures did not answer his question. And after his sermon was finished he again turned out his light and sat in the darkness of his study.

And again, as he mused, he saw a patch of white at the end of the garden. Breathless he watched, and closer and closer came the ghostly figure until it stood just beneath his window.

Then a voice said, "I have come to pay you for the vegetables."

"Oh!" His usual readiness of speech had forsaken the clergyman. "Oh, I beg your pardon!"

"No, you needn't beg it," the voice said again. "I picked some lettuce and things last night, and here is the money. It wasn't a very conventional way to go to market, but we wanted a salad, and"—

The Rev. Beverly, peering over the sill, caught the sparkle in her eyes as she made her half apology.

"You needed your salad late," he said dryly.

"Ah"—her little laugh rippled out—"think of my predicament! Some people came from the city hungry, and there was nothing in the house but eggs. You see, I am such a new housekeeper—we came only yesterday—and Susanne, my maid, forgets to tell me when things are out, and the shops are so far away—so, while she made an omelet I flew into your garden—and—and flew back and no one was the wiser."

"I saw you," the Rev. Beverly informed her, "and I thought you were a thief."

"Oh!" There was a little gasp. "It did look like it, didn't it? But, you see, I have brought the money." And the silver glittered on the sill as she spread it out before him.

"No," the Rev. Beverly protested; "you are perfectly welcome to anything you care to take."

"Oh, but you must"—there was a note of alarm in her voice—"because I should feel as if I had stolen if I am not allowed to pay."

He was smiling down at her. "You can pay me by giving me a rose from your garden," he said.

"Why don't you have roses of your own?" she demanded.

He sighed. "I hardly dare allow myself the luxury. It is cheaper to raise one's vegetables than to buy them, and a clergyman in a small town has to think of expenses."

"I suppose," doubtfully, "that your salary is not large?"

"No, but there are donations." His eyes twinkled.

"Such as roses?" She was laughing up at him. The moonlight touched her hair with gold. The pulses of the Rev. Beverly began to beat.

"May I come over some time and walk with you in your rose garden?" he asked.

"Come now," was the quick response.

He went, and it was the beginning of friendship.

"He is lovely," Constance confided to her aunt, who had come up to her niece's colonial mansion for the purposes of chaperonage. "And he's here in this little town because he feels that he is needed more than in a city charge where he could get much more money."

"Constance," her aunt warned, "don't get romantic over a country parson."

"He has the dearest little cottage," Constance mused, "with a vegetable garden. He sends over tomatoes and parsley, and I put roses in his buttonhole. It's very interesting," she sighed.

"It may be tragic for him."

"Why?"

"If you make him love you—what then?"

"Well?" Constance's tone was defiant.

"You can't marry any one but Warren Olmstead."

"Constance's eyes flashed. "I can too! If I don't marry Warren, I merely lose my inheritance. I don't deny that I love this old house, Aunt Anne. But did it ever occur to you that I might prefer a man to a fortune?"

"You would miss the fortune," was the quiet answer. "You were not made for love in a cottage, Constance."

But Constance was down the path. She bent over a pink rose bush and picked a bud just as the Rev. Beverly Alden came in.

"'Roses red and violets blue,'" she quoted. "Can you tell me the rest of it?"

"'If you love me as I love you.'" He hesitated. "You mustn't make me say such things."

"Why not?"

"Because I have nothing to offer you but a cottage and a vegetable garden." He was looking down at her with somber eyes.

"And if I don't marry one Warren Olmstead," she [illegible] "I lose my fortune. And I won't marry him, so I am really homeless—and—please, I'd like to come and live in your cottage."

Aunt Anne's chagrin over the engagement found an outlet in a letter to Warren Olmstead. "Come up and rescue Constance from her country parson," was the theme.

But when Warren's answer came it was a revelation.

"Of all things!" Aunt Anne ejaculated when she had read it.

"What's the matter?" Constance asked.

"Read that," said Aunt Anne tragically.

It was a brief epistle, but it was very extraordinary, no doubt, for Constance danced with joy and waved the letter, crying "Hurrah!"

"Of all things!" Aunt Anne ejaculated again.

Constance caught her breath quickly. "You mustn't tell Beverly," she said.

"Why not?"

"He won't marry," Constance said mysteriously, "if he knows it."

So they were married quietly and went to live in the cottage, and Aunt Anne went home, and the big colonial house was closed, and the winter came, and the roses were wrapped in winding sheets of straw.

"You will miss the rose garden next summer," said the parson as he and his wife walked up the snowy path. "I wonder who will live here then?"

"The new tenants," said Constance, who, wrapped in a big red cloak, was leaning on her husband's arm, "are lively. There will be a young clergyman, a very handsome young clergyman, and a very, very loving little wife. Beverly"—

"Constance!" He bent down over her.

"The house is mine. Warren wrote to say that he loved some one else. He married first and forfeited his right, and I didn't want to tell you because you hated to have me rich. But don't you think it will be nice—for—for Beverly junior to—to play in the rose garden, dearest?"

More Than an Officer Could Stand.

There is a man who served as a special police officer in a suburban town for several years, but never made an arrest. A few days ago the keeper of the lockup was much surprised to have this officer bring in a man in a helpless state of inebriety.

"Why, Bill," said the keeper, "how is this? You have been an officer nine years, and this is your first arrest."

"That is true, Dan," said the officer. "I have taken many persons home when intoxicated rather than bring them here. But when a man gets drunk and lies down on the lawn in front of my house and goes to sleep that's more than I can or will stand."—Boston Herald.

RETURNED FROM VISIT TO MINES

On Thursday of last week a party of Peterborough men visited the Hanson mines near Silver Mountain, Thunder Bay district, on the Duluth branch of the Canadian Northern. The mine is a mile and a half from the station, connected by a good waggon road. The mine is well equipped, and four shafts of varying depth have been driven. A very thorough plant is on the grounds and in operation. Among the party were Messrs. J. C. Shook, R. J. Munro, P. E. Rutherford, R. A. Elliott and Wm. Thackery. The party were away about ten days, and returned thoroughly convinced that the mining interests and future development will be a large factor in Canadian progress.

Forest fires in Maine again assumed a threatening attitude; nine groups of farm buildings were destroyed near Echo Lake.

HIS HAND BADLY HURT AND HIS WALLET APPROPRIATED

Old Man From Belleville Gets Into All Kinds of Trouble—A Trio of Sympathizers Fasten Onto His Pocketbook—Was Here on Drinkfest.

Poor old man. He wandered in from Belleville and proceeded to make himself acquainted with the water that befuddles and as a result got his hand badly injured and his feelings hurt too, was touched for his wallet and what was in it.

This describes the experience of a Belleville resident advanced in years and it happened to him last night. He had been drinking with absolute indifferent excess throughout the day and last night was so intoxicated that he fell down on the pavement and hurt his hand severely.

Three good Samaritans were passing by and advised him that he should go to the hospital. During the confab they got into his pocket for his wallet which it is stated contained over $300. The victim told a Review reporter last night that it only had in it a promissory note for $230 payable to himself and absolutely worthless to the touch artists. This account conflicts with others, however that he told to some passersby.

About a quarter after eleven he was standing on the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets and his hand was bleeding freely. A young man took him to Dr. Greer's surgery, which is just across the road from where he was standing and the hand was bound up.

CLAIM OF SEPTIC TANK COMPANY WAS DISCUSSED

City Solicitor Hall brought up the question of the septic tank at the council meeting last night. Peterborough has installed a tank which is very similar to the one on which the Cameron Septic Tank Company, of Chicago has the patent. The company thinks that its patent on the tank has been infringed on by the municipalities using it, and think they are entitled to remuneration for this infringement. A meeting of the municipalities interested was held in Toronto the other day and the city was represented by City Solicitor Hall and Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works. Another meeting will be held on Thursday, when the same civic officials will attend.

Mr Hall thought the matter could be adjusted with the Cameron Co for about $500.

HAS BOUGHT OUT LAUNDRY

Mr. Harry Hamilton, proprietor of the Dominion Chinese Cafe has bought out the laundry business being conducted by Sen Sen in Ashburnham. The week's wash from the restaurant amounts to a big bill of expense and Mr. Hamilton thought it would be more economical to purchase a whole laundry business than to pay this amount every week.

He will continue to have the business carried on for the accommodation of the washing public.

Mr. W.A. Edwards of the Crystal the Victim of a Painful Accident This Morning

Mr. W. A. Edwards, manager of the Crystal, had the misfortune to cut an artery in the middle finger of his right hand this morning. He was engaged in cleaning the glass in the front of the ticket office, which had become cracked, and the sharp edge of one of the pieces cut a painful gash in the finger, which caused the loss of a large quantity of blood. Mr. Edwards fainted for a short time, and also lost the sight of both eyes for a few minutes. The injury to the finger was attended to in a nearby drugstore.

THE VOICE OF THE KICKER

Things Prounced to be "Not Worth a Darn" in Peterborough

In the vernacular of the street there is a phrase that covers, in a derogatory sense, everything claimed to be wrong. It saves explanation, and epitomizes the opinion of the man who knows. It is uttered in a cynical way, because the fellow using it seeks to leave the impression that his standard of the fitnesses of things is very much higher than yours, and that his critical tastes are superior while his judgment is not to be questioned. We all know the man. We meet him every day. He is the "Kicker" in and out of season. In his view things are in a bad way, and in order to show just how bad a list is appended of things that have been pronounced by the kicker to be not worth a darn in Peterborough;

1—The City Council.
2—The Water.
3—The Cricket Club.
4—The Post Office.
5—The Lawyers.
6—The whiskey.
7—The local newspapers.
8—The Board of Health.

22—The Market and clerk.
23—The plumbers.
24—The coal magnates.
25—The Board of Trade.

WEDDING BELLS

DAVIDSON—MOSS.

The marriage of Miss Emily De Latre Moss, daughter of Chief Justice Sir Charles Moss and Lady Moss, to Mr. William Edward Davidson, son of the late Rev. S. Ferrar Davidson, took place very quietly yesterday afternoon at St. James' Cathedral, only immediate relatives and friends being present. The Rev. Canon Welch, assisted by Rev Canon Davidson, of Peterborough, brother of the groom, officiated. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a pretty embroidered India muslin, with white hat. Her only attendant was her young cousin, Miss Amy Vere Brown, who wore a white embroidered lingerie dress and hat. The best man was Mr. Sidney Larratt Smith. The brother of the bride and Mr. Tom Moss were ushers. There was no reception and no invitations were issued for the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson left for the seaside.

PATERSON—HARMER

Last night's Star says: — A very pretty simple wedding took place at St. Paul's church, Bloor street east, at half-past two this afternoon, when Miss Marie Harmer, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harmer, was married to Mr. Herbert Kendall Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Patterson, of Todmorten.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Canon Cody. The church was artistically decorated, the chancel and altar being banked with palms and daisies, white bunches of daisies tied with large white satin bows decorated the pillars and guest pews.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in an imported gown of heavy crepe de chene, embroidered in rose petals and trimmed with Irish crochet. The wedding veil was draped over a Juliet cap of lilies of the valley and orange blossoms, and a Parisian shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, was carried, the only ornaments being a pearl and diamond crescent and a diamond and sapphire ring, the gifts of the groom.

The bride was attended by Miss Jule Stuart as maid of honor and three bridesmaids, Miss Evelyn Maw, of Winnipeg; Miss Elsie Pierce, of Philadelphia, and Miss Alexina Pinkerton, all wearing simple lingerie frocks of finest dotted Swiss muslin, with entre deux embroidery. They wore becoming poke bonnets of white mohair trimmed with soft folds of white tulle, old-fashioned maize and mauve flowers and streamers of maize ribbon, and carried hat baskets of daisies with posies of mauve sweet peas intermingled, the only ornament being the groom's gift, dainty baroque pearl pins of dainty designs with peridot centres.

The best man was Mr. Charles Ellis, and the ushers were Mr. Mac Halgraft, Mr. Herbert Wickens, Mr. Osmon Edwards, and Mr. William Baily, to whom the groom gave baroque pearl tie pins, also in dainty design.

Mr. Palmer presided at the organ and during the signing of the register Miss Geraldine King, of Peterborough, sang "Oh Fair, Oh Sweet, and Holy." She wore white corded silk and large white hat.

The wedding reception was held in the Metropolitan Assembly Rooms, which were decorated with palms and daisies. The many guests were received by Mrs. Harmer, who was gowned in black lace over white satin with handsome black hat, and carried lilies of the valley. She was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Johnston, of Ottawa, who wore a dainty lingerie gown and large white hat, and carried pink sweet peas.

A buffet dejeuner was served in the ball room, the table being decorated with palest pink carnations, roses, and lilies of the valley, an orchestra playing softly throughout.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson left for a trip down the Saguenay, and on their return will spend a couple of weeks in town before leaving for their home in Winnipeg. The bride's travelling suit was a three-piece Wedgewood blue Rajah with white hat trimmed with soft ribbon bows to match the suit.

CHIEF GEORGE OUT ON BAIL

Through application to County Police Magistrate Edmison by his counsel, Mr. F. D. Kerr, Nichollas George, the chief of the band of gypsies, taken into custody, has been allowed out on bail.

GYPSIES MOVED TO THE SOUTH

The women and children of the gypsy outfit were moved last evening to a vacant lot at the south end of George street, as the space at the court yard was too small to properly accommodate the large number of wagons, horses, and the small colony of people. The procession travelling down to the new camping ground last evening created a great deal of interest and a large number of people were onlookers. Many of the women came up to the city last night to make purchases at the different stores and it is stated that they were not slow in showing all kinds of money. One of the party appeared to be considerably aggravated because she could not get a street car at the proper time, and after waiting for several minutes proceeded to walk back to the camp followed by a large number of small boys. The citizens in the immediate vicinity of the camp are not very well pleased with their visitors and the sooner they are allowed to get away from town the better. Large numbers of the curious ones took a trip to the camp last night, as the habits and manners of this wandering tribe are intensely interesting to say the least.

EMPIRE OR NO EMPIRE IS THE REAL ISSUE OF NEAR FUTURE

The recent great Press Conference held in London, England, at the present crisis in Anglo-German relations made it a test of empire. The Montreal Star speaks of and quotes the London Daily Telegraph as follows;

But in spite of this very good case for Colonial navies, the Telegraph is plainly convinced that direct contributions to the Home fleet are the only ones which will really count in the day of supreme danger. "It is certain," it says "that the safety of the whole Empire will depend upon the main force wherever it may be, of the battle power of Britain." Continuing it says;

Now battles are decided by battleships. A decisive action fought near these shores would put into the hands of others a sea power able to make itself felt as ours is now throughout the world. For many years to come the fate of the whole Empire to its furthest parts will depend upon the fate of the great fighting fleets sent out from the centre. It is obvious and that is the thought which ought to sink deep into the mind of every delegate from the overseas dominions.

RESULTS OF MATINEE AT DRIVING PARK LAST EVENING

Good sport was furnished by the Turf club's matinee at the Driving park last evening, but there was a very small attendance of spectators. The races were well contested and exciting, and handled by efficient officials and it is to be regretted that this branch of sport is not patronized more than it is. There is nothing objectionable to be found at the matinees as there is an utter absence of gambling and betting of any sport. The officials in charge have not received much encouragement in the way of gate receipts and if the same state of affairs exists in the future, the result will be that this branch of sport will have to stop. Another matinee will be held on the first Thursday half holiday in July. A good programme is being secured and it is hoped that the attendance will be such as to warrant many more being put on at the Driving park.

The results last evening were as follows:

CLASS B.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Daisy—J. O'Connell | 1 | 1 |

| B. Billy—Walker | 2 | 4 |

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

DELAYING THE GAME.

Rule 33, Sec. 1—If after the batsman be standing in his proper position ready to strike at a pitched ball, the ball be thrown to the pitcher to any player other than the catcher when in the catchers lines, and within the feet of the home base, except in an attempt to retire a base runner, each ball so thrown shall be called a ball.

Sec. 2—The umpire shall call a ball on the pitcher each time he delays the game by failing to deliver the ball to the batsman for a longer period than 20 seconds, excepting that at the commencement of each innings, or when a pitcher relieves another, the pitcher may occupy one minute, in delivering not to exceed five balls to the catcher or an infielder, during which time play shall be suspended.

---

The Park street team expect to have their new uniforms for next Saturday's game with the T.A.S. The Baptists are confident of stopping the abstainers and are practicing hard this week to get into shape.

---

Considerable improvement was noticed in the batting of the teams last Saturday. The fielding could be improved upon and each team is endeavoring to get all the practice possible, to give the fans fast exhibitions in the next contests.

---

The Strathconas play the West Ends for the second time next Saturday. With three straight losses, the tail-enders will go on the field determined to show the fans that they can win and play as fast as the rest of the City Leaguers. There will likely be a change in the lineup and the nine to represent the Straths will bear watching.

---

What about a game on Dominion Day. There are no other sports on for the holiday and a fast game would be well patronized. There are good teams in the neighboring towns and one of these might be induced to come here.

---

Will Riverside Park have a skin diamond? There is a report to this effect, but nothing authentic can be secured.

---

NO MEETING.

The intermediate teams failed to send representatives to the Y. M. C. A. last night, and there was no meeting. The games will be continued to be played at Nicholls Oval, and to save further trouble to the officers the teams can look after the necessary details, as they appear to be indifferent as to whether the league is a success or a failure. The meeting last night was announced several times, but no more will be called.

---

Toronto again beat Newark yesterday, the score being 7—5. McGinty and Brady were hit hard by the Leafs in the last innings, which resulted in five runs. Fallon again hit in the winning runs with a double when the bases were all occupied.

---

Waddell lost to Detroit yesterday by 1—0.

---

No National League games were played yesterday on account of the funeral of the late Geo. Dovey, of the Boston team.

Walker Slightly Favored.

London, June 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The keenest interest is being manifested in the sprint championship, which are heightened by the international character of the contests; the present opinion, especially for shorter distances, slightly favors Walker, who beat Cartmell Saturday, running with wind, in 10.00 flat. Kerr, however, won more easily than seemed at Stamford Bridge and naturally he is not in championship trim yet, while the track there is rather slow. The fight between the South African and Canadian alone will be sufficient to draw a big crowd.

FISHING GOOD IN RICE LAKE

18 and 16 Pounders Landed—Keene Improvement Society's First Excursion

Special to the Review.

Keene, June 22.—Mrs. H. L. Kirby, Toronto, is visiting friends in Keene.

Miss Margaret Wood is spending the week at Warkworth.

Master Harold Smith, Peterborough, is the guest of his father, Mr A. S. A. Smith.

We are pleased to note that Mr J. H. McIntyre, who has been very ill, is much better and is improving rapidly.

Entrance examinations will be held here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

Mr. Sidney Smithson left for Buckhorn Tuesday, where he will act as presiding examiner at the Entrance Examinations held there.

Miss Mamie McNeil left last week for a three months' visit to Montreal.

Rev. W. D. Harrison, who leaves next week, will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday. Mr Harrison goes to Warkworth, exchanging pulpits with Rev. Mr. Johnston, of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McIntyre, of North Bay, are the guests of Mr. M. Intyre's parents.

Mr John Byrant left last week on a trip to Manitoba.

Mr. Adam Starke is spending the holidays in Keene.

Messrs. W. Kidd and J. Devlin, Indian River, were in the village on Saturday.

A number of the boys from this vicinity left for camp at Kingston and Cobourg on Monday.

Mr. Leo Walsh left for Edmonton last week.

Miss Edna Howson, who has been attending High School at Norwood, has returned home for the holidays.

Miss Lillian Wedlock is the guest of Mrs. James Wedlock, Beneforf.

Mrs. John H. Fife is visiting friends in the west.

Mr James Stewart, who runs the stage between Keene and the station, has purchased a new covered stage that will make the ride to the station much more pleasant and convenient for his patrons. Mr. Stewart has also bought the building formerly used by Mr. John Bennet as a blacksmith shop, and will convert it into a stable and livery barn.

So far this season the fishing in the lake has not been as good as usual, but a good many lunge have been taken out of the river in the past week. Mr. T. M. Dean, of the staff of the Bank of Toronto, caught an eighteen pound fish Thursday, and Saturday Mr. J. H. S. Dickson caught one that weighed sixteen pounds.

Rev. John Gray, D.D., who spent a couple of weeks in this vicinity collecting from Keene and Westwood congregations for the Knox College Building Fund, returned to Toronto Thursday.

Misses Luella Redpath and Lulu Mardiff, Lakefield, are the guests of Miss Nellie Speirs.

Miss Clara Roach leaves shortly for Rochester, where she intends studying nursing.

Misses Bessie Read and Kathleen Powell left Tuesday on a trip to Vancouver Island.

Mr. J. C. Read, accompanied by his neice, Miss Bessie Read, Peterborough, left Tuesday on a trip to Connecticut.

Mrs. Yourex and Mrs. Young, Norwood, former residents of Keene, paid a visit to the village last week.

The Village Improvement Society ran their first excursion last Wednesday to Peterborough. Owing to the number of conflicting excursions the attendance was rather small, but those who did attend enjoyed a very pleasant sail.

The Bethel Sunday school and Epworth League intend running an excursion Thursday by train to Lakefield, thence by steamer around Stoney Lake, which promises to be largely attended, and should be a very fine trip.

Public meetings will be held in the town hall, Saturday, June 26th, under the auspices of the Women's Institute in the afternoon and evening. The programme of the afternoon meeting will consist of addresses by Miss Powell, demonstrations in needlework, and by Miss Gilholm, "Will the Dairy Cow pay the Mortgage." All women are cordially invited to attend this meeting. The meeting will commence at 2.30 p.m. The evening meeting will commence at 8 p.m. This meeting is free to all and a good attendance is looked for. Music and recitations will be interspersed in the programme. At this meeting the same speakers will give addresses, taking as their subjects, "Our Friends and Foes," "Bacteria," and "Institute Work."

FOURNIER STILL IN GAOL

Toronto Star.

It is contended on behalf of Mr Fournier that his counsel was not allowed to present his defence, but, however this may be, the use of the power to commit for contempt of court in cases of this kind is to be condemned. The matter was very thoroughly and learnedly discussed in the House of Commons in 1894, upon a motion made by Mr. Davies—now Sir Louis Davies, a member of the Supreme Court of Canada—disapproving of the imprisonment of Mr. John V. Ellis for contempt of court in publishing comments on the conduct of Judge Tuck, of New Brunswick. It was contended by Mr Davies, by the late Hon David Mills, and by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that the power of the court to punish for contempt ought not to be used in cases of "constructive contempt," that is, newspaper comment on judicial proceedings.

The procedure for contempt, it was argued, was intended to defend the course of justice, not the feelings of judges. The judges have a right to prevent interference with the course of justice, but when the trial is over, and the decision given, resort to the arbitrary power to commit for contempt is no longer necessary. The judge who assumes such power becomes a judge in his own cause, he assumes the three-fold function of prosecutor, judge and jury. The defendant has none of the safeguards which are enjoyed by a prisoner against whom an information is laid. Opinions of eminent English judges were placed in support of the position that in cases of this kind the procedure should be by information or indictment, not by the use of the summary power intended to protect the court in the discharge of its duties.

Sir Francis Langelier, who imposed the sentence, was in 1894 a member of the House of Commons, and his name is on the record as voting for the following resolution: "The jurisdiction claimed by the judges of the Superior Courts of Record, of punishing by fine and commitment for constructive contempt, being practically arbitrary and unlimited, and exercised by judges who, at the same time, are judges of the law, of the fact, of the intention, and of the sentence, and whose decisions are given without the aid of a jury and without being subject to review, is opposed to the genius and spirit of constitutional liberty, and ought never to be exercised where any other pertinent remedy can be found or recourse had to any other method of obtaining justice."

The position taken by the Liberals in 1894 is sound. Judges ought to refrain from using the power to commit for contempt of court in the class of cases described. Moreover, in order to make abuse impossible, the law relating to contempt of court ought to be clearly expressed in a statute. The power ought to be used for the sole purpose of preventing interference with the course of justice, and the defendant ought to have the same safeguard for a fair trial as is afforded to persons charged with other offi[illegible]

Three Salads.

A delicious salad served at a luncheon recently came in on individual plates. On each plate there was a white lettuce leaf, and heaped in the middle of it shredded celery dressed with mayonnaise and sprinkled on the top with broken English walnut meats. Around the mound there were strips of Spanish red peppers.

For a hasty fruit salad when fresh fruit is not at hand open a can of peaches, drain it and arrange the halves of the fruit on lettuce leaves, sprinkle them with shredded almonds and a few cherries if they are at hand, and dress them with mayonnaise. If nuts and cherries are not at hand the peaches are excellent alone.

A woman with a long salad repertory boils English walnut meats with a slice of onion and a blade of mace for fifteen minutes, then drains and chills them and serves on lettuce leaves with sections of hard boiled eggs and mayonnaise. As a garnish she uses strips of olives.

To Save the Slippers.

For the very fine slipper, whose softness needs little more than the old time stuffing of crumpled tissue paper, there is a homemade spreader that will save the price of a shoe tree.

Take a pair of long, covered steels, those that come for boning waist seams. Cover them with puffed ribbon or silk and stick one end of each into a tight ball of cotton, also covered with shirred ribbon or silk. This ball should be big enough to fill the vamp of the slipper and should be securely sewed to the steel. Finally it is to be placed in the slipper's toe, after which the other end of the steel is sprung into the heel.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN,

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

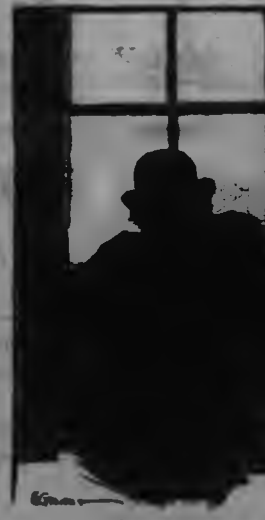
COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

Disgusted with his failure, Sweetwater returned to the front and, finding the situation unchanged, took a new resolve. After measuring with his eye the height of the first story, he coolly walked over to the strange horse and, slipping his bridle, brought it back and cast it over a projection of the door. By its aid he succeeded in climbing up to the window, which was the sole eye to the interior.

Mr. Grey sat far back in his buggy, watching every movement.

There were no shades at the window, as I have before said, and once Sweetwater's eye had reached the level of the sill he could see the interior without the least difficulty. There was nobody there. The lamp burned on a great table littered with papers, but the rude cane chair before it was empty, and so was the room. He could see into every corner of it, and there was not even a hiding place where anybody could remain concealed. Sweetwater was still looking when the lamp, which had been burning with considerable smoke, flared up and went out. Sweetwater uttered an ejaculation and, finding himself face to face with utter darkness, slid from his perch to the ground.

Approaching Mr. Grey for the second time, he said:



He could see into every corner.

"I cannot understand it. The fellow is either lying low or he's gone out, leaving his lamp to go out too. But where is the horse? Just excuse me while I tie him up again. It looks like the one he was driving today. It is the one. Well, he won't leave him here all night. Shall we lie low and wait for him to come and unhitch this animal or do you prefer to return to the hotel?"

Mr. Grey was slow in answering. Finally he said:

"The man may suspect our intention. You can never tell anything about such fellows as he. He may have caught some unexpected glimpse of me or simply heard that I was in town. If he's the man I think him, he has reasons for avoiding me which I can very well understand. Let us go back, not to the hotel—I must see this adventure through tonight—but far enough for him to think we have given up all idea of routing him out tonight. Perhaps that is all he is waiting for. You can steal back"—

"Excuse me," said Sweetwater, "but I know a better dodge than that. We'll circumvent him. We passed a boathouse on our way down here. I'll just drive you up, procure a boat and bring you back here by water. I don't believe that he will expect that, and if he is in the house we shall see him or his light."

"Meanwhile he can escape by the road."

"Escape? Do you think he is planning to escape?"

The detective spoke with becoming surprise, and Mr. Grey answered without apparent suspicion.

"It is possible, if he suspects my presence in the neighborhood."

"Do you want to stop him?"

"I want to see him."

"Oh, I remember. Well, sir, we will drive on—that is, after a moment."

"What are you going to do?"

"Oh, nothing. You said you wanted to see the man before he escaped."

"Yes, but"—

"And that he might escape by the road."

"Yes"—

"Well, I was just making that a little bit impracticable. A small pebble in the keyhole and why, see now, his horse is walking off! Gee! I must have fastened him badly. I shouldn't wonder if he trotted all the way to town. But it can't be helped. I cannot be supposed to race after him. Are you ready now, sir? I'll give another shout, then I'll get in." And once more the lonely region about echoed with the cry: "Wellgood! I say, Wellgood!"

There was no answer, and the young detective, masking for the nonce as Mr. Grey's confidential servant, jumped into the buggy and turned the horse's head toward C—.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE moon was well up when the small boat in which our young detective was seated with Mr. Grey appeared in the bay approaching the so called manufactory of Wellgood. The looked for light on the waterside was not there. All was dark except where the windows reflected the light of the moon.

This was a decided disappointment to Sweetwater, if not to Mr. Grey. He had expected to detect signs of life in this quarter, and this additional proof of Wellgood's absence from home made it look as if they had come out on a fool's errand and might much better have stuck to the road.

"No promise there," came in a mutter from his lips. "Shall I row in, sir, and try to make a landing?"

"You may row nearer. I should like a closer view. I don't think we shall attract any attention. There are more boats than ours on the water."

Sweetwater was startled. Looking round, he saw a launch, or some such small steamer, riding at anchor not far from the mouth of the bay. But that was not all. Between it and them was a rowboat like their own, resting quietly in the wake of the moon.

"I don't like so much company," he muttered. "Something's brewing; something in which we may not want to take part."

"Very likely," answered Mr. Grey grimly. "But we must not be deterred—not till I have seen"— the rest Sweetwater did not hear. Mr. Grey seemed to remember himself. "Row nearer," he now bade. "Get under the shadow of the rocks if you can. If the boat is for him, he will show himself. Yet I hardly see how he can board from that bank."

It did not look feasible. Nevertheless, they waited and watched with much patience for several long minutes. The boat behind them did not advance, nor was any movement discernible in the direction of the manufactory. Another short period, then suddenly a light flashed from a window high up in the central gable, sparkled for an instant and was gone. Sweetwater took it for a signal and, with a slight motion of the wrist, began to work his way in toward shore till they lay almost at the edge of the piles.

"Hark!"

It was Sweetwater who spoke.

Both listened, Mr. Grey with his head turned toward the launch and Sweetwater with his eye on the cavernous space, sharply outlined by the piles, which the falling tide now disclosed under each contiguous building. Goods had been directly shipped from these stores in the old days. This he had learned in the village. How shipped he had not been able to understand from his previous survey of the building. But he thought he could see now. At low tide, or better, at half tide, access could be got to the floor of the extension and, if this floor held a trap, the mystery would be explainable. So would be the hovering boat—the signal light and yes! the sound overhead of steps on a rattling planking.

"I hear nothing," whispered Mr. Grey from the other end. "The boat is still there, but not a man has dipped an oar."

"They will soon," returned Sweetwater as a smothered sound of clanking from reached his ears from the hollow spaces before him. "Duck your head, sir; I'm going to row in under this portion of the house."

Mr. Grey would have protested, and with very good reason. There was scarcely a space of three feet between them and the boards overhead. But Sweetwater had so immediately suited action to word that he had no choice.

They were now in utter darkness, and Mr. Grey's thoughts must have been peculiar as he crouched over the stern, hardly knowing what to expect or whether this sudden launch into darkness was for the purpose of flight or pursuit. But enlightenment came soon. The sound of a man's tread in the building above was every moment becoming more perceptible, and while wondering possibly at his position Mr. Grey naturally turned his head as nearly as he could in the direction of these sounds and was staring with blank eyes into the darkness when Sweetwater, leaning toward him, whispered:

"Look up! There's a trap. In a minute he'll open it. Mark him, but don't breathe a word, and I'll get you out of this all right."

Mr. Grey attempted some answer, but it was lost in the prolonged creak of slowly moving hinges somewhere over their heads. Spaces which had looked dark suddenly looked darker; hearing was satisfied, but not the eye. A man's breath panting with exertion testified to a nearby presence, but that man was working without a light in a room with shuttered windows, and Mr. Grey probably felt that he knew very little more than before, when suddenly, most unexpectedly, to him at least, a face started out of that overhead darkness, a face so white, with every feature made so startlingly distinct by the strong light Sweetwater had thrown upon it, that it seemed the only thing in the world to the two men beneath. In another moment it had vanished, or, rather, the light which had revealed it.

"What's that? Are you there?" came down from above in hoarse and none too encouraging tones.

There was none to answer. Sweetwater, with a quick pull on the oars, had already shot the boat out of its dangerous harbor.

CHAPTER XX.

"ARE you satisfied? Have you got what you wanted?" asked Sweetwater when they were well away from the shore and the voice they had heard calling at intervals from the chasm they had left.

"Yes. You're a good fellow. It could not have been better managed." Then, after a pause too prolonged and thoughtful to please Sweetwater, who was burning with curiosity if not with some deeper feeling, "What was that light you burned—a match?"

Sweetwater did not answer. He dared not. How speak of the electric torch he as a detective carried in his pocket? That would be to give himself away. He therefore let this question slip by and put in one of his own.

"Are you ready to go back now, sir? Are we all done here?" This with his ear turned and his eye bent forward, for the adventure they had interrupted was not at an end, whether their part in it was or not.

Mr. Grey hesitated, his glances following those of Sweetwater.

"Let us wait," said he in a tone which surprised Sweetwater. "If he is meditating an escape, I must speak to him before he reaches the launch. At all hazards," he added after another moment's thought.

"All right, sir. How do you propose"—

His words were interrupted by a shrill whistle from the direction of the bank. Promptly and as if awaiting this signal the two men in the rowboat before them dipped their oars and pulled for the shore, taking the direction of the manufactory.

Sweetwater said nothing, but held himself in readiness.

Mr. Grey was equally silent, but the lines of his face seemed to deepen in the moonlight as the boat, gliding rapidly through the water, passed them within a dozen boat lengths and slipped into the opening under the manufactory building.

"Now row!" he cried. "Make for the launch. We'll intercept them on their return."

Sweetwater, glowing with anticipation, bent to his work. The boat beneath them gave a bound, and in a few minutes they were far out on the waters of the bay.

"They're coming!" he whispered eagerly as he saw Mr. Grey looking anxiously back. "How much farther shall I go?"

"Just within hailing distance of the launch," was Mr. Grey's reply.

Sweetwater, gauging the distance with a glance, stopped at the proper point and rested on his oars. But his thoughts did not rest. He realized that he was about to witness an interview whose importance he easily recognized. How much of it would he hear? What would be the upshot and what was his full duty in the case? He knew that this man Wellgood was wanted by the New York police, but he was possessed with no authority to arrest him even if he had the power.

"Something more than I bargained for," he inwardly commented. "But I wanted excitement, and now I have got it. If only I can keep my head level, I may get something out of this, if not all I could wish."

Meantime the second boat was very nearly on them. He could mark the three figures and pick out Wellgood's head from among the rest. It had a resolute air. The face, on which, to his evident discomfiture, the moon shone, wore a look which convinced the detective that this was no patent medicine manufacturer, nor even a caterer's assistant, but a man of nerve and resources, the same, indeed, whom he had encountered in Mr. Fairbrother's house with such disastrous, almost fatal, results to himself.

The discovery, though an unexpected one, did not lessen his sense of the extreme helplessness of his own position. He could witness, but he could not act; follow Mr. Grey's orders, but indulge in none of his own. The detective must continue to be lost in the valet, though it came hard and woke a sense of shame in his ambitious breast.

Meanwhile Wellgood had seen them and ordered his men to cease rowing.

"Give way, there," he shouted. "We're for the launch and in a hurry."

"There's some one here who wants to speak to you, Mr. Wellgood," Sweetwater called out, as respectfully as he could. "Shall I mention your name?" he asked of Mr. Grey.

"No, I will do that myself." And raising his voice, he accosted the other with these words: "I am the man, Percival Grey, of Darlington Manor, England. I should like to say a word to you before you embark."

A change, quick as lightning and almost as dangerous, passed over the face Sweetwater was watching with such painful anxiety, but as the other added nothing to his words and seemed to be merely waiting, he shrugged his shoulders and muttered an order to his rowers to proceed.

In another moment the sterns of the two small craft swung together, but in such a way that, by dint of a little skillful manipulation on the part of Wellgood's men, the latter's back was toward the moon.

Mr. Grey leaned toward Wellgood, and his face fell into shadow also.

"Bah!" thought the detective. "I should have managed that myself. But if I cannot see I shall at least hear."

But he deceived himself in this. The two men spoke in such low whispers that only their intensity was manifest. Not a word came to Sweetwater's ears.

"Bah!" he thought again, "this is bad."

But he had to swallow his disappointment and more. For presently the two men, so different in culture, station and appearance, came, as it seemed, to an understanding, and Wellgood, taking his hand from his breast, fumbled in one of his pockets and drew out something which he handed to Mr. Grey.

This made Sweetwater start and peer with still greater anxiety at every movement, when to his surprise both bent forward, each over his own knee, doing something so mysterious he could get no clew to its nature till they again stretched forth their hands to each other, and he caught the gleam of paper and realized that they were exchanging memoranda or notes.

These must have been important, for each made an immediate endeavor to read his slip by turning it toward the moon's rays. That both were satisfied was shown by their after movements. Wellgood put his slip into his pocket and without further word to Mr. Grey motioned his men to row away. They did so with a will, leaving a line of silver in their wake. Mr. Grey, on the contrary, gave no orders. He still held his slip and seemed to be dreaming. But his eye was on the shore, and he did not even turn when sounds from the launch denoted that she was under way.

Sweetwater, looking at this morsel of paper with greedy eyes, dipped his oars and began pulling softly toward that portion of the beach where a small and twinkling light defined the boathouse. He hoped Mr. Grey would speak; hoped that in some way, by some means, he might obtain a clew to his patron's thoughts. But the English gentleman sat like an image and did not move till a slight but sudden breeze, blowing in shore, seized the paper in his hand and carried it away, past Sweetwater, who vainly sought to catch it as it went fluttering by into the water ahead, where it shone for a moment, then softly disappeared.

Sweetwater uttered a cry; so did Mr. Grey.

"Is it anything you wanted?" called out the former, leaning over the bow of the boat and making a dive at the paper with his oar.

"Yes; but if it's gone, it's gone," returned the other with some feeling. "Careless of me, very careless, but I was thinking of"—

He stopped. He was greatly agitated, but he did not encourage Sweetwater in any further attempts to recover the lost memorandum. Indeed, such an effort would have been fruitless. The paper was gone, and there was nothing left for them but to continue their way. As they did so it would have been hard to tell in which breast chagrin mounted higher. Sweetwater had lost a clew in a thousand, and Mr. Grey—well, no one knew what he had lost. He said nothing and plainly showed by his changed manner that he was in haste to land now and be done with this doubtful adventure.

When they reached the boathouse Mr. Grey left Sweetwater to pay for the boat and started at once for the hotel.

The man in charge had the bow of the boat in hand, preparatory to pulling it up on the boards. As Sweetwater turned toward him he caught sight of the side of the boat, shining brightly in the moonlight. He gave a start and, with a muttered ejaculation, darted forward and picked off a small piece of paper from the dripping keel. It separated in his hand and part of it escaped him, but the rest he managed to keep by secreting it in his palm, where it still clung, wet and possibly illegible, when he came upon Mr. Grey again in the hotel office.

He picked off a small piece of paper from the dripping keel.

"Here's your pay," said that gentleman, giving him a bill. "I am very glad I met you. You have served me remarkably well."

There was an anxiety in his face and a hurry in his movements which struck Sweetwater.

"Does this mean that you are through with me?" asked Sweetwater. "That you have no further call for my services?"

"Quite so," said the gentleman. "I am going to take the train tonight. I find that I still have time."

Sweetwater began to look alive.

Uttering hasty thanks, he rushed away to his own room and, turning on the gas, peeled off the morsel of paper which had begun to dry on his hand. If it should prove to be the blank end! If the written part were the one which had floated off! Such disappointments had fallen to his lot! He was not unused to them.

But he was destined to better luck this time. The written end had indeed disappeared, but there was one word left, which he had no sooner read than he gave a low cry and prepared to leave for New York on the same train as Mr. Grey.

The word was—diamond.

HORSE CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS HAD TO BE KILLED

Small Fire at Lakefield on Monday—T.C.S. Defeats Grove Eleven—Mill Hands Struck and Were Discharged.

Special to the Review.

Lakefield, June 23—The Cavendish Lumber Company had the misfortune to lose a horse on Monday afternoon. Mr. Lennox who was driving the animal was on the track between the lumber piles placing the loaded small cars for unloading when the Grand Trunk locomotive shunted a couple of empties into the siding with such force that the horse was caught between the cars and was so badly hurt that it was necessary to kill it.

The young folk of the village held a picnic and flotilla at Hague's Point on Monday evening when a most enjoyable time was spent. Wm. Madill, the druggist, does not guarantee Parisian Sage to grow hair on every bald head, but if there is any life left in the roots of your hair, Parisian Sage will stimulate the hair bulbs and cause your hair to grow again. Here is one case: "I am now using the second bottle of your Parisian Sage, and can notice a new crop of hair appearing. I am glad to say it is a darker color than my hair was before I became bald." Harry Reid, 10 Manhattan St., Rochester, N.Y.

Don't wait till you're bald before using Parisian Sage, use it now. Kill the dandruff germ and prevent baldness. Wm. Madill, the druggist, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, and cure all diseases of the scalp, or money back. Parisian Sage is a delightfully invigorating hair dressing; it makes the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful.

CITIZENS WROTH

Chief Rossel got twelve telephone calls last night complaining of the depredations of the gypsy women and children, who were allowed their freedom yesterday and who are encamped at the exhibition grounds. This morning the Chief had quite an argument with Warden Scott and the head of the city police does not think the gypsies should have been turned loose on the city after the county had gathered them in.

It is said they burned some fence rails, pilfered from nearby gardens and committed other acts of trespass.

CENTRAL STREETS WILL BE WATERED ON SUNDAYS

Board of Works Decided on This at Last Night's Meeting—Ashburnham Dissatisfied With Street Watering Service—Suggestion to Flush George Street Pavements and Gutters.

A short session of the Board of Works was held last night, the most interesting feature of which was the question of watering the streets on Sunday. The Board thought the suggestion of Ald. McIntyre in this respect was a timely one, and steps will be taken to alleviate the "dust nuisance" which is giving the smallpox epidemic a close run in the nuisance department.

SEIZED A BARREL OF WHISKEY AT LAKEFIELD

Inspector Stewart Paid Quiet Visit to Local Option Town Last Night—Charge Will Be Laid Against Proprietor of Hotel—Seizure at Police Station.

License Inspector Stewart made an unexpected visit to the Lakefield House kept by Mr. Lawless, and made a seizure of a barrel of liquor, containing, it is estimated, in the neighborhood of forty or fifty gallons. Mr. Stewart left yesterday afternoon on the train for Lakefield, and did not arrive back here until this morning, when he brought the barrel with him.

In local option districts the maximum amount a hotelman may have on his premises is two gallons, and it will be seen that the quantity taken in charge by the inspector was away over the limit.

Mr Stewart was interviewed by the Review to-day, but was very reticent about the matter and would not commit himself by giving anything but the mere announcement that the seizure had been made.

Under the circumstances a charge will of course be laid against Mr. Lawless. The liquor is in bond at the police station.

It is understood that Mr. Kennedy and his family will still reside in this city.

Constructed of solid steel and concrete and absolutely fireproof, the new stand will be over 500 feet in length and will provide seating accommodation for 12,000 people, along with elaborate dining halls and other accessories of the modern fair. It will command from all sections a fine view of the spectacular production, the feature of the night entertainment as well as the races and varied attractions of the afternoon program. Improvements on an extensive scale are being carried out in the grounds and buildings, including a Process Building which will show the product of many factories in process of manufacture; the prize list all round is increased, many new features being added, and generally speaking the fair of 1909 will be bigger and better than ever.

AUTO CAR TO COMMENCE DAILY TRIPS TO CHEMONG

The Peterborough and Chemong auto car has been thoroughly overhauled, repainted and put in first-class working order, and will start its regular trip to and from Chemong at once. An experienced and capable chauffeur has been engaged, and those using the car are assured of every consideration and attention. The fact of a capable driver in charge will also do away with trouble that has been met with on the country roads. Horses don't take kindly to any of the automobiles, but instructions have been given to the chauffeur of this car to exercise every consideration in this respect, and it is hoped that the township officials will keep the roads in good shape for travelling and not as was the case last year—cover different parts of the road with gravel and stone right in the busy season. The time-table will be found in another column of this issue, and parties wishing to use the auto car at any other time are assured of good satisfaction.

UNITED STATES SENATE BLOCKS COAL RECIPROCITY

Mooted Offer of Preferential Tariff is Suddenly Done Away With by the Senate Fixing Duties on Coal —Other Articles on Increased List.

Washington, June 24.—Rather unexpectedly to itself the Senate late yesterday concluded its consideration of the coal schedules.

The finance committee through Mr. Aldrich reported an amendment fixing the duty on bituminous coal and shale at sixty cents per ton; on coal slack or culm, at fifteen cents per ton; coke and compositions used for fuel at twenty per cent. ad valorem. A drawback equal to the duty is allowed vessels in the foreign trade.

This scale, Mr. Aldrich explained, was a reduction of seven cents a ton on coal under the house rate. The amendment, he said, also left out the House reciprocity provison. He did not believe, however, that the House would remove its duty on coal even if the reciprocity provision were left in the bill.

Numerous attempts were made to reduce the rate, and there was one effort to obtain free coal, but all were voted down and the committee's scale retained.

By a vote of 50 to 28, the Senate finance committee's amendment placing a duty of $1.50 a thousand feet on sawed lumber, with differentials on finished lumber was carried. This is 50 cents below the Dingley rates. In quick succession several other paragraphs of the lumber schedule were agreed to. By amendments offered by Mr. Aldrich and agreed to by the Senate, the duty on clapboards was increased from $1 to $1.50 per thousand; on laths from 20 to 25 cents per 1,000 pieces and on shingles from 30 to 50 cents.

LOCAL LABOR CONDITIONS FOR THE MONTH OF JUNE

Mr. J. Arthur Sharp, correspondent to the Labor Gazette, reported as follows for the month of June;

The month showed some improvement over last month, especially in the building trades and a big improvement over last year. No large works but a great number of dwellings are being built.

The factories have not shown much improvement but all are working full time.

The Colonial Weaving Co. afford an example of manufacturing conditions generally. It manufactures tables, and orders received are far in excess of the plant's capacity. The company will build a new factory, 50 feet by 200 feet.

Boat and canoe builders have had a very busy season and are still very busy on gasoline launches and canoes.

The cheese factories opened on the 3rd of the month. The season is considered by the buyers to be very promising.

The Baptists have bought a lot for a new church, the present building being too small.

Building permits issued since Jan. 1st total $90,281.

The city council passed a bylaw to have all barber shops close at eleven o'clock on Saturday nights and on nights preceding holidays; they formerly were open until 12 o'clock.

Agriculture.—Farm work has been much retarded by the weather but no alarm is felt. The fine weather of the later part of the month made seeding possible and the farmers were very busy. The general opinion is that a good season will be experienced. The fall wheat and clover have done well in spite of the dry weather last fall.

Lumbering—Conditions continue active. Work on the drives is in full progress and the sawmills are all started working. A good cut is expected.

Railroad employment — The grain traffic has been heavy and business as good as could be expected.

TWENTY DAYS IN GAOL FOR ONE GLASS OF LIQUOR

Fine of Ten Dollars Could Not Be Paid and Blacklister Had to Take the "Time."

James Hayes was fined $10 by Magistrate Dumble this morning at the police court for having secured liquor yesterday when he was notified by Inspector Stewart and served with the blacklist notice which prohibited him from so doing. The accused asked for ten days to pay the fine but his request was not granted as the law calls for it to be paid forthwith and in default twenty days in gaol and James had to take the time.

He stated that he had been given a drink from a bottle by a man named Richard Fallus who was not aware that he was blacklisted. The liquor was given him in the yard of the Grand hotel yesterday and it was the first he had had since being posted.

WATER MAIN ROLLED ON LITTLE GIRL'S ARM

A little girl had a narrow escape from serious injury last evening about seven o'clock. With a number of young companions she was playing near where the waterworks mains are being put in at the north end of Aylmer street. One of the mains had been placed up on top of the bank ready to be placed in the trench and while the young people were sitting on it, the heavy pipe rolled down and the children with it. In some manner one end rolled on to the little girl's arm and badly crushed it about the wrist. The pipe was too heavy for her playmates to free her but her screams brought several neighbors to the spot and the injured arm was released from its painful position. Dr. Greer was called but on examination found that no bones were broken although the wrist was badly crushed.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURORS TO-DAY

Suggestion That the City Make Some Adequate Provision for the Care of the Indigent and Unfortunate.

The Grand jurors have completed their inspection of the county gaol, the House of Refuge and public institutions of the city, and their presentment to His Honor Judge O'Connell is as follows—

To His Honor Judge O'Connell:

Your Grand jurors at the County court and General Sessions of the County of Peterborough, beg leave, in making their presentation, to most heartily congratulate your Honor upon being elevated to the position of County Court judge. We regard this as a tribute to your legal knowledge, your general high qualifications as a member of the bar, and your judicial qualities of mind.

While the honor is, in itself, a great one, it is emphasized by the fact that those best qualified to judge have considered you to be a worthy successor of the late lamented Judge Weller, who, during nearly a third of a century of professional life, and nearly a quarter of a century of able and dignified judicial life, furnished to the bar and the bench of Canada a standard of professional practice, high sense of duty, and efficient discharge of the same, which constitute a precedent, whose observance is worthy the respect of the legal profession and of the most capable occupants of the bench.

In compliance with the charge of your Honor, delivered at the opening of court, we have addressed ourselves to the duties pointed out to us.

We regret, with your Honor, that, in regard to the investigation of criminal charges, our duties have not been as light as has been the case on other similar occasions, but we are pleased to report that the charges upon which we have found three "true bills," are not of a very serious character.

We made the usual inspection of the gaol, and found a satisfactory condition of management. It contained three old persons, for whom the gaol is not, we submit, a proper place of shelter, and we would suggest that the city make some adequate provision, similar to that made by the county, to provide for the care of the indigent and unfortunate, without compelling them to associate with criminals or accused persons.

We paid the usual visits to the House of Refuge and the public institutions of the city, and have only to speak in terms of approval of the satisfactory conditions found existing in all of them.

With regard to the foreigners in the gaol, while we recognize that society must be afforded protection, we regret that a course of action was made necessary, in the interest of the safety of the general public of the district, which seems to throw an undue expense upon this county; and it seems to us desirable, if the means do not already exist, to so arrange matters as to enlist the action of the provincial authorities in discharging or materially helping to discharge, the responsibilities arising out of the situation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN J. HOWDEN,
Foreman.

Grand Jury Room, Peterborough, June 24th, 1909.

DAMAGE BY ELECTROLYSIS

Winnipeg, June 24.—That the known damage to the domestic supply and high water mains through electrolysis amounts to thousands of dollars already, and that it is possible that a great many water mains in the central portion of the city are very seriously affected through the currents of electricity escaping from street car rails, is the essence of the report presented to the board of control by Prof. L. A. Herdt of McGill University, who has been conducting tests for several months.

Up-to-Date Railway Travel.

Chicago, June 24.—Competition for the bulk of travel to the exposition in Seattle has reached another notch in the announcement of one railway that all its limited trains will be supplied with phonographs for the entertainment of passengers. # ELEVEN ARE DROWNED ON LOWER KILLARNEY LAKE

Nine Visitors and Two Boatmen Perish in Famous Irish Mecca for Sightseers When Craft is Swamped in Gale—Three Unfortunates Clung to Oar.

Killarney, Ireland, June 24.—A large rowboat, carrying five American and four English tourists and four Irish boatmen, or 13 in all, was swamped in a gale while crossing Lower Killarney Lake yesterday afternoon.

All of the tourists and two of the boatmen were drowned. The victims are Mrs. A. A. Hilton and son of Tacoma, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Longhead, or Loughead of Boston; Miss M. H. Catum or Cotum of Massachusetts; Rev. B. Barton and sister of London, and Miss Florence Wilkinson and cousin of Brentwood, Essex; Boatmen Con. Tooney and Con. Gleeson. None of the bodies were recovered last night.

The boat was a four-oared craft, used for taking visitors about the lake. Most of the passengers were guests at the Great Southern Hotel. When the lower lake was reached, it was found that a heavy wind from the northwest was blowing. Several other boats that had started over the same course put back.

It was not long before anxiety began to be felt concerning the boat, which had continued on the course, and searchers who put out when the wind had died down a little, discovered her overturned with two of the boatmen clinging to the keel. Hilton and two of the women could be seen in the distance, supported by an oar, but they sank before the rescuers could reach them.

The two boatmen who were rescued were to exhausted to give any account of the accident.

Prisoner Attempted Suicide.

Badly Hurt In Runaway.

Brampton, June 24.—Wm. Large, a plumber, accompanied by Frank Bailey, was driving to Huttonville yesterday morning, when their horse ran away. Both men were thrown out, Large having his leg broken and Bailey a broken arm.

MANUFACTURERS ARE CRITICIZED

Ottawa, June 24.—A. W. Donly, Canadian commissioner in Mexico, hands out a warm criticism of Canadian manufacturers and their methods of doing business, in a report just received at the Department of Trade and Commerce. According to Mr. Donly, our manufacturers are both "academic" and "provincial," and fail utterly to appreciate the fertile field for trade development, which exists in Mexico.

There is no excuse for this, he says, in view of the fact that Mexican imports are steadily growing and Canadian manufactured products are similar to those of the United States, a country which supplies 60 per cent. of everything imported by Mexico.

LIGHTNING HIT A PARIS MAN

Paris, Ont., June 24.—During a heavy thunderstorm yesterday afternoon Jerome Kinsley was struck by lightning and was unconscious for twenty minutes. He, with his men, who are cutting lumber in Lapirre's Bush, about three miles from here, were holding their horses, when he and three of the horses were struck. They will all recover.

THE CRUELTY OF A MOTHER

Mrs. Lajoie Committed for Trial for Abusing Child

Ottawa, June 24.—Mrs. Napoleon Lajoie, Aylmer, the alleged child-beater, was yesterday committed to stand trial by Magistrate Goiette in the Hull court. Trial was set for Monday morning next at 10 o'clock. There was a large crowd present, mostly women.

Dr. W. Kennedy of Ottawa General Hospital, testified that the child was emaciated and failing rapidly from hunger when taken there. Her arms and head were bruised and cut.

Mrs. Napoleon Chartrand, who lives across the street from the Lajoie home, testified that she had known the family for a number of years and that Lena had always been compelled to do hard work. Her mother compelled her to carry big pails of water from an outside pump to the house, a distance of 30 yards. If she returned with the pails not quite full she was given a sound beating. Lena was kept on her knees on the stairs for hours and was never allowed to play outside doors like the others.

"I hate you enough to poison and destroy you," was the assertion Mrs. Chartrand said the mother made one time to the child. Mrs. Lajoie told her she hated Lena because of the strong facial resemblance to the father's relatives."

SHOULD EXTEND MEAT INSPECTION

Ottawa, June 24.—The extension of the meat inspection provisions to local meat business and compensation for animals condemned and seized were urged before Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Sydney Fisher yesterday morning by a deputation which included representatives of Blackwell and Flavelle, Toronto; Laing & Co., Montreal; Matthews, Ottawa; Hatton, Collingwood; Fearman, Hamilton, all big firms doing both interprovincial and export business. The delegation declared that the provisions of the Pure Food Act, to which they were subjected, should be extended by provincial legislation to local butchers and packers who do business in a single province only and are therefore not subject to the Dominion act. The Ministers promised to use their influence to have the request carried out.

J. A. MacDONALD TALKS TO SCOTS

London, June 24.—With the press delegates at Edinburgh, speaking at the students' union luncheon, J. A. Macdonald of Toronto, replying to the provost's welcome, pointed out the significance of concluding the tour at the capital of the unconquered Scottish people. To-day they were proof of what Scotland and Edinburgh had done for the liberty of the world. The strength of the overseas dominions' press would fight to give the common man a chance, and fight, if necessary, against the tyrannous crowd democracies could breed, as their sires had fought against kings. He invited the British people to fill the great lands of overseas dominions, where they desired to build a democracy free and strong that would cling to the old homeland.

WAS FREED BY CLERK'S ERROR

Chicago, June 24.—The error of a court clerk in reading the wrong slip returned by jury, and declaring that Frank O'Donnell, accused of robbing a van at the point of a revolver, was "not guilty," resulted in a pitiful scene. O'Donnell jumped from his seat, excitedly laughing and wrung his lawyer's hand. He started from the room with his head in the air and his eyes sparkling. Then the mistake was discovered and O'Donnell was brought back to be condemned to life imprisonment.

BABE DROWNS IN RAIN BARREL

Hamilton, June 24.—Death came with shocking suddenness to the year old baby girl of David McDonough, 118 North John street. The child was playing in the back yard, enjoying herself in the shade. There was a tub of rain water in the yard, and little Loreen was amusing herself floating bits of stick and making herself toy boats to sail in the tub, when she fell in and was drowned.

NEW SOCIETY FORMED THE CATHOLICS ORGANIZE

Association With Membership of About Three Hundred Thousand is Formed, Embracing French Societies in all Parts of Canada and New England.

Montreal, June 24.—The French Canadian and Acadian Catholic Association is now an accomplished fact, embracing the French societies of about every province of the Confederation and New England States, and possessing about three hundred thousand members, was successfully launched last night at the Monument Nationale in the presence of the Premier of Canada and of the Province of Quebec.

Years ago the Hon. Horace Mercier and Hon. J. Israel Tarte argued that the St. Jean Baptiste Society should take in every man speaking the French tongue, even if he were an adherent of the Protestant faith, but they failed to convince the majority that a man's faith should not be a test, and this has been adhered to in the formation of the larger confederation, which received its baptism last evening.

It has been stipulated that to be a member of the new society one must perform his Easter duties, and so this would have at once bowled out the late Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, who was a Huguenot, and it is not at all probable that the present Premier of the Dominion could be a member. It is stated, however, that this test was adhered to by the clerical delegates and supported by a large majority of the laymen present.

At the evening's soiree de gala Mayor Payette welcomed Sir Wilfrid and Sir Lomer, and one of the incidents was the presentation of a beautiful poem written by John Boyd and dedicated to the St. Jean Baptiste Association.

The delegates are as follows: Quebec 31, Ontario 4, New Brunswick 2, Manitoba 2, Alberta 1, Maine 1, Massachusetts 4, New York 1, New Hampshire 1, Rhode Island 1, Connecticut 1.

Cable.)—Premier Deakin told Parliament yesterday that an active policy of immigration would be undertaken, with an appointment of a high commissioner if necessary, and an endeavor would be made to cheapen cable charges and extend mail services. Col. Foxton would consult the Admiralty on marine defence by means of the most effective vessels, manned and officered by Australians, and on the construction of necessary docks, shipyards and coaling facilities. For land defence the policy of the Government would be founded on universal training and the counsel of one of the most experienced commanders in the British army would be sought.

THE GILLIES LIMIT

The Ontario Government had their first mineral sale in connection with this limit the other day, and it was a "sell" all right enough. The five hundred acres sold brought merely $150 per acre—the price of good farm land. Up to that time the public had been rigidly excluded from the limit. They were buying by guess work. Some two-thirds of the limit is remaining. Unless the real mineral wealth is in this part, and unless it brings a higher price, the great exhibition of provincial wealth hitherto unparalleled, etc., will never come off. We dislike these failures. They are needless. The government has a magnificent record. Why spoil it with such bungling? Who is to blame for the plan of sale adopted? It is useless to put up the land by tender unless people can inspect it, and it is still more useless, so to speak, if there is nothing in it. Fortunately the timber was taken off years ago or that would probably have been burned. It is true there is yet a chance for the Department of Mines to retrieve its fortunes, but even if it did, the unwisdom of its course remains.

WESTRUMITE

It is now pretty well conceded that Westrumite is the finest pavement procurable. Brick, whether vitrified or otherwise, is too noisy. Cement begins to wear too soon. Bitulithic pavement does not stand the heavy traffic. Westrumite laid on a broken stone foundation with a 2 ft. 6 gully of vitrified brick is the thing we want for Peterborough. Then, as A. J. Turner suggests, it could be flushed. The present roadway is good, but very dusty. It is hard to ask men to work on Sunday, and should not be done where at all avoidable. But even if volunteers had to be called for, it has become a necessity in Peterborough, especially in the main streets and about the middle of the city.

ELECTIONS AND COMPROMISES

(La Patrie.)

The Times and the Free Press of Ottawa in their last number comment severely upon the strange compromise by virtue of which sixty federal election protests are being abandoned. La Patrie has already several times had occasion to protest against these abuses, and to demand a reform in the election law. Election protests are based always upon charges of electoral corruption. These charges are either false or true. If they are false measures should be taken to prevent their being made on too slight a pretence. If they are true it is immoral to abandon them on the authority of party organizations. This remedy is not likely to raise the level of electoral morals. The government should take measures to institute a serious and radical reform to prevent the repetition of these abuses. It is evident that the law is defective on this point.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How did the Ontario Government come to make the Gillies limit blunder? Is is a gold instead of a silver brick after all?

All through Western Ontario our exchanges report cricket matches and plenty of them. It is only here that the game has difficulty in surviving.

"The present pressure of business and daily work is too great to last, Dr Frank Richardson, of Boston, says. We have passed the limit. It is beginning to show itself in the progeny of the present generation.

Mr. Pugsley's skin must be thick on his head, one of the two, or he would take note of general and almost emotional endorsations everywhere in the maritime provinces of Judge Landry who condemned him.

There is a good demonstration of combined township and government road work now going on in North Smith on the Buckhorn road. The government pays one-third and the township two-thirds. It should be dollar for dollar. A roller is the real roadmaker and roadmaking without it is wasted time.

Col. Samuel Hughes killed a spotted snake yesterday. That man simply cannot help being a hero. Nevertheless there are some things about this snake story that will bear explaining. How, for instance, did his snakeship manage to break through the picket lines and get away with half of the commissariat stores before an alarm was given? There is mystery here somewhere.—The Hamilton Spectator.

EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES AT GREAT PRESS CONFERENCE

Dr. Engelburg, of Pretoria, said: I know, Mr. Chairman, that there is some innate suspicion which English-speaking men entertain towards languages not theirs. I remember two days ago Lord Cromer, when addressing us and touching on some Indian point, mentioned with a feeling approaching very near to disdain the vernacular in which some of the British papers are being published. I believe that in Canada the vitality of the French language has many causes. Amongst those causes I fear that sympathy for the language of the French-Canadian is very often absent. I remember our own South African experience. When peace was made at Vereeniging the authorities who succeeded to the military regime did not do justice to the Dutch Afrikander. I will not even mention whether they showed any generosity towards this language. All of us who are citizens of this Empire should be proud of the existence without it of other nations using languages other than the English. Instead of showing hostility—if that word is not too strong—they ought to show the most and the greatest forbearance towards other languages than English in the Empire. A nation which loses its language becomes like an ox in comparison with a bull. The nation may have great prospects, but if you take away the language, or if the nation allows itself to lose its language, it also loses its vital power, it loses its spirit, and it loses its brains; and I believe we do not want, amongst the nations of the Empire, nations of oxen, but nations with fighting power.

Mr. Augustine Birrell:—

History is full of the difficulties of federation—the adjustment of State rights and federal rights is written over the history of the world in many a terrible page. I as reading the other day the life of one of the greatest Americans who ever lived, one of the most fascinating characters who ever lived in America. He was on what we now call the wrong side, the defeated South—I mean General Lee, of the Virginian Army. Here you see in the breast of as pure-minded a man as ever lived, a man as free from partisanship, as free from egotism and conceit as ever lived—here you see in the most tragic form, an active contest in his life, his passion for his old home in Virginia, for the rights which belonged to his native State where his property was, where his family had grown up round him—he was a Virginian, yet he also had politically a deep sense of the importance of the maintenance of the Union between the States and of belonging to a great and powerful Empire. He had to make up his mind between State rights and federal rights. Well, he made his choice. He was defeated in the cause which he advocated. But I thank God that now in that great country, the Union still prevails against which in a sense he fought, his character and his arms are recognized, and a great peace has settled down.

THRILLING ACCOUNT OF HOW CANAL ACCIDENT HAPPENED

As Told by an Eye-witness—No One to Catch Rope—Great Tumult of Rushing Waters—There Were Many Narrow Escapes.

The story of the great unprecedented occurrence at the Canadian Canal on Wednesday of last week is most thrilling. The uniformity of the statements of the passengers and crew indicate that no stretch of imagination need be resorted to in order to make it a record event to which the two hundred and more souls on board will always regard as an experience which is particularly their own. The following interview gives as much detail as can be secured from any of the passengers:—

"Well, sir, it was a great experience to go through, but at the same time I don't think I ever want to experience anything similar again. The accident happened about half-past one in the afternoon. I, with a number of other passengers, had just finished luncheon, and had come on deck to watch them locking through.

RIGHT AT THE BOW.

I possibly had a better view of the catastrophe than anyone else, as I was sitting on deck as close to the bow of the boat as I could get, and was about twenty yards away from the lower lock. The upper lock was still open, and the Crescent City just coming in. Below the lock was the Walker, and we in the middle snugly moored to one side of the lock. A young lady who was standing beside me noticed the duplicate emergency gates and asked me what they were for. I told her, and two minutes later she had a practical demonstration—although they didn't work out as well in practice as they do in theory. Then I saw the Walker coming up to one of the piers below. These piers, you must understand, swing away in a curve from each side of the lock. On the right hand side is one that will accommodate three or four boats. The other is shorter, and to make matters worse, a dredge was at one end of it. The captain of the Walker, instead of taking the pier nearest him, crossed the channel to the far-off one. And just here was where the trouble began.

NO ONE TO CATCH ROPE.

He was going at a good speed as he neared the pier. Then I saw him grow very much excited. He was shouting and giving orders, and running about on the bridge, because there was no one on the pier to catch his rope to tie up his boat. That was the cause of the whole accident. There stood a pier at which boats are often stopping, and yet there was no man there whose business it was to be of assistance when a boat wished to tie up. Not an official in sight. Finally, just as the Walker was sweeping by the pier a young man ran out and caught the small line as it was was flung at him. But it was too late. He had no time to haul the cable out. So he had to let it go. Then the Walker swung back across the channel and bumped into the masonry just below the right hand gate. After hitting the wall she backed off, and then some more mismanagement. The captain of the Walker said afterwards that the engineer had misunderstood his signal, and instead of backing up had gone ahead. And it certainly looked like it, for the boat came right straight at the centre of the gates. You know, the locks fit together like a broad letter V, pointing up stream. Then in a flash I saw exactly what was going to happen. The Walker struck right in between the gates and opened them about two feet, and the water did the rest. Remember, here was a mass of water eighteen feet high and five thousand feet long, and all Lake Superior behind that. Nothing could withstand that tremendous force and nothing did.

RIPPED AWAY LIKE PAPER.

The gates were brushed back—with a frightful rending of timber and crushing of broken masonry—just as though they had been made of paper. The Walker was whisked back down stream like a toy boat and down came our boat and the Crescent City as though we had been shot from a catapult. The Walker was jammed into the pier, we grazed her side, and then the Crescent City was flung up against our boat, crumbling in her own plates as though they had been brown paper and then swinging on down with the current, until finally she grounded. The last I saw of the Walker she was being swept this way and that like a straw in a whirlpool. And the whole thing did not last two minutes! Things happened so rapidly that I was almost dazed, but all the passengers kept remarkably cool. Of course, those sitting in the bow at the time the water broke through, rushed back, but there was no panic. One young lady sitting beside me screamed, but I grabbed her by the arm and told her not to get excited. I saw another lady standing beside her husband, and she was badly frightened. She was panting like a terrified bird.

THE CAPTAIN'S COOLNESS

And that's about all, I guess, except for the fact that Capt. Peyette was wonderfully cool and took the greatest care of us. He had a diver examine the boat, and then, because we had such a bad list—it was so bad that a trunk on the lower deck slid off into the water, and we saw it floating around—he put into Detour and took off 200 tons of flour. Then as we expressed our confidence in him he went on to Owen Sound.

But just think what would have happened if the Walker had been swept broadside across the channel. We would have ploughed down upon her and cut her right in two. Then the boat behind us would have rammed us, and today all three ships would be lying in the bottom of the canal. And I don't know a single soul would have been saved — not with all Lake Superior rushing down upon us with such irresistible force. But that did not happen and I am very, very glad to be safely home again."

ADMIRAL RAWSON'S STORY

Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, formerly Governor of New South Wales, now on his way home to London was interviewed in Toronto. Sir Harry knows something about ships, naturally, but seemed to consider the accident at the Sault as a very exciting experience nevertheless. It was a very pretty sight, he remarked. The water came down there with the magnificent rush and formed a splendid chute down which we went like a mill race. I was standing forward on the deck of the Assiniboia, looking over the bow, when I saw the Walker approaching. It struck me that she had too much way on at the time, but of course, we could not do anything. She struck the lower gates almost at the middle, forcing one of the valves open. Of course you see that took the support away from the other valve and the whole thing smashed down before the weight of the eighteen feet of water in the lock with the whole lake behind it.

HAWSERS PARTED LIKE THREADS

Our hawsers by which we were held to the dock, parted like thread. No hawser could stand a strain like that and ours did not even heel us over before they broke. The onward rush of water swung the Walker's bow outward as we came towards her. Had we struck her broadside on she would have shorn us in two but we glanced off her. It was then that we got our damage, not serious by the way, only some bolt-heads started but enough to cause a leak. We raced past the Walker in a moment. There was no time to reverse our engines and use steam; it was all over in a minute or two. We went down stream a few hundred yards, and then grounded. Now, before the accident occurred the upper gates of the lock were open and the Crescent City was coming in. The sudden sweep of water carried her away from her moorings and she came at us on the crest of a wave. Had she struck us fairly or had she struck the Walker on the bow, she would have been cut through too, but she escaped. Both the other boats were pretty badly damaged. The water tore down through that lock at about fifteen knots an hour with an irresistable force. It was really a very pretty sight.—Owen Sound Times.

THE EGYPTIANS' SECRET.

The Egyptians of Pharoah's time were a wonderful people. The pyramids, for instance, put our modern buildings to shame. Where such huge blocks of stone were carved—how they were moved and put in place—are mysteries to modern minds.

The Egyptians were skilled physicians, too. We know that they used fruit juices in treating many diseases. Some years ago, a physician in Ottawa discovered a method of combining the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, by which the most remarkable results have been obtained.

Whether "Fruit-a-tives" (these combined fruit juices in tablet form) are a re-discovery of the prescriptions of the ancient Egyptians, will probably never be known.

Certainly, the ancients never had a more effective remedy than "Fruit-a-tives" for all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CONFESSIONS OF A TRAINED NURSE.

MENTALLY TAKING MY MEASURE.

WHEN I came back to the club, toward the end of August, from a three months out of town case, I found it practically deserted. This is the slack season, the majority of people who can afford to employ nurses being away, and at this time of year, when a nurse finds herself at liberty, she seldom sits down and waits for a case, but takes herself off for a real holiday, so that she may be refreshed for the annual typhoid crop which returning travellers bring home with them about the middle of September. But I had had an easy summer and I was saving up for a trip to Europe in the spring, so, though the registrar assured me there had not been a call in a week, I wrote my name on the slate, rather enjoying the unique distinction of being first and last on the list.

For a day or two I puttered around, putting my wardrobe in order, writing letters and luxuriating in going to bed early and getting up late—in short, doing exactly as I pleased, which may be selfish, but is also restful. One afternoon, coming in from a peaceful stroll in the Park, I was met at the door by the registrar, who informed me that the Maternity Hospital had just telephoned for a nurse to report there at once for special duty.

"You didn't say I'd go, did you?" I asked her in dismay. "I don't like hospital specialling; besides, you know I abominate obstetrics!"

"Yes, Miss Hardie, I know that, but this comes under the head of an emergency. You know the Maternity will employ only registered nurses for its private patients, and it seems that you're about the only one on call anywhere. The patient has just been admitted, and they're in a great hurry for you."

"Bother!" I cried, but I wasted no more time in talking, ran up to my room for my valise and was down again before she had time to erase my name from the slate.

As I rode down town I felt anything but cheerful. I had not been inside the Maternity since the New York General had sent me there for my training in that branch of nursing. It was good training, and, professionally, I do not regret it, but it robbed me of my illusions. At the General I had seen much suffering and sorrow, but that had but softened me and enlarged my sympathies. At the Maternity I came face to face with sin—sometimes ashamed, and that I could understand, and condone, but more often flaunting, and that sickened and turned me into stone.

If I could I would restrict the patients of all maternity hospitals to the respectable poor, or to those unfortunates who, falling once, may, in their lapse from virtue, find both their undoing and their making. Never, never, should an unmarried woman's name be allowed on its books a second time! Cared for at the expense of the city, which also stands ready to take their unwanted children off their hands, a premium is thus set upon vice. I stiffen now, at the mere recollection of it, as I did once, when I heard one of these patients say to another:—"Hello, Miss Smith! I seen you here last year, didn't I?" for the beautiful mystery of motherhood was degraded into an ugly thing by the repulsive leer with which the other responded, laughing coarsely:—"Sure! And I guess we'll meet here on the old campin' ground next spring!"

I would have prolonged my ride if I could conscientiously, but within a quarter of an hour I left the car and presently passed from the noise and glare of the hot street into the quiet and shaded white marble coolness of the hospital, where the superintendent of nurses received me with cordiality.

"Ah, Miss Hardie! I am glad to see you. There's a sweet little patient for you in room No. 32—Mrs. Todd. Her husband is with her, but they are expecting you, so go right up. You know the way to the dressing room."

Having put on my uniform, I reported to the nurse in charge of the floor, and was by her conducted to room No. 32. Mr. Todd answered my knock, and upon my being introduced he stepped out into the hall for a moment to talk to me. We exchanged a few commonplaces until the floor nurse was out of earshot, and then Mr. Todd, who I was aware had been mentally taking my measure, held out his hand to me as one man might to another. As I took it there was an understanding in our grip, a silent compact.

"She is very young," he faltered. "I am nearly twice her age."

"Her youth will help her," I answered.

"Thank you! You give me hope!"

He opened the door for me, and I preceded him into the room. Pacing up and down its length, with short, restless step, was a fair young girl who might have sat for a portrait of Una. She apparently did not notice me until her husband said in gentle reminder:—

"Dear Elsie, here is your nurse—Miss Hardie has come!"

Then she paused in her walk and looked around with a startled air, like a deer surprised in its forest retreat by a sudden approach. I went up to her, and because she was so young, so untried, I could not greet her formally. A caress seemed more fitting, and so, instinctively my arm slipped around her protectingly, and though at first there was a hurried movement as of flight, the next instant her head was on my shoulder and I was soothing her as though she were a baby. She was trembling, and I did not wonder. Her supreme test was at hand, and her preparation for it in the school of life was all too scant—she was barely out of the kindergarten, with its games and songs, and the lesson was too hard for her.

She clung to me, and presently I persuaded her to lie down and rest. I sat beside her, and her little hand nestled into mine. Mr. Todd came and looked down at us both with a relieved expression.

"I think Miss Hardie's coddling is what you needed, little girl!" he cried, flashing a grateful glance at me.

"Dear Hugh!" she whispered, tenderly patting his cheek as he bent over her. "You have been so sweet and patient all along."

He kissed her softly on the forehead.

"I hope so, darling. How could I be anything else to you? But"—he turned to me—"in a time like this no man, not even her husband, can be to a woman what a woman can. Now, as never before, she needs her mother?"

"And your's cannot be with you?" I asked my patient.

She shook her head sadly.

"She is dead."

Her fingers responded to my pressure.

"And you have no near friend that we can send for?"

Mr. Todd answered for her.

"We are strangers here. Our home is in England, where we hope to return next spring. We have been in the States since the first of the year, as my business required my presence here. We have spent much of the time in travelling, and so have not been in New York long enough to make even acquaintances. It has been very hard for her, poor child!"

"I don't feel so lonely now," she said, bravely. "I know Miss Hardie is going to be such a comfort."

I flushed. Never had I been so strongly drawn to any one as I was to her, and it was pleasant to feel that the attraction was mutual.

"Do you object to my spoiling her?" I inquired of her husband. "I have a premonition that she is going to upset all my ideas of discipline. I shouldn't be surprised if she hoodwinked me even into letting her read her temperature chart before she is through with me!"

It was seven o'clock when Mr. Todd went to his hotel for dinner and nine when he came back. I heard the elevator when it stopped, and, guessing that he was its passenger, I went out to meet him.

"Good news, Mr. Todd!" I cried. "The stork alighted almost before the flapping of its wings! Mrs. Todd is doing beautifully, and you have a fine little daughter."

Mr. Todd's harassed look changed to one of beaming joy.

"By jove! Thank you! That is jolly good news! I didn't dare hope for it so soon. May I see her—or must I wait?"

I laughed.

"As if you could wait! Come along—she is asking for you!"

I went in with him. My patient was half asleep, but she roused at our approach, and as she stretched up her arms to her husband there was such a revealing light in both their faces that I closed my eyes lest I should see further into their souls than a third person should.

"Miss Hardie! The baby, please!" said Mrs. Todd, and though her voice had a far-away sound there was a ring of pure happiness in it.

I brought the baby to her, but she motioned me to give it to Mr. Todd. He looked frightened and glanced from his big hands to the little flannelly bundle that I held out to him.

"I don't dare!" he protested. "I might break it!"

"Please, dear! You promised!" begged his wife.

"Must I? Well, then!"

Awkwardly enough he took her from me, but she did not waken, and, gaining confidence, he hugged her to him, then reverently laid her for the first time in her mother's arms, and I was glad that he did not leave to me this privilege, which is by right the father's, and no one's else.

Those first two weeks were wonderful ones for the girl-mother, and they were scarcely less wonderful for me. Elsie—she insisted upon my calling her that—was overflowing with joy. The little new life that had sprung from her own seemed to have taken nothing from her youth, but rather had added to it. When the baby—such a dainty, roseleaf of a baby as she was!—lay upon her breast, she was radiant. At such moments I could not look away from her. Once she noticed my rivetted gaze and asked me why I was staring so at her.

"Because your face glows so with happiness, dear Elsie!" I answered. And she cried laughingly.

"It's because I am a miser! That's horrid gloating that you see. It's just because I have something of my own—my very own!" she went on, snuggling her cheek against Miss Baby's downy head.

Mr. Todd was devotion itself and all the time he could spare from business he spent with her, but there were many hours when she had no other companionship than mine, and we became well acquainted with each other, and we did not get talked out, for we had much in common, and, besides, there was always the dear baby as a topic of conversation.

The day the baby was two weeks old was a gala occasion, for it was also Elsie's nineteenth birthday and her first wedding anniversary. Mr. Todd arrived before Elsie had had her breakfast, waylaying me in the serving room with gifts and flowers for her tray, and her delighted surprise well repaid him for his trouble. There seemed to be not a cloud on their horizon, and yet even then there must have been on its way to New York a letter which lay harmlessly in the mailbag but which was to have the effect of a bomb cast in our midst.

It was only a few days later that Mr. Todd, coming in for his usual evening call, seemed preoccupied and worried. Elsie was sitting up for him in state on the lounge, and she looked very lovely in her pink silk dressing gown, her mass of golden hair coiled low on her shapely neck and her blue eyes shining as they always did when he arrived. She held up her face and he gave her the expected kiss, but as I arose to go—it is a tactless nurse that stays with her patients when they have visitors—he detained me.

"One minute, if you please, Miss Hardie! Thank you! I find that I shall have to leave New York a week from Saturday. Do you think that Elsie will be able to travel then?"

"I should think so. That will be—let me see—her twenty sixth day, and she has had no drawbacks. But the doctor will have to decide."

"Quite so! Quite so! But I am very anxious to take her with me and I simply wanted to get your opinion."

"Going away, Hugh? I thought we were to be here all winter."

"So did I! I hoped so! But—I have been recalled to England."

"To England?" she cried. "Home!" And as I left them alone I wondered if it could be a trick of my hearing that made her tone sound tragic, instead of exulting.

I do not know how long Mr. Todd remained, for he must have forgotten to ring for me, as was his custom when departing. I waited in the reception room for an hour, and then, as it was time for Elsie to go to bed, I went in. I found her in a little huddled heap on the couch, sobbing as if her heart would break—great tearless sobs they were, and they filled me with a choking anxiety.

"Elsie, dear child! It is I—Miss Hardie! What is the matter? Oh, don't! don't!"

But she paid no attention to me. What could have happened? Sixty minutes ago she was blithe and care free. Now she was bowed and broken. But she could not be allowed to go on like this. I darted over to the bassinet, picked up the sleeping baby and laid her down beside her mother. Elsie quieted for an instant. She strained her child to her breast and devoured her with hungry eyes.

"I love her so! I love her so, already! I can't live without her! Oh! I can't! I can't!" she moaned.

"What do you mean, dear Elsie? What foolish notion have you got in your little heart? Why, she's going to grow up to be such a comfort to you! You must not worry about her. I never saw a healthier baby!"

But she only sighed heavily.

"You don't understand, Miss Hardie. My husband has been recalled to England. We've got to go home! And we can't take her with us! We've got—to—leave her—here!"

"Nonsense!"—I spoke sharply to discourage her hysterical fancy. "Why should you? A sea voyage won't hurt her."

"No, the voyage won't hurt her," she repeated, dully.

"Of course not! Such a great big strong girl can go anywhere her little bit of a mother can!" I cried, briskly. "Why, she could easily pass for six or seven weeks old!"

"That's the trouble!" wailed Elsie. "If only she were a tiny, puny thing, we could manage."

At her words, vague though they were, a cold dread crept over me. But I would not yield to its blighting influence—not yet. I looked at her sweet face—surely it was as innocent as the little one at which she was gazing. I thought of Mr. Todd—a clean man if ever there was one. I touched her softly on the shoulder.

"Let me put baby back in her crib," I begged, "and then tell me all about it. I want to help!"

Her dry eyes filled with tears as she yielded the baby to me.

"You dear!" she murmured. "Miss Hardie, I hoped you loved me, and now I know you do!"

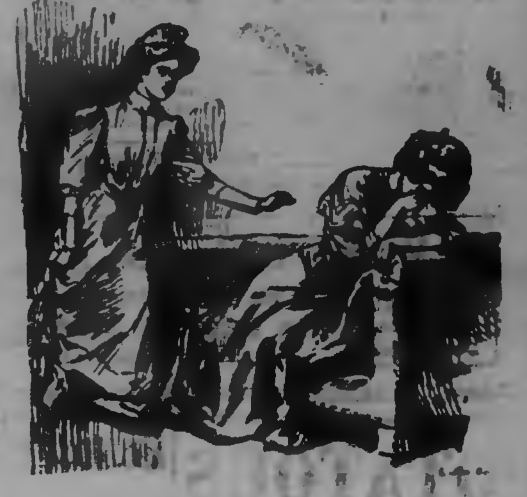
We talked together quietly for a long time. She told me that Mr. Todd had been married before—to her own sister. That was when Elsie was only six years old. Then, when she was but seven, she was left an orphan, with no near relatives save only this married sister, in whose home she found a welcome refuge. When Elsie was thirteen her sister died, but Elsie and her old nurse stayed on in her brother-in-law's house, quite as though she were the daughter of it. And there Elsie grew up, looking upon Hugh as her guardian and natural protector and he regarding her as his ward, a precious bequest from his wife. That relationship continued between them until a little more than a year ago. Then there was a subtle change. Hugh knew what it was, but kept his knowledge to himself, hoping that she would not understand.

But her nurse's sudden death brought things to a climax. Then, with no one to chaperon her, he felt that he could not let her live under the same roof with him, and told her he was going to send her to a distant cousin of hers in Scotland, and he told her why. The thought of separation from him was intolerable to her. He had been father and mother to her, and now she knew that he was sweetheart, too, and she could not go away and put him out of her life.

He tried to reason with her, tried to get her to travel without him for a few months, until he could join her in America, and then he would marry her, but she, who had always been so docile, would not listen to him, and in desperation, against his own better judgment, he consented to let her remain, and they were married at once in a little out of the way place by a strange clergyman who knew nothing about their antecedents. Morally this ceremony was binding, but legally it had no force, for in England at that time a man might not marry his deceased wife's sister. And so they had to keep their wedding a secret.

When Elsie reached this point a light began to dawn upon me, and presently she made everything clear to me.

When it became imperative that he should proclaim to the world that she had a right to bear his name he sent her with friends to this country, then announced his intention of marrying her and followed her a fortnight later, going through a second ceremony with her the day of his landing in New York and sending notices of it to the London papers. That was in January, and all would have been well if they could have put off their return to England for another six months, but Mr. Todd's unexpected recall upset all their calculations.



I FOUND HER IN A LITTLE HUDDLED HEAP.

"We—can't—explain," Elsie sobbed. "If we said she was a premature baby nobody would believe it—she is such a fine healthy girl! Hugh doesn't care for himself, but he couldn't bear to have me treated coldly, and, besides, for baby's sake, because of the inheritance laws or something we must never let anybody in England know our real wedding day. He says baby can't go home just yet, and I don't know what to do! Oh, I don't know what to do!"

I sat thinking.

"You cannot stay here with the baby for a few months?"

"I thought of that—but Hugh thinks I ought to go with him." She smiled faintly. "He says he'd worry about me as much as if I were a baby, too, if he left me behind."

"I wonder"——I began slowly, then stopped.

She leaned forward eagerly.

"Yes! dear Miss Hardie. Go on! Go on!"

Still I hesitated. I loved this little patient of mine, her baby had already pre-empted a large corner of my heart, but also I love the field of action. I am a nurse, not a nursery maid. Monotony is my deadly enemy. Could I stand to give up my work and simply devote myself to taking care of this baby? I pulled myself up roundly. They that put self first would better drop out of the nursing profession.

"Elsie," I said, "I think I shall spend the winter with my widowed sister in New Jersey. Will you let me have the baby to keep me company?"

Elsie laid her face against mine. I felt her tears upon my cheek.

"You dear!" she said, for a second time.

The Sentiment Among Old Engine Drivers.

NEW YORK, Saturday.

THERE is a vast deal of sentiment among the motormen of the elevated trains of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company who, following the instalment of electricity, had to abandon their engines for motor cars. That some of the old men went so far as to quit the road entirely rather than doff the spotted garb of an engine driver for the spotless uniform of the motorman is a fact. That the majority of those who remained would willingly, after six years' experience as motormen, desert the cleanliness and quiet of the motor car for the excessive heat and eternal hubbub of their old engines is certain. That the mystery of electricity is an awful nightmare to most of them is as clear to the observer as that for them steam has no terror.

Some of the older fellows, in sheer desperation, drown their ill concealed sorrow in rash statements. They declare boldly that "there ain't no sentiment," and their eyes, brimful of it, add, "for publication." Others, a trifle less desperate, "s'pose there is a little sentiment." Still others, with no less desperate affection, but with a rational determination to meet calmly the inevitable, say frankly:—"There is sentiment among us; we don't deny it."

Of the 324 engine drivers who, under the old management, had regular eight hour runs over the elevated lines of Manhattan and the Bronx, the two oldest in point of service are Isaac N. Homan, who for the last ten years has "hauled" the supply train from one end of the road to the other every night of the week, and Joseph Sweeney, motorman on the Forty-second street short line, between the Grand Central Station and the Third avenue line.

Mr. Sweeney holds the record for continuous service on the road, having been in turn engine driver and motorman for thirty-two years without a break. Oddly enough, he, of all his companions, is most reconciled to the motor. The recollection of the delights of the engine is dimmed by the ever present conveniences of the motor car. He confesses, however, that for two or three years after the change the "hardships" of the new way were all but unendurable.

None of the former engine drivers is fuller of delightful sentiment in regard to the engine he was forced to give up than is Mr. Homan, who, except for one week in 1885, has served the road uninterruptedly for thirty-three years. None held his little twenty-ton engine in greater esteem; none felt at giving her up quite all that he within him felt. Yet when the change came he met it bravely and was among the first men who subjected themselves to the ordeal of "breaking in."

"Beyond question the former engine drivers of the Manhattan are men of sentiment," said Mr. Homan, a tall, slim, well knit man, with iron gray hair and mustache. "A person who has followed one pursuit for years is bound to have an affection for it. It is hard to break up a lifelong attachment of any sort. It is impossible for me to tear myself away from an association of engines—as you see!"

Mr. Homan had been sought at his home. He was found, by the direction of his wife, in conversation with a friend, an engine driver, beside a dilapidated stationary boiler in a miserable shanty over an excavation in an uptown street. He seemed to revel in the roaring fire, in the curling smoke and in the spitting steam from the exhaust pipe, and was not at all put out by the extreme heat.

"The original elevated road was called the West Side and Yonkers Railway, and it extended from Dey street to Twenty ninth," continued Mr. Homan, smiling at the absurdity of so big a name for so small a road. "The cars were propelled by an endless rope."

"By an endless rope!"

"Yes, by an endless rope. You exhibit surprise. I don't wonder. Few of the younger generation are informed of the fact. It is, I find, generally believed that engines were used from the very beginning. Not so; they were not thought of at first.

"I went to work for the road in 1876, when the engines were introduced to supplant the rope, and the name changed to the Manhattan Railway. The old method had become, because of the noise it made, obnoxious to residents along the line and the terror of horses in the street.

"There were then less than a dozen engines. I had No. 10. The first was called the Pioneer. It had an upright boiler. Three ordinary cars were hoisted from the street and coupled to the engine. This, with hand brakes, was the first train. From that time until they in turn were supplanted by the motor cars the little engines increased in number, size and efficiency.

"While I preferred my old engine and would rather have run her to the end of my days, I appreciated that I lived in an age of progress and realised that I must step along at a lively clip or be left behind, and when the change was ordered I jumped from the engine to the motor car without a murmur.

"Whether or not I left my heart behind is neither here nor there. The leap had to be taken.

"The motorman's duties certainly are easier than the engine driver's, and the surroundings, so far as cleanliness goes, are less objectionable. Nevertheless, experience—seven years' experience—has not lessened for me the pain of separation from the old companion nor reconciled me to the new."

Another motorman, older in years than Mr. Homan, but younger by a few months in the company's service, had not Mr. Homan's self-command. He was bitter through and through, and the cause of his bitterness undoubtedly lay in the fact that he did not and could not understand electricity and feared to handle a trainload of passengers depending, in a measure, upon him for safety.

"When you handle electricity without gloves," he said, sententiously, "you'll be able to tell what it is."

"An expert electrician—an expert, mind you—climbed a pole to fix a wire. He came down dead.

"I've got a son who is both an engine driver and an expert electrician. I ask him what is electricity, and he doesn't know. I ask him what is steam, and he tells me.

"As for sentiment, I don't believe there's much of that. It was 'up to' the engine drivers to take motor cars or get out. We put in as motormen the same number of hours we did as engine drivers, and our salary is neither more nor less."

Beneath this man's brusqueness of speech there was no lack of sentiment for his old engine. His eyes softened as he spoke of her sisters, and he is suspected of going surreptitiously to gaze upon those of them that are still stored in an elevated yard in the Bronx.

Another former engine driver, dressed in the neat blue and white striped suit of the motorman, said simply:—"I don't know about the men in general. For my part, I would rather run the old engine which I was forced to part company with than to sit in state in the finest motor car that was ever manufactured. We are, as motormen, thrown, to an extent, among the passengers, whereas, as engine drivers, we were alone. I suppose there is a great deal of sentiment among us. A man becomes attached to his engine."

Whatever excuse these big, hardy, jolly men of refined sentiment give for preferring to hang to their engines, the real reason with ten out of twelve of them is a peculiar, inalienable attachment for the greasy, noisy little creatures of iron with which, up to the time they were supplanted by the motor cars, every New Yorker and half the people of the United States as well were familiar. If they say, as many of them do, that a man who has for years been daily in proximity to a hot boiler finds the motor car cold in raw weather, it is safe to assume that the chill first touches the heart.

The discarded engines are put to various purposes. Lumber companies haul logs with them over short lines through heavy timber land. Surface railroads in undeveloped districts use them for light switching. Occasionally one is shipped to Europe.

Never in the history of the road, it is said, was an engine on the "L" responsible for the death of a passenger, and of this fact the former engine drivers are very proud.

"Can you say as much for the motor cars?" demanded a former engine driver, with a diabolical grin on his face. "No; you can't! And, between you and me, the killin' ain't all in the past, neither!"

After their release by the elevated company the engines were stored, pending final disposition, wherever space could be found for their accommodation. Most of them were huddled together in an elevated yard at 132d street and Willis avenue, in the Bronx, with tiny peaked iron caps over their smokestacks, like so many jacks in the pulpit, to keep the rain out—and many of them are there yet.

THE BUTCHER BIRD.

ENGLISH sparrows are regarded as a nuisance by many persons who look with complacency upon the advent of their enemy the butcher bird. It is a rare bird, known also as the shrike, but is usually called butcher bird, from its habit of keeping its dead prey in a sort of miniature meat market.

The writer recently heard a great outcry from the sparrows in his garden. A bird, in size and appearance resembling a mocking bird, but of more vigorous movement, had savagely seized upon a sparrow, thrown it upon the snow and, standing upon the sparrow's back, killed it with its beak by a rapid series of blows at the base of the brain. The butcher bird—for that it was—having made sure of the death of the sparrow, seized upon it and flew rapidly away. A few days afterward the butcher bird came again and killed another sparrow, and, becoming emboldened, at length located its "meat market" in the garden, with an evident intention of making a thorough extermination of the sparrows. It became so bold that it was possible to follow it around and notice its habits and methods.

It has been said to be the habit of this bird to use the large thorns of the thornbush for the purpose of impaling its collections of dead birds and insects. It was closely watched to see what it would do where there were no thornbushes.

It would kill a sparrow, carrying it away into a tree, only to return, kill another sparrow and carry it off to an orchard back of the garden. Some plum trees growing in the orchard possessed sharp spines almost equal to thorns, and it seemed possible that the butcher bird might endeavor to impale the dead bird on these thorns.

The thorns were too dull, however, but the bird was certainly far from dull and quite equal to the occasion. For, choosing a tree in which the small, stiff twigs separated at a narrow angle in sets of three, it would deftly punch its sparrow between the twigs, springing them apart so that the dead bird was held tightly. Thus with its neatly arranged little market of sparrows it proved itself fully entitled to its name of "butcher bird."

HANDSOME SILVER FOX SKIN

A Review representative had the pleasure this morning of seeing a magnificent pelt of that rare and valuable animal, the true silver fox. Chas. Blomfield, jr., bought it from an Indian in northern Quebec, who had trapped it still farther north. It was so perfectly cured as to be almost fit to put around the neck of the future buyer, although it is a large skin, being three feet six inches long, and about two feet wide, with a very bushy tail. Its value is probably $1,000.

CHEMONG BUS

Commencing Monday, June 21st, the Chemong bus will leave its own stables, 421 Water Street, at 7.45 a.m., and 3.45 p.m. daily, going by way of the National Hotel, Snowden House and Oriental Hotel, connecting with the Steamer Chemong. Always makes connection as boat waits for it.

A SMALL TRICK

A very small trick in a sporting sense was played this afternoon in a local store. In fact it is probably one of the meanest on record and in this respect is worthy of notice.

Two fellows matched nickels and the one that lost refused to pay. Anything smaller than this could not be seen with a microscope.

CASES AT THE COUNTY COURT

One Action Dismissed With Costs Yesterday—Assault Case Being Heard To-day

The action at the County Court yesterday of Howson vs the Peterborough and Saskatchewan Land Company was dismissed with costs. The plaintiff claimed compensation for his services for acting as secretary-treasurer of the company.

D. W. Dumble, K.C., represented the plaintiff and Mr. F. D. Kerr was counsel for the Saskatchewan Land Company.

The case of Craig and Chapman, who were sent up for trial by Magistrate Dumble as a result of an assault on George Grange at the Fire Hall several months ago, occupied all this morning. The witnesses who gave evidence at the trial at the Police Court were all examined, as was also the accused men. The case was given to the jury shortly after noon and a verdict is expected this afternoon.

Provincial Inspectors Place Evidence With Attorney General

Special to the Review.

Toronto, June 24.—Provincial Inspectors Greer and Miller have placed evidence in the hands of the Attorney, General that the gypsies rounded up at Peterborough came lately from United States and report will be sent to Ottawa with the request that they be deported, on the ground that they have not been residents two years in Canada.

PLEASURE SPOILED AT INVERLEA

Children's pleasure spoiled Inverlea

The new concrete wall at Inverlea Park may have succeeded in protecting the bank from the spring ice, but it has produced a state of affairs entirely unlooked for. At the north end it fits close in to the bank. At the south end it is some ten or twelve feet from shore. Between the wall and shore is a backwash, a still pool full of every conceivable nastiness which has done away with bathing for the children and has made the former pleasure of the parents or guardians' sitting on the bank watching their "care" an impossibility. Flies, insects, bugs, animals etc., of every conceivable variety and stench galore breed in this greenish-yellow backwash so that life in the vicinity is no longer a thing of beauty. The grass is allowed to grow a foot high and last, but not least, poison-ivy now clings in luxuriance around the trunks of trees. The north-enders are complaining bitterly about "the whole thing."

MORE PAGAN THAN CHINA?

More Pagan than china!!!!! !!

The Rev. J. Goforth, of China, who is conducting a mission in St. Paul's church, is not getting a very good impression of the Christianity of the people of Peterborough, if he is to judge by the attendance at the meetings. The mission is a union effort of the three Presbyterian congregations. The other denominations have also been invited to attend, and yet the meetings have been attended by very few. Mr. Goforth is one of the most honored missionaries in the foreign field. Indeed, judging by results, he is one of the greatest living missionaries. He has been the human instrument more than any other in the great revival which has recently swept over China. The Presbyterian church freed Mr. Goforth from his regular missionary work some time ago, that he might devote himself altogether to evangelistic work among the Chinese mission fields. Wherever he has gone throughout China multitudes have flocked to hear him, and his preaching and work have resulted in a marvellous revival, which was the means of thousands of conversions.

Mr Goforth is on furlough. Instead of taking a much-needed rest he has decided to hold a series of missions in Canada. Peterborough is the first he has held. He wants to see if the people of Canada are as anxious to hear the Gospel as they are in China. So far the response has not been encouraging. The Christians in China, it would seem, are more anxious for the glory of God than they are in Peterborough. They are "more zealous more prayer-loving, more Bible-loving, more Christ-loving." If the response is not such as he hoped, he intends going back to China.

The meetings all along have been characterized by great power, and it is said that if only Christian people had placed themselves under the influence of his teaching Peterborough would have witnessed a mighty revival. His mission is altogether to Christians, rather than the unsaved. He feels what Rev. Mr. Moody felt his last years of life, that the most important thing in evangelistic effort is to get the church right. If this is accomplished everything else will follow. The meetings will continue every day this week at 3.30 and 8 o'clock p.m.

The Review is pleased to accede to the request to make known the worth of Rev. Mr. Goforth.

THE PERILS OF THE CARELESS

In common with several other philanthropic organizations, the National Council of Women is interested in the white slave traffic. Country girls and girls from foreign countries are the victims of this villainous traffic. The girls are usually not attempted, but inveigled into a life of immorality by fraud or driven into it by force. Agents are stationed at ports of entry to watch the arrivals and spot girls who are not accompanied by relatives. They are approached and told that they will be employed in laundries, factories and shops. A fake marriage, or even a real marriage is sometimes used as bait. When the girl once enters the house of the person engaged in the traffic, she is practically a prisoner. She is made to feel that her reputation is already gone, and that she may as well make the best of the situation. Her surrender under these conditions is an act of despair, not an easy yielding to temptation.

Often a country girl who has been entrapped will beg that her name may be concealed from her parents. One says; "My mother thinks I am studying in a stenographic school." Another has made her parents believe that she is employed in a departmental store and she sometimes sends them a little money to keep up the illusion.

A Toronto minister relates a story of his effort to rescue from a disreputable house two girls of respectable parentage, who had been mislead as to the character of the house. By his aid they were rescued, but the danger remains for all young women entering the city as strangers, and ignorant of the character of houses and localities.

The United States District Attorney for Chicago says he would warn every mother in the country not to allow her daughter to go to the city except under the guardianship of a trustworthy woman. The evil is of great proportions and must be fought by the united efforts of social reformers.

WEDDING BELLS

McMURRY—MOHER.

A pretty wedding took place on Tuesday at nine o'clock in St. Joseph's church, when Miss Aggie Moher, one of Douro's most popular young ladies, and Mr. Frank McMurray of the same parish were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bridesmaid was Miss Loretta Moher, sister of the bride, while Mr. Thomas McMurry, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. The bride looked charming in a suit of white satin trimmed with oriental lace, and she wore a large white hat, daintily trimmed with a wreath of white blossoms. She carried a handsome bouquet of white and pink roses and carnations. The bridesmaid wore a beautiful cream dress trimmed with lace, and a white hat tastefully trimmed with pale blue flowers.

As the bridal party entered the church the organist, Miss May Allen, a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Keilty in the presence of the bride and the groom's most intimate friends. After the ceremony the young couple with their most intimate friends and well-wishers, drove to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Moher, where all heartily enjoyed a sumptuous wedding breakfast. Over one hundred invited guests were present. The wedding gifts, which were numerous, were beautiful and costly. The young couple will reside in Douro, where their large circle of friends wish them a long and happy life together.

BALL TOSSER'S CORNER

FIELDING RECORDS

The number of opponents if any put out by each player shall be set down in the fourth column. Where the batsman is given out by the umpire for a foul strike, or fails to bat in proper order, or is declared out on third strike bunt, the put out shall be scored to the catcher.

In case of the base runner being declared out for interference, running out of line or on an infield fly the out shall be credited to the play, or who would have made the play, but for the action of the baserunner on the anouncement of the umpire.

The number of times cif any, each player assists in putting out an opponent shall be set down in the fifth column.

An assist should be given to each player who handles the ball in aiding in a run but or in any other play of the kind except the one who compells it.

The New York Giants have won every Wednesday game they played this year. The McGraw aggregation has been up against some tough propositions on Wednesdays but always came out ahead.

A pitcher may have a "world of speed" and curves and perfect control. Al. these qualities are necessary assets to a good pitcher. But what will they all avail if a pitcher cannot field his position.

Games are lost every day because a pitcher is unable to field his position. He can get along fairly well when the team behind him can hit the opposing pitcher but when it can't, all that he puts over the plate may go for nothing.

Dubby Shea was catching good ball before Freddie Minnes returned, especially in view of the fact that he played the infield all last year. Now that he became broken in for the receivnig department again, he has had to move out to the red-hot corner of the diamond and it is a safe prediction Dubby will have some errors but he will put up a grand article of ball anywhere. His hitting is generally timely and heavy.—Hamilton Spectator.

WILL LONGBOAT BEAT ALF. SHRUBB

Indian's Handlers are Confident That the Indian Will Win Saturday

"Take it from me, Tommy Longboat is again the runner Canada idolized in 1907," said Sol Mintz yesterday. "What he could have done to Frank Nebrich at Buffalo, Monday, was a shame if he had tried, but he merely raced along behind him and beat him on end. And I want to tell you Nebrich is faster than he ever was. They were out to beat Tom. Alf. Shrubb was over there a week before coaching Nebrich, and the result was that Nebrich ran away with those familiar short spurts of Shrubb's. Every once in a while he would cut loose a sharp dash. Tommy would let him go for a while and then cut him down with a steady pace. Alf Shrubb was referee, and to me he seemed very much disappointed that the Indian was not beaten. Candidly, I think he is afraid he won't last the route at the pace Tommy will show him. Tommy says he won't let him get an inch away, no matter how fast he goes, and his 4.52 mile with Chuck Skene makes it look as if Shrubb will not be able to get away, no matter how far he steps out at first. A 4.50 mile won't phease the Indian now. I'm taking 2 to 1 money from Shrubb supporters."

SPORTING NOTES

Packey McFarland, the Chicago lightweight, last night announced the selection of Hugh Carrigan of Davenport as his new manager, to succeed Harry Gilmour of Chicago.

Art. Edmunds, of Toronto, won a tough bout from Kelly, of Buffalo, on a decision Friday night. The police stopped the bout in the fourth.

Longboat and Shrubb have at last fixed up their differences and the last of their three races is to be run on Saturday June 26 at Hanlan's Point. Longboat won their race over the Marathon distance and Shrubb carried off the honors at 15 miles. Now comes the 20 mile race and with both men in condition it will be a hummer.

Robert Kerr, the Canadian sprinter won the 100 yards invitation race at Stamford Bridge on Saturday beating Watson by a foot in 10 2-5 seconds. At the last moment Kerr decided not to compete in the 100 yards handicap.

SPORTING TALK

Oklahoma City, Okla., June 22.—Battling Nelson knocked out Jack Clifford to-night in the fifth round of what was to have been a twenty-round bout. From the first it was apparent that Nelson outclassed his opponent and the Dane appeared to have the battle won before it began.

Nelson made no effort to block his opponent's punches, but waded in and coldly beat his man down.

TURF

Dr. Johnston has purchased Harry Direct from the Cottingham estate. Harry Direct is a fast stepper and under the doctor's direction should be able to tear off the miles in the most approved form.

WELL GROOMED WOMEN.

For, After All, Nature Hasn't Done Much For Them.

An Englishwoman writing in the Queen declares that she considers Nature very much overrated in the matter of taste.

"For instance," says the lady, "it is perfectly evident that Nature considers the ideal color for human hair to be that of a potato. Suggest to her the charm of auburn, gold or midnight locks and she says in effect:

"'Pooh! Give me a good durable shade like potato brown!'

"So she proceeds to give it to us.

"Straight hair too! Wavy hair is more becoming to ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, yet I suppose not one woman in a thousand has real, naturally wavy hair. Nature likes a shiny nose. Not Venus herself would look well with a shiny nose, yet life's pathway would be illuminated by countless millions of them if we left the matter to Nature.

"When it comes to our attitude or carriage, how many of us would not stoop if we were simply natural? Our arboreal ancestors probably stooped frightfully. Our feet! Theories to the contrary notwithstanding, I assert that running about without shoes spoils the beauty of one's feet.

"Though nobody thinks less of a small waist than I do, I assert that if I had a waist of more than twenty-five inches I should look dowdy unless it was round. The lucky possessor of an absolutely round waist may have one of twenty-five inches and still appear to measure only eighteen.

"Nothing can be more beautiful than an absolutely lovely, natural woman—a woman with perfect skin and hair, features and figure, a woman for whom Nature has done everything at her very best—but how often do you find her? Once in a million times perhaps.

"As for most of us, we want our hair, even if abundant, to be coaxed into brilliance and form; we want our possibly natural teeth carefully preserved and kept clean. The same with our skin. We want to be taught to walk and dance and hold ourselves properly, to wear the right stays, the right boots, the right clothes. We want our color instinct and our general taste trained; we want to be taught in youth not to talk through our noses or out of our boots, not to laugh too loud or in an unfortunately acquired manner. We want to be taught to take care of our nails—the nail left to Nature does Nature but scant justice. In short, we require civilization where our appearances are concerned if we are to be fit to look at."

BEAUTY HINTS.

Many nervous women find that they can sleep better if they take a bran bath just before retiring.

Every time you pick up something from the floor let the bending come absolutely from the hips and not the knees. This exercise will make the waist supple.

One cannot have a pretty hand if the fingers are broad at the tips. Pressing down on the ends of the fingers from the first joint to the tip will, if done many times a day, remedy this defect.

Any exercise that works muscles and chords about the stomach promotes digestion, and for this reason specialists at foreign baths strongly recommend that no person shall sit immediately after eating.

Love's Language.

It was the morning of that fearsome, uncertain day on which the bonds were to be made fast, where a tiny path yet leads back, when each tries to peer into the future and wonders and doubts and hesitates.

They were alone, and she drew near him, aware and watchful.

"Harold, dearest, in a few hours it will all be over. Can you grasp it all? But did you dream of me last night?"

"Yes, ownest. I saw you as a black, marvelous swan, drifting placidly all alone on a mirrored lake, with here and there a flat, floating leaf. And then I, a humble, joyous swan, too, began to float out to you. And my soul took fire, dearest, and I thrilled all over as you swung superbly around, and I wished to be a poet, with a living, passionate pen, and I wished myself an earth god and that a raging wind would swoop down upon you that I might seize you in my arms and defy the storm god. And I could smell sweet incense and hear the tinkling of innumerable bells and could feel the delirium of a burning heart, and again I wished to be a poet that I might sing"—

"But, Harold, do you really love me?"

He paused, breathed deep and poured out his soul. "Yes, dearest, I think you are it."

And then she held up her vibrant lips, confident, satisfied.—Puck.

Radium and Vaccine.

An Italian physician who exposed fresh vaccine virus to the emanations of radium for varying periods and then made use of it in vaccinating children found that there was no effect on the action of the virus produced by the exposure to the rays, but that the pustules produced by the virus were entirely free from any septic suppuration. There was no inflammatory area and no fever. He finds that this is an efficient method of purifying vaccine virus, but on account of the expense of radium not one that can be commonly followed.—Il Policlinico.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 23.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, the offerings this morning amounted to 450 steers, 100 cows, 50 bulls, 300 sheep, 100 lambs, 700 hogs and 1200 calves. Altho the weather was exceedingly hot, the gathering of buyers was large, and, as they were all somewhat short of supplies of beef for the balance of the week, on account of the large number of strangers being in town, which has tended to increase the consumption considerably, the demand for all classes of cattle was good, and, considering the increased offerings and the unfavorable weather for keeping stock, quite an active trade was done, and prices were well maintained. There was no demand for export account, owing to the fact that there was no suitable stock on the market. Choice stall-fed steers sold at 6¾c to 6½c; good at 5¾c to 6c; top quality grassers brought 5¾c, and medium 4¾c to 5¼c; good cows sold at 4c to 4½c, and common at 3c to 3¾c. Choice bulls brought 5c to 5¼c, and lower grades 4¼c to 4¾c per lb. Supplies of small meats were considerably larger than usual, for which there was a good demand and an active trade was done, with no change in prices to note. Sheep sold freely at 3¾c to 4c per lb. Lambs brought from $3 to $6 each, as to size. Demand for calves was brisk, and, as some of them were of extra choice quality, higher prices were paid for them. Sales were made at $20 to $22 each for top grades, and the commoner ones sold at from $3 to $8 each. The quality of the hogs offered was inferior, and the top price realized for them was $8 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the offerings of live stock this morning consisted of 225 cattle, 80 sheep and lambs, 125 hogs and 1025 calves. A fairly active trade was done in all lines on account of the somewhat scarcity of stock earlier in the week, and the fact that the consumption this week is somewhat larger than usual, notwithstanding the hot weather. The undertone to the market was firm, and prices show no material change. Sales of choice stall-fed steers were made at 6¼c to 6½c; good at 6c to 6¼c, and grassers ranged from 3c to 5¾c per lb. Sheep sold at 3¾c to 4c per lb. Lambs brought from $3 to $6 each, and calves from $3 to $10 each, as to quality. The market for hogs was strong, on account of the small offerings, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.75 to $8.85 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Cattle Disease Curable.

He was able to assure the people that an expenditure not exceeding 15 to 20 cents per animal was in the power of the farmer to practically stamp out the disease, which for 25 years has caused very considerable loss.

CHAPTER XXI.

I INDULGED in some very serious thoughts after Mr. Grey's departure. A fact was borne in upon me to which I had hitherto closed my prejudiced eyes, but which I could no longer ignore, whatever confusion it brought or however it caused me to change my mind on a subject which had formed one of the strongest bases to the argument by which I had sought to save Mr. Durand. Miss Grey cherished no such distrust of her father as I in my ignorance of their relations had imputed to her in the early hours of my ministrations. This you have already seen in my account of their parting. Whatever his dread, fear or remorse, there was no evidence that she felt toward him anything but love and confidence. But love and confidence from her to him were in direct contradiction to the doubts I had believed her to have expressed in the half written note handed to Mrs. Fairbrother in the alcove. Had I been wrong, then, in attributing this scrawl to her? It began to look so. Though forbidden to allow her to speak on the one tabooed subject, I had wit enough to know that nothing would keep her from it if the fate of Mrs. Fairbrother occupied any real place in her thoughts.

Yet when the opportunity was given me one morning of settling this fact beyond all doubt I own that my main feeling was one of dread. I feared to see this article in my creed destroyed, lest I should lose confidence in the whole. Yet conscience bade me face the matter boldly, for had I not boasted to myself that my one desire was the truth?

I allude to the disposition which Miss Grey showed on the morning of the third day to do a little surreptitious writing. You remember that a specimen of her handwriting had been asked for by the inspector, and once had been earnestly desired by myself. Now I seemed likely to have it, if I did not open my eyes too widely to the meaning of her seemingly chance requests. A little pencil dangled at the end of my watch chain. Would I let her see it, let her hold it in her hand for a minute? It was so like one she used to have. Of course I took it off, of course I let her retain it a little while in her hand. But the pencil was not enough. A few minutes later she asked for a book to look at—I sometimes let her look at pictures. But the book bothered her—she would look at it later; would I give her something to mark the place—that postal over there. I gave her the postal. She put it in the book and I, who understood her thoroughly, wondered what excuse she would now find for sending me into the other room. She found one very soon, and with a heavily beating heart I left her with that pencil and postal. A soft laugh from her lips drew me back. She was holding up the postal.

"See! I have written a line to him! Oh, you good, good nurse, to let me! You needn't look so alarmed. It hasn't hurt me one bit."

I knew that it had not; knew that such an exertion was likely to be more beneficial than hurtful to her, or I should have found some excuse for deterring her. I endeavored to make my face more natural. As she seemed to want me to take the postal in my hand I drew near and took it.

"The address looks very shaky," she laughed. "I think you will have to put it in an envelope."

I looked at it—I could not help it—her eye was on me, and I could not even prepare my mind for the shock of seeing it like or totally unlike the writing of the warning. It was totally unlike; so distinctly unlike that it was no longer possible to attribute those lines to her which, according to Mr. Durand's story, had caused Mrs. Fairbrother to take off her diamond.

"Why, why!" she cried. "You actually look pale. Are you afraid the doctor will scold us? It hasn't hurt me nearly so much as lying here and knowing what he would give for one word from me."

"You are right, and I am foolish," I answered with all the spirit left in me. "I should be glad—I am glad that you have written these words. I will copy the address on an envelope and send it out in the first mail."

"Thank you," she murmured, giving me back my pencil with a sly smile. "Now I can sleep. I must have roses in my cheeks when papa comes home."

And she bade fair to have ruddier roses than myself, for conscience was working havoc in my breast. The theory I had built up with such care, the theory I had persisted in urging upon the inspector in spite of his rebuke, was slowly crumbling to pieces in my mind with the falling of one of its main pillars. With the warning unaccounted for in the manner I have stated, there was a weakness in my argument which nothing could make good. How could I tell the inspector, if ever I should be so happy or so miserable as to meet his eye again. Humiliated to the dust, I could see no worth now in any of the arguments I had advanced. I flew from one extreme to the other, and was imputing perfect probity to Mr. Grey and an honorable if mysterious reason for all his acts, when the door opened and he came in. Instantly my last doubt vanished. I had not expected him to return so soon.

He was glad to be back; that I could see, but there was no other gladness in him. I had looked for some change in his manner and appearance—that is, if he returned at all but the one I saw was not a cheerful one, even after he had approached his daughter's bedside and found her greatly improved. She noticed this and scrutinized him strangely. He dropped his eyes and turned to leave the room, but was stopped by her loving cry; he came back and leaned over her.

"What is it, father? You are fatigued, worried"

"No, no; quite well," he hastily assured her. "But you are you as well as you seem?"

"Indeed yes. I am gaining every day. See, see! I shall soon be able to sit up. Yesterday I read a few words."

He started, with a side glance at me which took in a table near by on which a little book was lying.

"Oh, a book!"

"Yes, and—and Arthur's letters."

The father flushed, lifted himself, patted her arm tenderly and hastened into another room.

Miss Grey's eyes followed him longingly, and I heard her give utterance to a soft sigh. A few hours before this would have conveyed to my suspicious mind deep and mysterious meanings, but I was seeing everything now in a different light, and I found myself no longer inclined either to exaggerate or to misinterpret these little marks of filial solicitude. Trying to rejoice over the present condition of my mind, I was searching in the hidden depths of my nature for the patience of which I stood in such need when every thought and feeling were again thrown into confusion by the receipt of another communication from the inspector in which he stated that something had occurred to bring the authorities round to my way of thinking and that the test with the stiletto was to be made at once.

Could the irony of fate go further? I dropped the letter half read, querying if it were my duty to let the inspector know of the flaw I had discovered in my own theory before I proceeded with the attempt I had suggested when I believed in its complete soundness. I had not settled the question when I took the letter up again. Rereading its opening sentence, I was caught by the word "something." It was a very indefinite one, yet was capable of covering a large field. It must cover a large field or it could not have produced such a change in the minds of these men, conservative from principle and in this instance from discretion. I would be satisfied with that word "something" and quit further thinking. I was weary of it. The inspector was now taking the initiative, and I was satisfied to be his simple instrument and no more.

Arrived at this conclusion, however, I read the rest of the letter. The test was to go on, but under different conditions. It was no longer to be made at my own discretion and in the upstairs room; it was to be made at luncheon hour and in Mr. Grey's private dining room, where, if by any chance Mr. Grey found himself outraged by the placing of this notorious weapon beside his plate, the blame could be laid on the waiter, who, mistaking his directions, had placed it on Mr. Grey's table when it was meant for Inspector Dalzell's, who was lunching in the adjoining room. It was I, however, who was to do the placing. With what precautions and under what circumstances will presently appear.

Fortunately the hour set was very near; otherwise I do not know how I could have endured the continued strain of gazing on my patient's sweet face, looking up at me from her pillow, with a shadow over its beauty which had not been there before her father's return.

And that father! I could hear him pacing the library floor with a restlessness that struck me as being strangely akin to my own inward anguish of impatience and doubt. What was he dreading? What was it I had seen darkening his face and disturbing his manner when from time to time he pushed open the communicating door and cast an anxious glance our way, only to withdraw again without uttering a word? Did he realize that a crisis was approaching, that danger menaced him, and from me? No, not the latter, for his glance never strayed to me, but rested solely on his daughter. I was therefore not connected with the disturbance in his thoughts. As far as that was concerned, I could proceed fearlessly; I had not him to dread, only the event. That I did dread, as any one must who saw Miss Grey's face during these painful moments and heard that restless tramp in the room beyond.

At last the hour struck the hour at which Mr. Grey always descended to lunch. He was punctuality itself, and under ordinary circumstances I could depend upon his leaving the room within five minutes of the stroke of 1. But would he be as prompt today? Was he in the mood for luncheon? Would he go downstairs at all? Yes, for the tramp, tramp stopped. I heard him approaching his daughter's door for a last look in and managed to escape just in time to procure what I wished and reach the room below before he came.

My opportunity was short, but I had time to see two things: first, that the location of his seat had been changed so that his back was to the door leading into the adjoining room; secondly, that this door was ajar. The usual waiter was in the room and showed no surprise at my appearance, I having been careful to have it understood that hereafter Miss Grey's appetite was to be encouraged by having her soup served from her father's table by her father's own hands, and that I should be there to receive it.

"Mr. Grey is coming," said I, approaching the waiter and handing him the stiletto loosely wrapped in tissue paper. "Will you be kind enough to place this at his plate, just as it is? A man gave it to me for Mr. Grey; said we were to place it there."

The waiter, suspecting nothing, did as he was bidden, and I had hardly time to catch up the tray laden with dishes, which I saw awaiting me on a side table, when Mr. Grey came in and was ushered to his seat.

The soup was not there, but I advanced with my tray and stood waiting—not too near, lest the violent beating of my heart should betray me. As I did so the waiter disappeared and the door behind us opened. Though Mr. Grey's eye had fallen on the package, and I saw him start, I darted one glance at the room thus disclosed and saw that it held two tables. At one the inspector and some one I did not know sat eating. At the other a man alone, whose back was to us all and who seemingly was entirely disconnected with the interests of this tragic moment. All this I saw in an instant—the next my eyes were fixed on Mr. Grey's face.

He had reached out his hand to the package, and his features showed an emotion I hardly understood.

"What's this?" he murmured, feeling it with wonder, I should almost say anger. Suddenly he pulled off the wrapper, and my heart stood still in expectancy. If he quailed and how could he help doing so if guilty?—what a doubt would be removed from my own breast, what an impediment from police action! But he did not quail. He simply uttered an exclamation of intense anger and laid the weapon back on the table without even taking the precaution of covering it up. I think he muttered an oath, but there was no fear in it, not a particle.

My disappointment was so great, my humiliation so unbounded, that, forgetting myself in my dismay, I staggered back and let the tray with all its contents slip from my hands. The crash that followed stopped Mr. Grey in the act of rising. But it did something more. It awoke a cry from the adjoining room which I shall never forget. While we both started and turned to see from whom this grievous sound had sprung, a man came stumbling toward us with his hands before his eyes and this name wild on his lips:

"Grizel! Grizel!"

Mrs. Fairbrother's name, and the man—

I staggered back and let the tray with all its contents slip from my hands.

CHAPTER XXII.

WAS he Wellgood? Sears? Who? A lover of the woman certainly. That was borne in on us by the passion of his cry:

"Grizel! Grizel!"

But how here? And why such fury in Mr. Grey's face and such amazement in that of the inspector?

This question was not to be answered offhand. Mr. Grey, advancing, laid a finger on the man's shoulder. "Come," said he, "we will have our conversation in another room."

The man, who in dress and appearance looked oddly out of place in those gorgeous rooms, shook off the stupor into which he had fallen and started to follow the Englishman. A waiter crossed their track with the soup for our table. Mr. Grey motioned him aside.

"Take that back," said he. "I have some business to transact with this gentleman before I eat. I'll ring when I want you."

Then they entered where I was. As the door closed I caught sight of the inspector's face turned earnestly toward me. In his eyes I read my duty and girded up my heart, as it were, to meet—what? In that moment it was impossible to tell.

Gowns and Grace in Bowing.

It is said that King Edward has signified his disapproval of the directoire gown not upon the ground that it implies an artificial deformity of the body, but because it interferes with the depth and the grace of the courtesy. The king is an admirer of the full, old fashioned bow, and he dislikes a costume that gives rigidity to the figure and makes everything beyond a slight bend impossible.

THE FEDERATION OF FRENCH-CANADIAN RACE; THE CONGRESS MEETS AT MONTREAL

French-Canadians of the U. S. and Canada Looking to Union—A Great Future for the United Race—A Record Procession to Follow.

The heat which Montreal is experiencing to-day did not prevent the members of the French-Canadian Congress from spending three hours on committee work this morning at the Montreal National. Of course, the temperature is nothing to be compared with the enthusiasm with which the delegates gathered in Montreat from all parts of Canada and the United States are performing their voluntary duties.

Two different committees were working this morning, one presided over by Rev. Dean Lepailleur, of Mile End, being engaged in the study of the details of the administration and direction of the proposed federation, while the other one, of which Rev. Father P. C. Gauthier, an Acadian, priest was chairman, was dealing with the by-laws of the association. Both committees succeeded in getting through their entire programme during the morning session and will report to the Congress this afternoon.

Delegates from all parts of the continent are still arriving in Montreal, and if the weather conditions are favorable it is safe to say that the St. Jean Baptiste procession to be held to-morrow will be the biggest parade of the kind seen in the Canadian metropolis.—Montreal Star.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT "THE GROVE" SCHOOL LAKEFIELD

This most excellent "preparatory" school for boys held its closing exercises last night, Rev. Alex. MacKenzie, headmaster, being in the chair. Wherever "the English language is spoken" Mackenzie's School is becoming known. There was a very large attendance of friends of the school. Amongst those from a distance were Mrs. Zwicker, Nova Scotia; Mrs. Lionel Clarke, Toronto; Mrs. Edwards, Lindsay; Miss Sweeney, Chicago, U.S.; Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Hatton, Grenada, West Indies; Miss Lundy, Peterborough.

The "dux" prize was won by John Sidney Smith, son of J. Smith, K. C., of Stratford.

The medal presented by Mrs. Hamilton, of "Auburn," Peterborough, was won by Homer Zwinker. The "Rev. Dr. Langfeldt" medal was won by Esmond Clarke, son of Mr. L. H. Clarke, Toronto. The "R. Miles Hamilton" medal for athletics was won by Walter Perram, of New York City. Amongst those who addressed the audience were Professor MacKenzie, of Toronto University (brother of the headmaster); Major McLaughlin, of Bowmanville; Mr. Comber, of Bobcaygeon, and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt. The school has now two ex-pupils in the Canadian navy, John Barron and Percy Nelles.

Interest in the Island of Ceylon has been quickened to a remarkable extent by the phenomenal success of "Salada" Tea. Naturally everyone is anxious to know more about the country that produces such a delightful and delicious beverage.

THIS WELL-KNOWN ADVOCATE STATES

His Doctor Advised Him to Take Dodd's Kidney Pills,

And He Found Them to be all They were Advertised How and Why Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure.

Montreal, Que., June 23.—Special.—"Dodd's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by our family physician, and I must say they have proved to be what they were advertised."

This statement made by L. J. R. Hubert, the well-known advocate, of 214 James street, is a double tribute to Dodd's Kidney Pills. It shows that they are recognized by reputable medical men as a peerless remedy for diseases of the Kidneys and also that they are now looked upon as a standard medicine by the best people in Canada.

And the reason of this is that they do just what they are advertised to do. They cure diseased Kidneys and put them in condition to clear all impurities out of the blood. They cure Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Backache because these are Kidney diseases. They cure Rheumatism, Lumbago and Heart Disease, because these are cured by impurities in the blood that the Kidneys would strain out of the blood if they were in good working order. If you haven't used them yourself, ask your neighbors about Dodd's Kidney Pills.

MAJOR YOUNG CONGRATULATED ON BATTERY'S RECORD MARCH

Men Arrived Fresh and Trim After Fast Travel—24th Well Received by Cobourg Citizens—The News From the Camp.

Camp, Cobourg,
June 22nd, 1909.

The 24th Battery, C.F.A., left Peterborough to route march for their annual training at Cobourg, at 7.45 Three halts were made before arriving at Bailieboro to water the horses, and on arrival at that place forage and food were served to the horses at a beautiful grove. Two hours were spent there for a rest, as both horses and men were feeling like spring chickens. The ammunition food for the men was served by the only "Tom" Hooper, who dished it up in his usual good style. On arrival at Camp Cobourg the battery was met by Col. Macnachtan and staff. The Colonel congratulated Major Young upon having made the record march of Canada, they not expecting the 24th Battery until midnight. The next morning bright and early men and horses were ready for drill and looking fine after their long march of forty miles. Considering the dusty and hilly roads, it certainly redounds to the credit of the battery in the way they obeyed their O.C's commands. On the very steep hills the horses on the heavy guns never for a moment faltered, and got to Cobourg in first-class style. Not a man or a horse quit every man was well pleased and did not feel an effects from the long march and at five o'clock the next morning at roll call there was not an absentee. The people of Cobourg were greatly surprised at the appearance of the 24th, as it was thought that they would be pretty well tired out. All are being treated splendidly by the citizens at large, and the weather is fine. The parade grounds are situated next to the steel works, and and meets all requirements.

Sad to relate, four of the men were before the Major this morning for not behaving as they should. Two secured two days C.B. and the others were remanded until this afternoon. Gun laying is the order for this afternoon, and all are well and working hard to keep up the reputation of the battery. Sergt. Batten is more than pleased with the horses and he, with his superior officer, V. L. Lieut. Rogers, is doing all possible for their welfare.

CLOSING CONCERT AT THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

A splendid concert was given last night at the Conservatory Music Hall at the closing of the Conservatory's fifth season. Miss Winnifred Parker the gifted Toronto elocutionist and Mr. Andrew Ross Love, a lyric tenor with an excellent voice and remarkably good expression were cordially received by the audience. It is of interest to know that owing to the expansion of the Conservatory course Miss Parker and Mr. Love will be on the teaching staff next season.

Last night they were repeatedly recalled and made a most favorable impression.

The Conservatory orchestra of thirty-five pieces played with splendid effect and the organization is a credit to the direction of Mr. Gliddon and speaks much for the musicianly attainments of its members. The duo for two pianos played by Mrs Hodgson and Misses Starke, Hawkey and McGill was thoroughly appreciated.

Miss Mabel McCaw acted most acceptably as accompanist.

The programme was as follows;

Mendelssohn — War March from Athalia; Conservatory Orchestra.

Thos Hood—The Song of the Shirt, Miss Winnifred Parker.

Handel—Where Ere You Walk; Mr. Andrew Ross Love.

Gounod— Grand Selection from Faust Orchestra.

Smiley—Why She Fainted — Miss Winnifred Parker.

Tosti—For Ever and Ever; Mr Andrew Ross Love.

Von Weber—2 pianos: Der Freischutz; Mrs Hodgson, Misses Starke, Hawkey and McGill.

Shakespeare — Scene from Macbeth, Miss Winnifred Parker.

Bunning— Sunshine; Mr. Andrew Ross Love.

Meacham— American Patrol —Conservatory Orchestra.

Miss Mabel McCaw, Accompanist.

WILL BE INTERPRETER AT GYPSY HEARING MONDAY

The Crown authorities have found an interpreter for the hearing of the gypsies on Monday, in the person of Dr. Pelkey, who is here in the interests of the great Pacific Medicine Company, of Ottawa. He was up at the court house to-day transacting some business with the county treasurer, when he was pressed into service for the above capacity.

Dr. Pelkey spent fifteen years in Mexico, and says that the class rounded up here are known as greasers in the southland and are the commonest people in that part of the continent. They talk a kind of Italian patois, and while some of them can handle English to some extent, the majority of them do not know it well enough to to give intelligent utterance in our tongue.

KICKED BY HORSE, MAY LOSE SIGHT OF HIS LEFT EYE

As the result of being kicked by a horse in the left eye John Manley may lose the sight of that member. Manley who is employed on the farm of Mr. Bert McKee, Smith, was working around the stall the horse was in in the stable, when the animal kicked him and cut him very seriously around the eye.

Drs. McCullough and Greer attended the injured man and it required several stitches to close the cuts. Mr. Manley was removed to Nicholl's hospital last night.

GIFT FOR TRAVELER.

Nothing More Acceptable Than a Gray Suede Pocket.

If you have a friend who is about to start on a long journey you could make her no more acceptable parting gift than a safety pocket to be worn under the dress. In it can go extra money and jewels without fear of loss or robbers.

Such pockets can be made of many materials and in several different styles, but the following one will be found generally acceptable:

A pocket is made from gray suede or a piece of chamois eleven inches long, six inches wide at bottom and five inches at top. The bottom is rounded, and the top is cut square across.

Two pieces of leather are cut and the edges stitched together on the machine about halfway up. An inner pocket of stout gray cambric is sewed on the inside of the suede, the edges finished with nickel rims and a stout clasp.

One side of the leather is then cut shorter than the other, which folds down over the purse in a flap. This is fastened by snap clasps such as are used on gloves. One is sewed on each side of the flap for extra security.

On the underside of the case an extra piece of the leather or chamois is stitched to form a flat pocket. This is stitched up the center as well as on edges to form two narrow pockets for bills or jewels. A shallow flap is added, which also fastens with the snap clasps.

The finished pocket is stitched to two strips of gray belting, one at each edge. These in turn are stitched to a belt that fastens around the waist with a harness clasp. The lengthwise straps may be as long as is convenient, but five or six inches will usually be long enough to prevent the pocket interfering with the corset.

Roy Wilson was smothered to death by a cave in of a well he was digging near Thessalon.

CANADIANS DECORATED FIVE OFFICIALS HONORED

Hon. Sen. R. W. Scott, Former Secretary of State, Becomes Knight Bachelor—Edmund L. Newcombe and M. J. Butler Are C.M.G.'s.

London, June 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Royal "Birthday Honors" announced yesterday, include the following Canadians:

To be Knight Bachelor—Hon. R. W. Scott, C.M.G., former Secretary of State; still a member of the Senate.

To be Companion of St. Michael and St. George—Edmund Leslie Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice.

Matthew J. Butler, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, and member of the Intercolonial Railway Commission.

To receive the Imperial Service Order—Wm. John Gerald, Deputy Minister of Inland Revenue.

George Ross, Dominion superintendent of postoffices.

It will be observed that all the honors are conferred upon Government officials or employes, while all but one of the gentlemen reside in Ottawa.

The title of Knight Bachelor carries with it the prefix Sir. There is no decoration attached. Hon. Richard W. Scott, K.C., LL.D., upon whom it is conferred is one of Canada's grand old politicians. Born at Prescott, in 1825, he studied law in Toronto and was called to the bar in 1848. He was mayor of Ottawa in 1852, and elected to the Legislature in 1863 and 1867. In 1871 he was Speaker of the Legislature, and later commissioner of crown lands. In 1873 he joined the Mackenzie administration (Federal) and from 1874-8 was Secretary of State. In 1874 he was called to the Senate. In 1896 he was re-appointed Secretary of State, retiring previous to last year's general election. He was the author of the Scott Act temperance measure.

The order Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George is the third grade in that series. E. L. Newcombe, upon whom it has been conferred, was born at Cornwallis, N.S., in 1859; educated at Dalhousie College, and University of Halifax, and was called to the bar in 1883. ### Acreage Under Grain is Increasing at Phenomenal Rate and Condition for 1909 is Rated High—Last Year's Drouth Reduces Number of Farm Animals in Eastern Provinces.

Ottawa, June 25.—The census and statistics office has issued a report on the crops and live stock of Canada, as reported June 15. Wheat has a reported area of 7,750,000 acres, which is 1,140,000 acres more than last year. In the Maritime Provinces and Quebec there is little change, but in Ontario the area is less by 106,000 acres, of which 88,300 acres is fall wheat. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta show an area of 6,878,000 acres, being 1,264,000 acres more than last year.

The condition of fall wheat on June 15 was 82.15, and of spring wheat 92.15 per cent. of standard for a full crop.

The area of oats in the Dominion is 9,302,600 acres, which is 1,361,500 acres more than last year, and its condition is reported as 92.32 per cent.

Barley, the cereal crop next in importance, has a total area of 1,864,900 acres, or 119,200 acres more than last year, and its condition is 91.49 per cent.

Mixed grains, with 582,000 acres, and hay and clover, with 8,210,200 acres, are practically of the same extent as last year. The former has a reported condition of 91.71 and the latter of 90.36 per cent.

The province showing the largest area of oats is Ontario, with 3,142,300 acres, and also the largest area of hay and clover, with 3,535,600 acres. Quebec is next highest in hay and clover, with 2,923,600 acres. This province has also 1,574,100 acres in oats. Saskatchewan has 1,847,000 acres in oats. Saskatchewan has 1,847,000 acres in oats; Manitoba, 1,390,000 acres and Alberta, 820,000 acres.

At the end of June, 1906, there were 122,398 farms in the Province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and at the end of 1908 homesteads entered, less all cancellations, increased the number to 190,234, or by 10,853,760 acres. In Manitoba the net increase of the two and one-half years was 4,393; in Saskatchewan 41,423 acres, and in Alberta 22,020 acres, but these figures do not take account of farm lands purchased from railway companies and other corporations in the same period. The large increases in Saskatchewan have been made in the regions south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and in the eastern ranges of townships north of the railway.

The drouth of summer and autumn was less severe last year than in 1907, but it had the effect of again reducing the numbers of farm animals in the older provinces. In the whole of Canada, horses exceed the number of last year by 14,394, whilst milch cows are less by 68,449; other horned cattle by 245,057; sheep by 126,014 and swine by 457,349.

The largest falling off in the east occurred in Quebec and Ontario. In Quebec less milch cows by 28,317, other horned cattle by 45,705; sheep by 39,650 and swine by 81,294. In Ontario, horses are less by 38,018, milch cows by 41,268, other horned cattle by 144,665; sheep by 86,686 and swine by 361,613.

In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the number of horses is more this year than a year ago by 43,278, milch cows by 4,731 and sheep by 22,844. Horned cattle other than milch cows decreased in these provinces during the year by 34,482 and swine by 6,121.

A FOOLISH LAD KILLED

Chicago Youth Shot Attempting Blackhand Robbery.

Chicago, June 25.—Rudolph Berndt, 14 years of age, was killed by the police Wednesday night, following an attempt on his part to imitate "blackhand" methods and get money by means of threatening letters. He was shot on a lonely street corner just after he had seized a package supposed to contain $15,000.

J. E. Crossfeldt, a wealthy wholesale grocer, received a threatening letter, demanding that he take $15,000 in two packages to Desplines street and Grand avenue. Crossfeldt was threatened with death if he failed to comply.

Detectives watched with him on the appointed night. No one appeared. Threats by telephone followed and another meeting was appointed. Policemen were hidden, and as Crossfeldt approached the place a boy stepped out of a doorway and asked, "Is this Mr. Crossfeldt?" The grocer replied in the affirmative, and the boy snatched the package from his hand and fled. Detective Weinrich, who was across the street, fired two shots. One hit the boy and he fell fatally wounded. As he lay on the sidewalk he tried to shoot the detective. At the hospital he implicated his cousin, Alfred Hasse, 16 years old, in the plot.

Crossfeldt went to the hospital and the dying boy said: "Please Mr. Crossfeldt, forgive me, and kiss me before I die."
